U. S. Policy On War Jobs Is 'Work Or Fight'

Qualified Men Who Refuse Defense Jobs To Lose Privilege Of Draft Deferment

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The War Man Power Commission chairman, Paul V. McNutt, yesterday indicated that he might enforce his recently announced "labor freeze" policy by asking Selective Service boards to cancel occupational deferments of those workers who refused to accept "suitable employment" in war industries without reasonable cause.

The modified "work or fight" proposal was hinted at in a press release issued last night giving more details of the proposed labor freeze than were issued by a Commission spokesman on Wednesday.

With the exception of the proposal calling for the United States Employment Service to report to Selective Service System any qualified employe who arbitrarily refused to work in a war plant, the release outlined a policy generally milder and less ambitious than that previously indicated.

Scope Restricted

McNutt said the Man Power Commission would soon issue a program to prevent labor "pirating" but that the "freeze" element and the requirement for all hiring to be done through the USES would apply "initially only to a few critical occupations in a small number of war production areas where the situation has become particularly serious."

In addition, McNutt declared that "at the outset" it was probable that the use or approval of the USES in hiring would be required only in the case of an employer seeking to hire a worker who was already employed in an essential war industry. No restrictions would be placed on the hiring of workers not employed in essential armament occupations.

Exceptional Cases Expected

In the event an employer hired a worker of a designated critical skill or in a designated area contrary to commission policy and failed to correct the "pirating" practice, the USES would report the fact to the appropriate Federal agency for "action."

Fiancee of Dead Flier Asks Return Of Lost Insignia

If anyone has found a pair of silver pilot's wings such as are worn by flying officers of the United States Army Air Corps, he is asked to return them to Miss Charlotte Mitchell of 2922 Upton Street Northwest.

They mean more to her than would the piece of metal mean to any finder.

The wearer of the wings was a lieutenant—and bombardier—in the flying forces. He and Miss Mitchell, when last they met nine months ago, planned to be married on May 9. Three weeks before the wedding date he was killed.

The silver wings—which she is confident were lost on Nineteenth Street, between I and D Streets Northwest, and between 8:45 and 9 a. m. last Monday, were the only tangible link she had with the flier.

As Copper Substitute

Congress Asked to Release Treasury Silver to War Plants

By the Associated Press

Three key Federal officials asked Congress yesterday for authority to use silver bullion in the Treasury to replace copper in vital war industries, and the sentiment of silver State Congressmen to whom they appealed was that they should receive permission.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, made the request.

Their plan would permit the Treasury to make available to the Defense Plant Corporation, which Jones heads, for transmission to the WPB for allocation to industry, 53,000 tons of silver held in the Treasury as backing for silver certificates.

Nelson has said that about 39,000 tons of silver now in the Treasury could be used to replace copper needed in making butadiene from alcohol, a step in the production of synthetic rubber.

Title to the metal would remain in the Treasury, under the plan. Of 100,000 tons of silver held by that agency, 42,000 tons of "free" silver—not backing currency—already has been made available to industry for bus-bars in aluminum plants, saving approximately 47,000 tons of copper and leaving about 5000 tons of free silver in the Treasury.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, of the silver group, said he believed the plan to utilize the additional silver could be worked out.

What Morgenthau described as "a friendly truce" was reached when the Secretary agreed to continue the Treasury's silver buying policy for the duration of the emergency. Morgenthau has expressed personal opposition to the Silver Purchase Acts.

Nelson said that copper was needed vitally to prosecute the war, not only because of the "staggering amount" needed for ammunition, but because this country is supplying all the United Nations.

Speech Texts Privileged, Hoffman Says

Claims Immunity Of House Applies To Distributed Matter

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Representative Clare E. Hoffman yesterday advanced a new and broad theory of the immunity of Congressmen under the Constitution.

Hoffman spoke in the House shortly before he made his fourth appearance before the special grand jury on Axis agents, where he answered questions for an hour and 10 minutes. He came out of the grand jury room white lipped and silent.

The grand jurors are investigating seditious agencies which sold or gave away thousands of copies of Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech. These copies were part of 145,000 which Hoffman ordered from the Government Printing Office.

Keeps Jury Waiting

Hoffman claimed the right to speak on another point of "personal privilege" before he left for Judiciary Square, where he was 25 minutes late for his appointment to give evidence "in behalf of the United States."

For 40 minutes Hoffman extolled his own patriotism, impugned that of other persons and explained his claim that the "privilege" the Constitution gives to Congressmen makes them immune to grand jury inquiry about who handles the copies of their speeches which are turned out for them by the public printer.

Hoffman made his "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech in January, and when he had it reprinted gave it the title of "Don't Haul Down the Stars and Stripes," using "A Judas" for one of the subtitles.

A few weeks later, Attorney General Biddle directed Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., United States Navy and John T. M. Reddan to investigate the seditious press and its suspected Nazi financing, inspiration or control.

A number of editors and promoters of organizations were summoned here to give evidence.

Editor Distributed Speech

The Post discovered that one of these, Charles B. Hudson, who issues a defeatist, anti-British bulletin in Omaha, Nebr., had been mailing out copies of the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech which were printed in the Government Printing Office. Hudson mailed them in the same

Morgenthau Cites Seven 'Unpardonable' Cases of Concealment

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau last night announced a Treasury crackdown on excessive salaries, unearned bonuses or inflated expenses of some corporations having war contracts.

Before a night meeting of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Morgenthau cited seven instances of what he termed "particularly unpardonable attempts to escape wartime taxation."

He did not name the corporations, but declared it would have a "wholesome effect" to do so. He said he believed the vast majority of American corporations "are too patriotic even to consider such practices." Publication of the names of the offenders he left to the discretion of the committee.

Two Steps Taken

To reach cases of padding of expenses to escape taxes, Morgenthau said, the Treasury on its own authority has already taken two steps "to deal with the evils."

1. A speed-up in examination of tax returns and records of all corporations, beginning with those who have war contracts.

2. Disallowance of excessive expenditures that reduce taxes, by compelling corporations to include the amounts in taxable earnings, and taxing as well the income to the person receiving exorbitant amounts.

"It is our responsibility to see that by no form of trick or chicanery is any one taxpayer to escape his just share and thus to throw unjust burdens on others," he told the committee.

Morgenthau selected his seven

The personnel at Freedmen's Hospital is undergoing a reorganization under direction of the Federal Security Agency, it was learned from an authoritative source last night.

The reorganization is the result of a seven-month probe of the hospital by representatives of the FSA and General Accounting Office and eventually will involve replacement of two subordinate officials at the institution.

Biddle Rules Bridges Shall Be Deported

As a Communist, Australian Must Be Subversive, He Says; Appeal Is Possible

Attorney General Biddle yesterday ordered Harry Bridges, West Coast union leader, deported to Australia for having belonged to the Communist Party.

Biddle found that the Communists have sought to overthrow this Government by violence ever since the party was set up in 1919. His opinion did not mention the recent release from prison of America's No. 1 Communist, Earl Browder.

Browder was sentenced for perjury in applying for a passport to go to Russia. When commuting his sentence; President Roosevelt said he felt clemency would have a "tendency to promote national unity and to allay any feeling which may exist in some minds that the unusually long sentence in Browder's case was by way of penalty imposed on him because of his political views."

Not a Blanket Decision

Although the subject of the Attorney General's opinion was the Bridges deportation, its 32 pages expressed conclusions about a series of broad and bitterly disputed matters. These far transcended the narrow question of whether the fiery labor leader should be expelled from his adopted country.

"The Communist Party of the U. S. A.," said Biddle in his findings of fact, "from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States."

Moreover, said the Attorney General, the Communist Party now and ever since 1919 has printed, circulated, displayed and published propaganda to have the United States Government overthrown by force and violence.

C. I. O. Chiefs Denounce Move

C. I. O. leaders immediately denounced the Attorney General's order as "the first major victory of Hitler's spring offensive" and "a blow at national unity and morale necessary for victory."

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., said in a formal statement that Bridges and the C. I. O.'s maritime committee are giving the United Nations "the utmost in service" and that it would be "a grave dis-service to our country and to the cause of democratic nations fighting Hitlerism to undermine this contribution . . ."

Bridges, at San Francisco, termed the decision "outrageous." In a telegram to Donald M. Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, he said:

"I wish to assure you that despite the outrageous decision of Attorney General Biddle and numerous protests already pouring in from workers, I will do all possible to offset any effect it might have on

Reds Gain; Hitler Takes Over At Kharkov; High Nazis Jailed; Rommel Drives Near Tobruk

Tank Battle Churns Over Vast Reach Of Desert; British Discount Foe's Gains

(See Maps on Page 12.)

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, May 28.—British and Axis tanks, mobile artillery and planes fought and maneuvered over 1600 square miles of the war-scarred Libyan desert today, with Axis forces reaching an area 13 miles from Tobruk, the fortress that apparently is their immediate objective.

While many informed persons expressed belief this battle for armored superiority marked the opening of a general German offensive against Egypt and the Middle East, British military sources were unruffled by the nearness of the Nazis to Tobruk—the coastal strong point without which a real offensive cannot be prosecuted.

An authoritative British statement said the enemy's presence in the area of El Adem, 15 miles due south of Tobruk, did not constitute a "break-through," even though it was about 30 miles inside the defense zone held prior to the German drive's start on Tuesday night.

No Set Lines Exist

Because of the nature of the desert warfare, there was no defense line in the usual sense, the statement said, and the British objective was "the destruction of Axis armored forces rather than retention of any single bit of territory."

The battle is developing along the lines anticipated by the British, and they said there was no reason for dissatisfaction with results so far achieved, although the decisive moment had not yet been reached.

The Germans had comparatively little air support, perhaps because they were conserving planes for heavier blows at a more crucial time. There was a fierce tank battle raging in the region a little east of Bir Hacheim, and there was every indication that the Axis armored forces were taking a terrific pounding there.

This battle developed after the attacking force had split into two columns yesterday. One, after being repulsed at Bir Hacheim, about 50 miles south of the coast, bypassed that stronghold and carried the battle northeast of there in a wide movement.

Battle a Merry-Go-Round

British tanks were there, and the two forces came to grips in a merry-go-round battle.

The second column struck at British positions a little south of Ain el Gazala on the coast, at a point 40 miles due west of Tobruk. It suffered casualties and left the British

Brazil Joins War on Axis Subs With 'Shoot-on-Sight' Policy

The Submarine War

Brazil yesterday entered the war on Axis submarines attacking shipping in the Western Hemisphere. The Government announced Brazilian planes had attacked three Axis undersea craft, sinking one.

The U. S. Destroyer Blakeley, already damaged by one torpedo Monday, fought a pack of submarines while en route from Martinique to St. Lucia, British West Indies. Sinking of one or more of the enemy craft was reported.

Sinking of a United States merchantman off Cuba and a medium-sized Panamanian ship off the United States coast was announced by the Navy Department.

Mexico went to war with the Axis, though the formal declaration has not been issued, as a result of attacks on Mexican commercial vessels.

Brazil Reported to Have Captured Sub Supply Ship

Rio de Janeiro, May 28 (AP).—Brazilian airmen have sunk at least one out of three U-boats attacked off their home coasts, the air ministry announced tonight in its first communique of the war, and a few hours later an unconfirmed report from Recife said that a German submarine supply ship had been captured.

The seized ship was said to have been disguised as a Dutch vessel, and to have been carrying a large quantity of oil, torpedoes and other materials.

Confirmation of this report was unobtainable here.

Brazilian airmen were operating under newly disclosed "shoot on sight" orders in the antisubmarine offensive.

The attacks were understood to have been made last weekend, after a series of sinkings of Brazilian vessels by Axis submarines.

The air ministry said that Brazilian sailors were "being machine-gunned and cannonaded."

These newly disclosed attacks prompted a high source to declare Brazil's position is comparable to that of the prewar United States when orders were given by Wash-

Von Brauchitsch Reported Imprisoned For Refusing to Retake Command

Soviet advances on all important sectors of the Kharkov front were reported from Moscow last night, coincident with news from Berlin that Adolf Hitler had once more taken over "personal command" in the field, this time of strategic operations in the Kharkov area—apparently confirming Russian successes there.

Equally indicative of German reverses both on the battle front and at home were reports from diplomatic listening posts at Istanbul that Hitler previously had gone to Berlin to direct a new purge, in which Walther Darre, food supply minister; Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, former German army commander in chief, and 13 other high Nazi Party officials were said to have been imprisoned.

Shadow on Nazi Claims

The two developments cast considerable doubt on German propaganda claims of widespread victories in Russia.

News of Hitler's latest action came in an International News Service dispatch from London, which said:

"A German high command spokesman in Berlin announced:

"'The Fuehrer has taken personal direction of strategic operations on the Kharkov front. We look to his genius as a strategist to bring full victory.'"

British military circles pointed out that this announcement places all future military development squarely on Hitler's shoulders. They recalled that the last time Hitler was credited with supreme command, disaster threatened the German army.

There was no surprise in the news that Hitler had gone to the Eastern Front. His departure was reported several days ago, coincident with the report that he had received an ultimatum from his generals to abandon supreme command of the army.

Hitler, it was said, traveled to the Enemy Used Gas In Chekiang Drive, Chungking Asserts

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, May 28.—A great battle is raging for the Chekiang provincial capital of Kinhwa, but the Japanese invaders, although reinforced and attacking repeatedly, have been repulsed with thousands killed, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

The Chinese acknowledged that their own losses were heavy and reported local Japanese gains toward Kinhwa, prime objective of the Japanese army's big drive through the coastal province which might serve as a jumping off place for attacks against Japan, but they stated flatly that the city still was in Chinese hands tonight. This contradicted a Japanese claim that it had fallen this morning.

The high command specifically listed 3200 Japanese killed in four engagements in the vicinity of Kinhwa, and in addition told of many other battles in which the in-

Supply Lines Hit

American submarines have scored torpedo hits on a Japanese heavy cruiser, sunk two other enemy ships and probably sunk a third, the Navy announced yesterday.

The four attacks were made in Far Eastern waters, it was said, during extended operations directed at Japan's supply lines.

Navy communique No. 82 listed the damage done to Japanese sea power in these latest undersea raids as follows:

One large auxiliary ship sunk—presumably a tender or naval repair craft.

One medium-sized cargo ship sunk.

One medium-sized cargo ship severely damaged and probably sunk.

Duplication Doubted

While the extent of damage done to the enemy cruiser was not indicated in the communique, Navy men here declared that two or more torpedoes hitting such a war vessel should cripple it badly and probably put it out of action for some time.

In issuing the action report, naval officials said that as far as they can determine, the reports do not duplicate in any part the ships listed in a communique put out by Allied headquarters in Australia several days ago.

Our New Army

CHAPTER XXVI.

Chicago, May 28.—Hold your hat while the Army lets you in on one of the finest pieces of news in this war.

The Quartermaster Corps of the Army, generally believed to confine itself to counting beans, is in the business of producing the ships America so badly needs to supply its far-flung fighting forces. The Quartermasters are doing this in a sort of left-handed fashion, it is true, but doing it nevertheless.

Here at Chicago and in six other places throughout the United States the Quartermaster people are making ships by saving space in ships and that's just another version of Poor Richard's "a penny saved is a penny earned."

ANDREWS

The Quartermaster Corps is charged with the biggest single job in the Army: that of feeding and equipping and clothing its soldiers. Feeding alone is a monumental task, failure at which has crippled armies and lost wars before now.

In today's global war with its long and attenuated lines of supply, feeding and clothing the men at the front is a question of transport no less than of buying and cooking and tailoring. And because so much of the American Army's transport is over water, its success in battle may depend upon the thin line of ships reaching back home from its war zone bases.

America is building ships as fast as it knows how and while shipyards ring with the clamor of riveting hammers something is going on here in the heart of the Midwest which will make every new ship worth two ships when it finally takes the sea.

The Quartermaster Depot in southwest Chicago is charged

Two youthful prisoners who made a dramatic break from the Montgomery County (Md.) jail last Tuesday night after slugging the assistant warden were arrested last night by Washington police in the 3500 block of Warder Street Northwest.

They are James A. Anderson, 17, who was to go on trial Monday in Hagerstown, Md., on charges of raping a Glen Echo, Md., woman, and Andrew Foster, 21, who was serving 200 days for unauthorized use of an automobile. Clifton Yokley, who escaped with them, was arrested near his home at Germantown, Md., Wednesday night.

Capt. Robert Barrett, assistant chief of detectives here, said the men were traced to the Warder Street address through a tip furnished by William J. Strickland, a taxi driver, of 1006 B Street Southeast. Barrett said the driver told them the two prisoners hired his taxi at Seventh and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest last night and asked to be taken to Warder Street and Park Road Northwest.

Strickland became suspicious and watched the men enter the Warder Street house. He waited and a few minutes later they came out with two girls. He then notified police.

Barrett and five detectives stationed themselves in the house and

Six Czechs Slain as Nazis Begin Reprisal Killings in Prague

By the Associated Press

London, May 28.—The Gestapo executed six persons in Prague today in swift reprisal for yesterday's attack upon Reichsprotector Reinhard Heydrich and took other sweeping action to put the former Czech republic under a merciless iron heel.

Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo and perhaps the most feared man in Europe, was reported to have flown to Prague to take personal charge of inquiry and retaliation in connection with the attempt on the life of his chief aide.

The Prague radio announced tonight that Gen. Kurt Daluege, former Reichpolice chief and a veteran Storm Troop and Elite Guard leader, had been appointed protector of Bohemia and Moravia in succession to the wounded Heydrich.

The appointment was made by Hitler himself and at the same time Heydrich was named Gestapo chief for all German-occupied territory, the Prague radio said.

The six persons executed were accused of deliberately concealing a nonregistered person "known to be engaged in activities against the Reich." One was reported to be a boy of 17, and four were said to be members of a single family.

The quick executions were carried out, it was announced, under an order providing that the entire families of persons involved in the

Duke and Wallis To Visit Capital On War Mission

The British press service announced last night that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who arrived yesterday in Miami, Fla., will shortly visit Washington for a few days.

"They will be the guests of Lord and Lady Halifax at the British Embassy," it was stated.

The Windsors were quoted in Miami as saying their visit to this country is primarily to further "mutual defense of the United States and the Bahamas." The Duke is governor general of the Islands.

Crew of Houston Beaten With Ropes, Jap Admiral Says

American bluejackets of the U. S. S. Houston, lost since the Battle of Java Sea, are being brutally treated by their Japanese captors, the Office of Facts and Figures yesterday quoted a Japanese admiral as having announced in a radio broadcast.

The broadcaster was identified as Admiral Mitsuo Matsunaga, former commander of a Jap aircraft carrier, who was quoted by OFF as saying the Americans are forced to perform manual labor and are beaten with ropes if they lag. The admiral at the time of the broadcast was telling of an inspection trip by plane in "southern countries" under Japanese control.

Secretary of Navy Knox announced that 1000 "red-blooded Texans" will replace the sailors who manned the Houston when they take oath as a unit of the United States Navy in Houston, Tex., tomorrow.

Stimson Expects Jap Raids on U. S.

He Believes Foe Will Bomb West Coast To Save Face Over Our Attack on Tokyo

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of War Stimson predicted yesterday that Japan will retaliate for the American attack on Tokyo by sending bombers against our coasts and added that an air raid on Washington is "not wholly inconceivable."

The Army, he said at a press conference, believes that a "face-saving" return blow is "almost inevitable" and is alert and making active preparations to meet it.

Pacific Coast cities are the most likely targets of Japanese air attacks, but the East Coast is not immune to air raids the War Department chief stated.

Stimson made it plain at the same time that the high command's first aim is offensive action against the enemy rather than defense against the expected air raids. He declined to discuss the conferences now under way in London between ranking American and British military and naval leaders, but told of several steps being taken here toward this end.

"Whatever happens, we shan't relax our most effective defense, the preparation of a major offensive," the Army head declared.

Asked about the possibility of Japanese retaliation for the devastating April 18 raid on Tokyo and other cities of Japan led by Brig. Gen. James Doolittle, Stimson replied:

"The United States Government, through General Doolittle, administered a stinging, humiliating surprise blow when it bombed Tokyo. Anyone who knows Oriental psychology, as I have come to know it, knows that this raid meant a serious loss of face which can be wiped out only by a return blow, which, if possible, will be bigger than that which they suffered.

"Therefore we must get our house in order for what seems inevitable."

The War Secretary said that the armed services "are on the alert to the almost inevitable sequence of the Tokyo raid" and are doing everything possible to prepare for it.

"However, because of the length of this Nation's coast lines, there is no such thing as a perfect defense," he added. "We must prepare for the raiders that get across."

Amphibious Unit Organized

Discussing plans for building a great offensive American Army, the War Secretary made these announcements:

The Amphibious Training Command has been organized as a part of the Army Ground Forces to school troops in this important type of fighting necessary to any offensive against Japan.

Nine new Army divisions are to be organized by the end of August. Seven others of the 32 new motorized infantry divisions to be created this year are already being formed.

The Army still favors the drafting of 18 and 19-year-old youths into military service as strongly advocated last year. Stimson said that any action toward this end was "a matter for Congress."

Commander of the new amphibious training group is Col. Frank A. Keating, an Infantryman. His command will be temporarily located at Camp Edwards, Mass., but later will move to Florida, Stimson said.

The new divisions to be created, with their location and commanders, follow:

The Eighty-fifth, now being formed at Camp Shelby, Miss., under command of Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, of Staunton, Va., former assistant chief of staff.

To be set up in July—the Eightieth at Camp Forrest, Tenn., under Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Patch of Washington, D. C., brother of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, commanding American forces in New Caledonia; Eighty-eighth at Camp Gruber, Cookson Hills, Okla., under Maj. Gen. John E. Sloan; Eighty-ninth at Camp Carson, Colorado Springs, Colo., under Maj. Gen. William H. Gill of Unison, Va., and the Ninety-fifth at Camp Swift, Bastrop, Tex., under Maj. Gen. Harry L. Twaddle.

To be set up in August—Seventy-eighth at Camp Butner, Durham, N. C., under Brig. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, jr., a native of Washington and one-time Western High School cadet captain; Eighty-third at Camp Atterbury, Columbus, Ind., under Maj. Gen. John Millikin; Ninety-first at Camp White, Medford, Oreg., under Brig. Gen. Charles H. Gerhardt, and the Ninety-sixth at Camp Adair, Corvallis, Oreg., under Brig. Gen. J. L. Bradley.

U. S. Deemed Ready for Fray In Europe

London, May 28 (AP).—The United States is ready and able to send "men and materials on a large scale to a European battlefront," despite its commitments in Australia and India, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commander of the U. S. Army Service of Supply, declared here today.

In an interview in which he added that the necessary transport for American forces could be arranged in spite of the shipping shortage, General Somervell disclosed that one of his main jobs here was to effect a "standardization of British and American fighting equipment to the limit."

American troops, he explained in this connection, probably would be using British equipment on some scale, both in the air and afield.

He said American war production will reach its peak this fall.

"The whole armanent program is ahead of schedule—particularly tanks," he added.

He demurred at direct inquiries as to the possibility of an Allied invasion of the continent, remarking that his assignment was to arrange the details for any operation that may be undertaken."

During the day, the various U. S. Army general staff officers now here discussed with British military chiefs a program of collaboration.

Burma Retreat Saved India, Says Wavell

New Delhi, India, May 28 (AP).—The British have withdrawn more than four-fifths of their original Burmese army, leaving Burma to the Japanese and the monsoon, but having saved India from "what might have been a very dangerous situation," Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander for India and Burma, said today.

This retreat, in its final stages, was forced not by Japanese pressure but "was entirely a matter of supply and maintenance," Wavell said in a statement to the press.

"If we had a satisfactory road from India into Burma capable of standing up to the monsoon, there is no reason why we should not have continued to resist the enemy well forward into Burma once our troops over there had been extricatd from what was danger of encirclement in the forward position we held south of Shwebo.

"It is now possible to say that the main responsibility for any fresh attempt by the Japanese to advance rests with the Indian eastern army," he said.

Mexico Goes To War Against Axis Powers

By William D. Patterson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Mexico City, May 28.—Mexico went to war against the Axis today although the formal declaration by President Manuel Avila Camacho is not expected until Saturday.

The foreign ministry announced late in the crowded day that it had instructed all its representatives abroad to advise the governments to which they are accredited that Mexico considers herself now a belligerent ally of the 26 other United Nations.

The envoys were instructed that they should consider the war as having started when President Avila Camacho went before the special session of Congress and asked its authority to declare war. It will be the first declaration of war in Mexican history.

The President proposed in his war legislative program that Mexico's entry into the hostilities should be made retroactive to May 22, the day the cabinet voted to join the United Nations at war.

Within an hour after the President's address the Chamber of Deputies received the bills authorizing the President to declare war, govern by decree and suspend parts of the constitution.

Unanimous Accord Expected

A committee will report to the House tomorrow. Observers agreed enactment would be quick and probably unanimous. The Senate will then act and the President then may make his declaration.

Before the President, as he spoke today, were the Mexican flag and the battle flag the Twentieth Regiment of the Line, carried in the campaign of 1867, which ended the French attempt to set up a Mexican empire under the Hapsburg Maximilian.

"We recognize the limits of our military resources," the President said, "and we know that, given the enormity of the international masses now in battle, that our role in the present conflict will not consist in war outside the continent.

"But we shall respond to the aggression of our adversaries, collaborating energetically in safeguarding America."

His address was greeted alternately with grave silence and tumultuous shouts of "Viva Mexico!" and "Viva Avila Camacho!"

The attitude of Congress was at once revealed by Emilio Gutierrez Roldan, president of the Chamber of Deputies and presiding officer of the joint session, who said:

"We shall give all the support necessary to our government, regardless of sacrifices and privations, to make safe the honor of our fatherland."

Camacho Speaks 24 Minutes

Avila Camacho's address, carried throughout the nation of 20 million persons, lasted 24 minutes. More than 5000 soldiers, as well as sailors, marines, military cadets and police, lined the route the President took to and from the Chamber of Deputies.

He characterized recent Axis submarine attacks on two Mexican vessels—the tanker Petrero del Llano and the freighter Faja de Oro—as "outrages to our national sovereignty."

Cheers halted him when he declared that "the disloyal, sneaking and cowardly attacks" had brought his government to decide to "accept valiantly the realities" of the world situation and ask for a declaration of war against Germany, Italy and Japan.

In requesting suspension of constitutional guarantees and the granting of decree powers to the executive, Avila Camacho promised there would be no "unjust persecutions" and that the country's internal life would be altered only as needed to reinforce the spirit of national defense."

War Sidelights

Nazis Rush Dakar Base, Reds Say

London, May 28 (INS).—The authoritative Press Association today forwarded a Tass (Russian) News Agency report from Lisbon that the Germans are building a giant air base at Dakar, French West Africa, to service German air raiders for attacks on South America.

German engineers and technicians were said to be supervising construction of the Trans-Sahara Railway which will link Dakar with French North Africa.

It was further reported that Pierre Laval had ordered the governor of French West Africa to assign 70,000 residents to rush the construction of the railroad.

Asks India Arbitration

Bombay, May 28 (AP).—The Maharaja of Indore appealed to President Roosevelt today for joint American, Chinese and Russian arbitration in the dispute between India and Britain.

Pledging himself "without question to abide by any decision," the maharaja proposed that the three nations send two representatives each to India to study the problem and advance a solution.

The ruler of one of India's most important states, he described himself as "by the accident of birth a ruling prince," but "an internationalist and a democrat by conviction."

His wife is the former Miss Marguerite Lawler, of Fargo, N. Dak. She is now in New York.

London, May 28.—Overriding the recommendation of its executive committee, the British Labor Party voted at the final session of its forty-first annual conference today for the lifting of the ban on the Communist paper, The Daily Worker. Houston Crew Beaten, Admits Jap Admiral

Americans from the cruiser Houston are being forced by Japanese captors to do manual labor and, when laggard, are beaten with ropes, the Office of Facts and Figures yesterday quoted a Japanese admiral as having said in a broadcast.

The broadcast, by Admiral Mitsuo Matsunaga, who was identified as a former commander of an aircraft carrier, described treatment of prisoners "contrary to all international agreement and all humanity."

The admiral, OFF said, was telling of an inspection trip by plane from March 3 to March 30 in the "Southern Countries" under Japanese control. Special visits were made to the Philippines and the Netherlands East Indies. The text of the statement by Matsunaga was quoted by the OFF, as follows:

"What kind of work are American prisoners from the Houston engaged in in this sector? They are engaged in the work of filling the holes of the air fields. They are engaged on comparatively easy jobs. There are many who are suffering from hunger because they are not used to Japanese type food, and there are some who get very lazy because of the extreme heat.

"Those who do not do their part are beaten by Japanese guards, who are placed on watch on a ratio of about one guard for 100 prisoners. Those who are hard to handle are severely beaten with rope which is similar to rope used by sailors. Because of the pain, the lazy Americans continue the work with expressions of suffering on their faces."

A report by the State Department on May 23, most recent on the subject, said that on the basis of statements from neutral observers in places where investigation was permitted by the enemy, the Axis nations appeared to be abiding by the Geneva Convention on Treatment of Prisoners of War.

"However," the OFF said, "the State Department specifically explained that it had been impossible, because of the refusal of Japan to admit neutral observers, to obtain first-hand information concerning the treatment of prisoners of war held in the Philippines, in parts of occupied China, in Hongkong, Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies." The OFF further cautioned that the broadcast was intended for Japanese home consumption and "might have had a domestic propaganda purpose."

Houston's Crew to Be Replaced

Meanwhile here in Washington, Secretary Knox announced that 1000 "red blooded Texans" would replace the "brave men who manned the Cruiser Houston" when they take oath as a unit of the Navy in Houston, Tex., on Memorial Day.

The Navy Secretary paid tribute to the City of Houston and the State of Texas in a statement signalizing a recruiting campaign being conducted to provide a contingent to replace and "carry on" for the personnel of the Cruiser Houston, which has been missing since the battle of Java Sea.

Rear Admiral William A. Glassford, who commanded United States naval forces in the Southwest Pacific during the Java Sea battle, will conduct the induction ceremonies for the recruits at Houston Saturday.

Prudence Best Policy, Insists ArgentineChief

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, May 28.—Acting President Ramon S. Castillo told the opening session of Congress today that his "policy of prudence" in foreign relations had been Argentina's best course in contributing to continental solidarity "without compromising the permanent interests of the republic."

He said Argentina had shown her solidarity by according the United States the rights of a nonbelligerent.

The Radical party leaders in the lower house have demanded a diplomatic break with the Axis.

The Radicals also announced they would demand that the President revoke the state of siege which he decreed last December and which has stifled all press comment upon his foreign policy.

Castillo defended his foreign policy against the attacks of the Radical-Socialist coalition controlling the Chamber of Deputies by citing evidences of cooperation with the United States which "are more useful and more opportune than extreme measures."

Some political quarters speculated that if legislative opposition proves too strong, Castillo might indefinitely suspend Congress—which already has lost five months of the constitutional life because of his delay in fixing the opening date for the current session.

House to Take Up Oil Line Bill Monday

ELEANOR MAY NEILL, shown studying principal air routes on a map in her apartment, 1619 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, will change her name to Helen Aquila Airright, if she has her way. It's not that she dislikes her present name, but because she wants a career in aviation. Miss Neill said in United States District Court: "I have selected a proper name which will be appropriate to my career and render my success inevitable. Most people call me Helen," she added, "and Aquila Airright means 'the eagle, ruler of the air.'" A stenographer in the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordnance, Miss Neill has been studying flying since January and has 22 hours flying time to her credit.

Rules Are Suspended To Permit Vote After 2 Hours of Debate

House leaders yesterday gave the green light to legislation authorizing construction of a pipeline and a barge canal across Florida to meet partially the Eastern Seaboard's oil shortage.

The Mansfield oil pipeline and canal bill will be called up in the House on Monday under a suspension of rules to permit a vote after two hours of debate.

Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack slated action on the legislation as members of Congress from oil-producing States protested any move to extend Eastern Seaboard gasoline rationing to every State.

The Speaker told reporters he saw no need to ration gasoline in oil-producing sections "where they're wading knee-deep in gas . . . there may be good reasons but I haven't heard one that appeals to me." He said motorists where gas is plentiful will self-ration their rubber "because they know that when their tires are gone they'll get no more."

Hearing Suggested

A group of Senators, headed by Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, voted to ask Chairman Nelson of the War Production Board to hold hearings before making gasoline rationing Nation-wide.

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, meanwhile, told a press conference that so far as gasoline conservation was concerned there is no need to make gasoline rationing Nation-wide, but the step might become necessary to save rubber. Ickes said he had again asked for steel priorities to build a pipeline from Texas to New York, and will appear personally before WPA in behalf of the project.

The Manfield bill provides for the immediate construction of a pipeline across Florida for the transportation of petroleum from the vicinity of Port St. Joe on the Gulf Intercoastal Waterway to a point on the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway near Jacksonville, Fla.

Also authorized would be an all-inland barge channel 12 feet deep and 125 feet wide across Florida to connect the Atlantic and Gulf Intracoastal waterways, with enlargement of existing Gulf facilities.

Mansfield said it would take 15 months to complete the barge channel, but the pipeline could be completed in from 120 days to six months.

Relief for Sellers, Too

Rayburn said he thought the pipeline "will relieve both the East Coast and the people who want to sell crude oil and gas."

Other developments:

Elliott E. Simpson, New York independent rubber dealer, charged before the House Agriculture Committee that "a false rubber shortage" had been created by "the giant rubber monopolies for their own post-war protection."

Clarence R. Biting, president of the United States Sugar Corp., told the Senate Agriculture Committee that a Government official advised his company against proceeding with plans for production of synthetic rubber on the ground that the oil companies had the synthetic rubber program "in the bag."

Signs of Tenth Planet in Solar System Revealed

Princeton, N. J., May 28 (INS).—Possibility of the existence of a hitherto unknown planet, of the approximate size of the earth but proobably devoid of life, was revealed today by Prof. Henry Norris Russell, world-famed Princeton University astronomer.

A theory postulating the existence of a tenth, and so far undiscovered, major planet of the solar system has been advanced by Dr. R. S. Richardson, of the Mount Wilson Observatory at Pasadena, Calif., in a scientific paper whcih was critically read, and discussed, by Prof. Russell before it was submitted to the Astronomical Society of the Pacific for publication.

Prof. Russell said:

"Dr. Richardson's study showed that Halley's comet was delayed in its appearance in 1910 by some three days, and to explain that one can believe in the existence of a planet hitherto undetected."

Probers Told of 'Tremendous' Profits

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

The House Naval Committee heard testimony yesterday that the Mine Safety Appliances Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., had realized "tremendous" profits on millions of dollars of work for the Navy and had doubled the compensation of some of its executives.

Edmund Toland, committee counsel, reported that his investigators, in a study of the compnay's finances, had found that it made gross profits "ranging from a high of 122 per cent to a low of 38 per cent" in 1940 and 1941 in Navy contracts.

But George H. Deike, president of the company, in a statement placed in the committee's record, contended that Toland's figures failed to take taxes into account, and said that the company's annual net profits ranged from 7.44 to 9.49 per cent for the five-year period of 1937-41, inclusive.

Expanded Facilities

He informed the committee that the company had expanded its facilities greatly for defense production without Government financial assistance, and said that, during negotiations with the Navy on new pending contracts, it is furnishing material "upon the assumption that there will be no difficulty in arriving at a satisfactory price."

Hugh D. Glissen, a committee investigator, testified that the company's gross business in 1941 amounted to approximately 16 million dollars, that approximately half of that was with the Navy, and that the company would realize a net profit, before taxes, of about 45 per cent of cost of one group of Navy contracts which totaled approximately $4,500,000.

Through James Curran, a cost accountant for the company, Toland inserted in the record figures purporting to show that the cost of one $2,034,000 Navy contract with the Pittsburgh company was $1,054,649 and the cost of another for $899,731 was $417,229.

Salary Defended

John F. Beggy, vice president and secretary, declared that the increased compensation to company officials was paid because of the greatly increased work. He said, also, that the company paid its employes a 10 per cent incentive bonus, based upon individual effort, to stimulate production.

He denied flatly, however, a contention by Toland that the company obtained higher payments on royalty rights on its Government work than it did from private contracts, maintaining ther was no difference in the fees "on a percentage basis."

Save Rubber And Gasoline, Army Ordered

Cooperating with John Q. Public the Army has placed rigid restrictions on the use of rubber and gasoline to conserve those vital materials, the War Department reported last night.

From the heel of a soldier's shoe to the rubber band in the orderly room, the program overlooks no possibility of saving material. Rubber has been eliminated entirely from most Army items of equipment, it was said.

New rubber has been replaced by reclaimed rubber in tires where consistent with adequate, safe performance. Wheels have been standardized to reduce the number of tire sizes required. Schools have been set up to teach soldiers how to extract the last ounce of life from every pound of rubber. Motor vehicle drivers are required to take every conceivable measure to prolong the usefulness of their tires, from reducing speeds to keeping careful check on air pressures.

Standing Orders Issued

To enforce the conservation program, the War Department has issued the following standing orders: pool the use of motor transportation; use animal drawn vehicles where available or obtainable; eliminate all unnecessary trips; insist on utilizing maximum pay load; maintain power plants properly tuned up, brakes properly adjusted, wheels properly aligned, and tires properly inflated; prevent idling motors while waiting for loads or passengers; and enforce the principle that Army vehicles are not used to transport military personnel to or from homes.

The Army will economize further in the use of gasoline in areas where civilian consumption is now limited as a result of an order issued by Lieut. General Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces.

Except for elements of the Armored Force and Replacement Training Centers, Army vehicles operating in the "rationing areas" will be provided with gas on a basis comparable to the B-2 gas ration card issued to civilian operators.

D. C. Gas Consumption Down Sharply in April

Premonition of rationing and cut quotas for gas stations slashed the District's gas consumption for April 450,000 gallons below the March figure, District Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst announced last night.

The monthly sales of gas stations were only 12,609,000 gallons, or 11 per cent below March's 13,060,000 gallons. The consumption was 17 per cent below that of April, 1941.

Whitehurst said that the gas figures have been steadily declining since the first of the year.

Whether there will be sufficient fuel to keep motors running over the Memorial Day weekend here remained in doubt, Executive Director Harry R. Wainwright of the Gasoline Retailers of Washington said. Some dealers stated they had ample supplies on hand, while others were down to their last hose-full. Some motorists may have to drive around a bit, he declared, to find station operators who have full stocks, but there is nothing alarming in the situation.

Lewis Ousts Murray as Vice President Of U.M.W; Committee Backs His Action

By Philip G. Reed
International News Service Staff Writer

C. I. O. President Philip Murray yesterday was fired from the vice presidency in John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers that put both Murray and Lewis on the road to labor fame.

The 17-to-1 vote of the miners' policy committee ousting Murray virtually completed the break between the U. M. W. and the C. I. O.

It was expected that Lewis, himself, will either sever the last thread of formal relations or that the C. I. O. will expel its one-time mainstay at the annual convention next fall.

A possibility remained that Murray might take his case directly to the 600,000 members of the U. M. W. for a showdown with Lewis.

Told of the committee's action yesterday, Murray said:

"The justice or injustice of the action, itself, will eventually be passed on by the membership of the mine workers."

Close associates of Murray, however, said that the remark did not necessarily mean he meant to pave the way for an open clash with Lewis.

Following the vote in which the lone standout was Martin Wanger, of District 50, Lewis named John O'Leary of Pittsburgh, Pa., to Murray's position.

The committee still has to act on a proposed resolution by District 50 which accuses Murray of failing to halt a C. I. O. campaign of villification against the U. M. W. It's overwhelming approval was expected in the light of today's vote.

The dismissal of Murray was accomplished yesterday without dipping into the union dispute that has raged behind the scenes for months.

Lewis simply declared Murray's vice presidency vacant. He presumably acted on the miners' constitution which forbids officers holding more than one job at a time. Murray last week became president of the new United Steel Workers Union at a salary of $20,000 a year.

In an obvious attempt to forestall the ouster Murray on Wednesday had renounced his $18,000 U. M. W. salary and it was recalled that he had recently expressed the sentimental hope of retaining his post with the miners until the end of his term next April.

He also held that the camplaint of dual jobholding was invalid since Lewis had held three posts simultaneously for five years after founding the C. I. O.

Action still remains to be taken on the impasse between the C. I. O. and the U. M. W. over the $1,663,000 which the miners' claim is still owed them for advances to the C. I. O. in its infancy. Denying the claim, the C. I. O. is demanding $120,000 in per capita taxes which the U. M. W. stopped paying last February.

U. S. Planes Fire Jap Base in Burma

New Delhi, India, May 28 (AP).—United States Army heavy bombers violently attacked the Japanese-held Mingaladon airdrome, north of Rangoon, in Burma, last night, leaving fires visible 100 miles away, headquarters of the Tenth United States Air Force announced today.

Japanese night fighters and anti-aircraft were encountered but no American plane was seriously damaged and all returned safely.

Hoffman Claims House Immunity Covers Distribution of Speeches, but Returns to Jury Quiz

envelope with a seditious card. The Omaha man went to jail for refusing to tell the grand jury who printed the card.

The Post discovered that another witness, David Baxter, had mailed the Hoffman speech with a special bulletin of the secret Soci organization, which claims members in every State. Baxter says his outfit will seize control of a revolution which is coming soon in this country; the special bulletin warned his followers to accumulate guns and ammunition.

Other witnesses who had handled the Hoffman speech in large quantities were Hermann D. Kissenger, a Kansas City lawyer who was facing a charge of sedition a few months ago and formerly wrote for the Bund paper, Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter, and Gerald B. Winrod, Wichita, Kans., pro-Nazi whose monthly magazine, The Defender, is now under the scrutiny of postal officials.

Hoffman did not name any of these yesterday in the list he gave the House, after saying:

"I am giving herewith and inserting in the Record the names and addresses of those to whom that speech was sent in lots of 100 or more and the number which was sent to each."

May Be Inserted Later

Hoffman obtained leave to "revise and extend" his remarks and it may be that what finally appears in the Congressional Record will not be the same as what he actually said on the floor or as the manuscript which he sent to the press gallery.

Or it may be that the omission of the names of Hudson, Winrod, Baxter and the others was explained by another paragraph, handwritten in the text given the newspapers. This said:

"A statement showing the number of copies sent out in the flat unfranked, to whom sent and at whose request was previously given Mr. Maloney."

Evidently, Hoffman did not mean to make these names public, when he told the House he was disclosing the names of "all" who got more than 100 copies of the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech.

Having given what information he did about who the distributors of his speech were, Hoffman pointed out that the Constitution gives each House the right to punish its members for disorderly behavior and quoted:

"For any speech or debate in either House they (the members) shalll not be questioned in any other place."

This has long been taken by lawyers and courts to mean that Congressmen may say what they please on the floor without fear of being sued for libel or prosecuted for defamation. The utterances on the floor, the courts have said, may not be the subject of proceedings elsewhere.

Hoffman yesterday claimed that the "privilege" of Congressmen goes much farther.

Objects to Producing Files

"Notwithstanding these constitutional provisions," he said, "I shall be required to produce my private files and records" before the grand jury (which had asked for data about who got large quantities of "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech).

"Is the grand jury," asked Hoffman, "in asking me to produce a list of those to whom speeches were franked out in lots of 100 or more, attempting to challenge my right to frank out my congressional speeches? . . . Just what is Special Attorney Maloney attempting to do? He has never made any claim that I am a Nazi agent."

Later, Hoffman said:

"I deny the right of the Executive Department, through any of its agencies, to question the propriety of the remarks made by me on the floor of the House, or to require me to produce before any grand jury my records and files showing to whom speeches made on the floor of the House were sent . . .

"I deny the legal right of the grand jury to call for a list of those to whim I have sent copies of the speech, 'Don't Haul Down the Stars and Stripes' . . .

"I have nothing to conceal . . ."

Hoffman declared that he had testified three times and was leaving to do so again yesterday "even though I knew that I could not lawfully be subpenaed to appear before that jury while the House was in session."

Fish Was Directed to Talk

Representative Hamilton Fish had this idea several months ago and countered a summons with a point of "privilege" in the House, to testify any time a session was not actually being held. Eventually Fish testified.

Fish was summoned during the investigation of the Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck, whose Capitol Hill purchasing agent was George Hill, secretary of Fish. As it later turned out, it was Fish himself who first told Hill to cooperate with the German agent. Both Hill and Viereck are now in jail.

Called back before the grand jury yesterday was another henchman of Viereck—Prescott Dennett, who ran the Washington mailing center of the Nazi propaganda organization and franked out tons of material which Hill had printed for the Nazis by the Government Printing Office.

Dennett's appearance was the first indication that Viereck had a hand in the Nation-wide bloc of defeatist papers and organizations now being investigated.

Other witnesses yesterday were the coordinator of the defeatist press, H. Victor Broenstrepp, one of the lawyers for William Dudley Pelley, the Silver Shirter now facing sedition charges in Indianapolis, and Dr. Waltone Cole, a Unitarian minister in Boston, who led a campaign against the Charles E. Coughlin weekly, Social Justice, which was barred from the mails after Attorney General Biddle declared it was seditious and voiced the propaganda line of the Nazi radio.

Broenstrepp is due to be questioned further today.

Meanwhile, the trial of David Warren Ryder and Frederick Vincent Williams for criminal conspiracy and violating the Foreign Agents Act drew near its close before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. They are accused of plotting with Japanese propagandists.

The jurors may get the case today.

Post Reporter Excoriated By Hoffman in House

In a fiery 40-minute speech on the floor of the House, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican) of Michigan yesterday denounced Dillard Stokes, Post staff writer, as an "unscrupulous reporter" who had sought to link him with Nazi agents "by innuendo and insinuation."

Hoffman, leading pre-war isolationist and four times a witness before the special propaganda grand jury here, accused The Post, Stokes, Columnist Walter Winchell and the New Republic all of taking part in a smear campaign against him.

Singling out for an attack an article appearing in yesterday morning's Post reporting his scheduled appearance before the grand jurors yesterday, Hoffman cited this as illustrating a "discreditable, underhanded practice of deception."

He asserted that the article, written by Stokes, carried inferences that he had been persuaded by argument to testify, whereas he had actually appeared willingly and without controversey.

"Stokes," he charged, "by vilifying others, seeks to establish himself as a patriot, as an exposer of what he imagines are other people's frailties. The truth in no way cramps his style. Like Esau of old, who clothed himself in the raiment of Jacob, Stokes, printing what he calls news, which must gratify Hitler if he reads it, puts on an attitude mislabeled patriotism.

"He assumes the smirk of hypocrisy and, with a holier-than-thou attitude, he seeks the columns of his paper and in them pretends that he is serving his country by printing statements which carry the false impression that some of those who insist upon the preservation of our constitutional form of government, who are doing their utmost to maintain it, are doing something wrong."

"And Stokes," he continued, "who tries so hard to smirch me and who lies about me in the columns of The Post, had the gall to ask me yesterday to give him an outline of what I expected to say today on the floor. His methods would make a hog with 2-inch bristles on his back and both feet in the trough blush with shame."

Police Testify On Oden Plea Of Coercion

The second trial of Guy E. Oden, accused slayer of his 15-year-old sweetheart, went into a new phase late yesterday afternoon as two police officers began testimony for the Government in an attempt by the prosecution to prove the "voluntariness" of confessions obtained from the youthful former theater usher.

With the jury dismissed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts for the duration of this testimony, Edgar E. Scott and Marion B. Moore, of the Police Department, were scheduled to return to District Court today to relate the circumstances under which Oden is said to have confessed.

Victim's Mother Heard

Among yesterday's witnesses for the Government was Mrs. Emma C. Holloway, of 458 G Street Northwest, mother of the victim, Ellen Reed Cannon.

Recalling a day two weeks before the fatal shooting July 19, Mrs. Holloway said her daughter had returned from an errand in the company of Oden and that Ellen's lip was bruised and swollen.

As she led her daughter back into the house, Mrs. Holloway testified, Guy asked Ellen to meet him later. When the girl's mother told him not to see Ellen, Guy was said to have called out:

"If she don't see me, no one else will see her."

Neighbor Is Called

Other witnesses yesterday were Mrs. Elizabeth DeVous, a neighbor, who was present when the shooting occurred, but who asserted—contrary to claims by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin—that she was not struggling with Oden when the gun went off four times.

Also on the stand earlier in the day was Mrs. DeVous' son, Charles L.

MacArthur Day, June 13, Is Approved by Senate

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a joint resolution introduced by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Progressive) of Wisconsin designating June 13 as Gen. Douglas MacArthur Day.

Senator LaFollette assured Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky the celebration would not interfere with the observance of Flag Day on June 14. He said that June 13 was the day on which MacArthur was appointed to West Point.

Housing Chiefs Get Funds, No Priorities

Money Not Much Good When You Can't Get Nails, Lumber, Officials Say

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

When it comes to getting priorities for construction materials, Government housing agencies are in the same boat with private builders, they admitted yesterday—and it is difficult to tell how long the boat will keep moving.

The Federal Housing Authority, with 500 million new dollars in it's pocket, has instructed local offices to stop commitments until the next general order on construction is issued by the War Production Board. WPB officials said last night the order is "in the works."

The National Housing Agency is expecting 600 million dollars more, by request to Congress from the President, and its officials are not too pessimistic about the future of war housing. But Government leaders outside the housing agencies already are talking about compulsory billeting.

Entire States Out of Nails

Money to spend means nothing much when whole States run out of nails, a bathtub is beyond the realm of consideration, copper wire grows scarcer by the minute, and lumber is frozen.

As of May 1, the Federal Public Housing Authority had a war housing program that included 392,717 housing units in 1036 different projects. Of these, 114,892 are completed and 85,809 under construction. "No comment," is the answer FPHA gives when asked whether it expects the 192,016 other units ever to be started.

Locally, the problem is "peculiar to the District," but some light on the national situation is provided in the fact that not a single one of the much-publicized hotels for Government girls is opened—not even the Scott Hotel with its promised sundecks and telephones in each room. The Scotts had hoped to open it before Christmas, and then in February. Now the date is set at mid-June. Priorities have caused the delay.

The Government's Meridian Heights hotel at Sixteenth and Euclid Streets also may open in June. Nobody is guessing anymore about when the McLean Gardens will receive tenants, although housing officials cannot believe they will be left with such large projects incompleted.

When money finally is made available for girls' dormitories, the picture is expected to change more rapidly—for temporary structures have a better chance than permanent ones.

Although declining to relinquish its hope that some permanent housing will be permitted in areas where the structures can be absorbed when the war is over, the NHA said yesterday "duration dormitories" are what it is considering most.

They will be the style for single workers and for married couples without children. What to do with married couples with children is the "serious question."

Out of all the travel, however, is coming much new housing information. "We're learning you can make nice bathtubs out of tile," one housing official said yesterday, "and also that a cold closet can take the place of a refrigerator.

"We are putting coal stoves in many of our houses, and the kitchen has had to be remodelled to fit the new style coal cooking stove."

Plastic Piping

Although PBHA hasn't used it yet, because it hasn't been manufactured in sufficient quantities, plastic piping that will withstand heat and not burst when the water freezes in it may be in use next winter.

When shower baths became the regulation style for war housing, someone thought up a plan for sinking the floor and lining the space with tile. Architects grabbed the idea and the "sunken bath" may be found in many homes of tomorrow.

"A whole new functional type of architecture is coming out of this," the same official said between trips to the WPB.

British Woman Penal Expert Here to Study Juvenile Courts

A bright-eyed, gray-haired English woman who calls herself "just an odd-job person," arrived in Washington yesterday as part of an extended American tour to review her favorite stock in trade, juvenile courts.

MISS FRY

She is Margery Fry, British penal expert who left London five weeks ago on a small ship that required a fortnight for the hazardous transatlantic trip. Sent by her goverment to look at American courts, she flew directly from Halifax to New Orleans, at the invitation of the National Probation Association, to speak at a conference there.

In addition, she also spoke before the National Social Service Conference before retracing her steps north to Washington, where she is staying at the American University Women's Club.

Over the traditional 4 o'clock tea yesterday, Miss Fry said that she preferred to avoid comparisons between American and British penal systems because "I have been in this country such a short time that I really haven't seen enough."

But, of wartime London, she was most anxious to tell Americans how greatly appreciated their gifts of clothing and baby supplies have been by her countrymen.

"You see, we had foreign refugees for years before war actually was declared, so that most of our old clothing had been given away. For two years we have had so little materials that American bundles really were splendid; they arrived in excellent condition and answered a tremendous need.

"After one big blitz, American gifts were handed out along the roadways out of London, so that those who had been evacuated could be fitted out as they went."

Miss Fry's varied career includes a term as governor of the British Broadcasting System, principal of Somerville College, Oxford, from 1926 to 1931, and secretary to the Howard League for Penal Reform. In addition, she did relief work in France during World War I.

Army Surgeons Close 4-Day Meeting Here on Procedure

A special four-day meeting of the Army's medical "high command" was concluded here yesterday, with an eloquent silence prevailing as to the discussions.

"The Army surgeons discussed administrative problems and uniformity of procedure," is all that the War Department made public on

In attendance were the chief surgeons of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Armies and chief medical officers of all nine corps areas. Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Surgeon General, presided over the sessions, the extraordinary conference.

The Army Medical Corps is in the midst of the greatest recruiting campaign in its history, with the responsibility of serving troops on far-flung fronts extending from Iceland to Australia.

The following medical chiefs, all colonels, participated in the conference:

Raymond W. Bliss, First Army, Fort Jay, N. Y.; Frank H. Dixon, Second Army, Memphis, Tenn.; John Dibble, Third Army, San Antonio, Tex.; Condon C. McCormick, Fourth Army, San Francisco.

Also the following medical officers of the nine corps areas, listed in order: Cols. John J. Reddy, Charles M. Walson, Robert C. McDonald, Sanford W. French, Edgar C. Jones, Joseph E. Bastion, Herbert C. Gibner, W. Lee Hart and Harry R. Beery.

Prof. Berglund. One-Time U. S. Expert, Dies at 66

Prof. Abraham Berglund, 66, noted authority on commerce and transportation and a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia for 20 years, died in Charlottesville yesterday after an illness of several days.

Professor Berglund was born in San Francisco on December 10, 1875. He was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1904 and received his Ph. D. from Columbia University in 1907. In the same year, he married Edna M. Glass and accepted an instructorship at the Washington State College, remaining there until 1909.

Mrs. Appleton is survived by her husband and infant daughter, Sue Ann Appleton.

Senate Returns Housing Bill To Conference

The Senate yesterday voted to insist upon its restoration of $13,500,000 to the District war housing appropriation, and ordered the bill sent back to conference.

Trobule was foreshadowed for the measure when it is finally reported from conference, however, when Minority Leader McNary (Republican) of Oregon, served notice that he would demand a detailed explanation of hte housing situation in Metropolitan Washington.

McNary suggested during a brief debate that the Government was "asking too many people to come to Washington—more than we need"—and declared that some reckoning should be made of the decentralization program.

He said that he would not object to recommitting the bill, since this amounted only to a "matter of procedure," but said that facts on both housing and employment would have to be presented when the time came for a final vote on the appropriation.

The House and Senate are currently at odds over the question of whether funds should be given to the National Housing Agency with which to build family dwellings for war workers here.

The House voted a total emergency fund of $29,500,000—12 million for the erection of dormitory units to house single workers and $17,500,000 for related public works. It rejected completely a request for 18 million dollars for family housing.

The Senate, however, restored $13,500,000 of this cut, and neither version could be agreed upon at a preliminary conference last week.

Yesterday's action by the Senate, taken at the request of Senator MvKellar, chairman of the Senate conferees, came after the House had voted to insist on the lower figure at the recommendaton of its conferees.

The bill is now slated for further joint sessions, until one chamber's version or a compromise acceptable to both groups can be decided upon.

Driver Guilty Of Manslaughter In Girl's Death

Horace W. Trice of 2726 Thirtieth Street Northeast, was convicted yesterday of manslaughter in the death of Doris Stalling in an auto accident at Upper Marlboro two weeks ago.

Although defense attorneys waged a six-hour battle to absolve the Washington Red Cross worker of blame in the accident, the jury deliberated only 12 minutes before bringing in the guilty verdict. He will be sentenced today by Judge Charles Marlbury.

Trice was arrested May 16 after his car swerved and crashed through the iron fence surrounding the county courthouse, crushing to death the 16-year-old high school girl from Meadows.

Because of the threat of violence by a crowd of citizens at the time of the accident, police took extra precautions at the trial and sprinkled the courtroom with extra officers.

U. S.-Owned Slum Houses To Be Razed

Action by the U. S. Public Buildings Administration in demolishing or cleaning up District slum properties owned by the Federal Government was commended in the House yesterday by Representative George A. Paddock (Republican) of Illinois.

Paddock placed in the record an exchange of letters with Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds concerning substandard houses originally purchased by the Government with the intention of tearing them down and using the sites for public structures.

He disclosed that he had sent to the PBA a list of nine such U. S.-owned buildings, five of which were in dangerous or unsanitary condition. Reynolds' reply revealed that an investigation of the properties had been made, and that steps were now being taken to demolish the offending structures or repair unsafe and unsanitary ones.

One building, at 459 G Place Northwest, already has been torn down, he added.

Reynolds said that one of the steps being taken to correct slum conditions was a revision of the lease form used by the Federal authorities to prevent speculators from taking the property and reletting the rooms. A result of this practice, he said, has often been overcrowding and a neglect of sanitary standards.

He pointed out, however, that in many cases unsanitary conditions result from "abuses by the tenants."

"The debris and filth which gathers in the backyards of these properties," he said, "is due to the action of the occupants, who just have no conception of the meaning of cleanliness and sanitation."

Screen and Stage Join Hands for Fun at Capitol

"Ship Ahoy" a Lively Music-Dance-Comedy Hit, Starring Powell, Skelton, Dorsey Band; Henry Youngman Star of "Fun, Inc." Revue

EXCEPT THAT THE LATTERLY UBIQUITOUS foreign agent again raises his hackneyed head on the screen in the interest of a little tensity, the new bill at Loew's Capitol Theater is dedicated exclusively to fun.

Even the sinister espionage motif fails to take "Ship Ahoy" out of the lively and amusing song-dance-and-comedy category. It is fashioned to stand primarily as a salute to Eleanor Powell's incomparable dancing, the antic flippancies of Red Skelton and Bert Lahr and the lilting rhythms of Tommy Dorsey and His Orchestra and vocalists. Personally sparked by Henry Youngman, a singing comic of abundant talents, Gene Ford's stage revue ebulliently lives up to its title of "Fun, Inc." Altogether, there isn't a dull moment on stage or screen. Neither is there one that amounts to a row of pins beyond the immediate purpose of complete and enlivening entertainment, on the lighter musical side. But in these days, that's enough.

"Ship Ahoy" concerns itself with a troupe of night club performers who embark for a ship cafe engagement off the coast of Puerto Rico. Tommy Dorsey's Orchestra is the mainstay of the group, with Eleanor Powell the Tallulah Winters, who dances its audiences into storms of enthusiasm. Through a clever ruse, this Miss Winters is duped into the delivery of a priceless magnetic mine to certain persons at her destination. She undertakes the errand in the belief that she is doing her country a vital service. What she really is doing is playing directly into the hands of the enemy.

Then there are Red Skelton, as Merton K. Kibble, author of daredevil stories—he dictates them three at a time—and Bert Lahr, the "Skip" Owens who serves in the capacity of nursemaid to the hypochondriac-writer. They also are cruising to Puerto Rico on the orders of the irritated doctor, thoroughly fed up with Mr. Kibble's imaginary ailments.

So Mr. Kibble and Miss Winters fall more or less in love en route; Mr. Owens is deeply smitten by the charms of Fran Evans, Miss Winters' constant companion, and the bona fide secret service men hover about the edges of the goings-on to make sure that somebody gets hurt. Somebody does, after the suitcase containing the fabulous mine has been exchanged for one which doesn't, cleverly recovered, indiscriminately tossed around and eventually rendered null and void, as far as any harm to the United States Navy is concerned. The climax and denouement of the picture are as weak as water—but that doesn't much matter, either.

Never has Eleanor Powell danced more brilliantly for the cameras and sound track than in this gossamer charade. Her cape dance is an amazingly precise and perfect creation and the tap number, in which she stops the music and steps out a message in Morse code that traps the foreign plotters, is as important to the plot of the play as it is as an exposition of rhythmic skill. Always good for endless laughs on their individual accounts, Red Skelton and Bert Lahr, together, comprise an infallible comedy team. Mr. Skelton has himself a time, trying to lift the suitcase through which the mine has magnetized itself to the deck and he and Lahr, in concert, are hilarious in their alpine adventures in the wine cellar of the ship. Tommy Dorsey's Orchestra is at its melodious best and profits by the unusual circumstance of having a logical and essential place in the development of the story, such as it is. John Emery and Moroni Olsen are effective as the master minds of the alien agents.

Mr. Youngman Makes a Hit

As master of ceremonies and headliner of "Fun, Inc.," Henry Youngman rolled yesterday's first audience out into the aisles, wrapped it up neatly and walked off with it in his pocket. He is a jester of the first order, a comedy violinist at least one cut above Jack Benny and a singer who puts a robust voice to most ridiculous uses. The fellow was sure-fire. So were the Radio Aces. These three remarkable young singing comedians devote themselves less to songs than to comprehensive and convulsing song-stories, to which they bring a versatility that no other trio known to these eyes and ears can match. Allen and Kent, the modern dance team that introduces the elderly buck-and-wing stars of an earlier day, virtually stopped the show and Cabot and Dresden, in their sensational "ballroom" routines were not far behind in volume of applause. The Rhythm Rockets, in and out throughout the bill, were in absolutely top form.

The enthusiasm of the capacity house carried over to the permanent Capitol features. Sam Jack Kaufman's "Four Moods" overture was thunderously received, as it deserved, what with the fine solo work of Burrus Williams, at the piano; Lynn Allison, in the vocals, and the others singled out for a display of individual artistry. And Art Brown's organ-ized community sing like to have blown the roof off the theater. The Fox Movietone News, featuring Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Brig. Gen. Jimmie Doolittle, who will be succeeded by later stars in the new issue, completed a bill of exceptionally high spirit.

And Bring to the Table Hot!

TOMMY DORSEY, ELEANOR POWELL, RED SKELTON whipping up a piping order of something or other to be served in "Ship Ahoy," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical, in which they are currently costarred on the screen at Loew's Capitol

'My Gal Sal,' at Loew's Palace, Is Top Hayworth-Mature Hit

By Mary Harris

Like a thick and luscious segment of the apple pie days of the turn of the century comes "My Gal Sal," studded with nostalgic tunes, bristling with ruffles and ruches, rich with the Broadway color of the time.

The life story of Paul Dresser, which is the story of "My Gal Sal," is also an annal of general American life of his time, when American boys were marching off to liberate Cuba; when the Indian medicine doctor was a formidable rival of both the corner druggist and the local "op'ry house"; when the "family entrance" was an adjunct to all reputable barrooms and, most importantly to the composer of "My Gal Sal," a song hit lasted for a full year.

Rita Hayworth and Victor Mature easily top all their previous work in this picture. Both show a light and pleasing facility in that difficult feat of showmanship known as "selling a song." Also the sultry-eyed Victor and red-headed Rita (she's redhaired in this picture, anyway), are uncommonly convincing in their amorous passages.

Some agonizing drama marks the early moments of the picture. Imagine Victor Mature being tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a rail! But this horror happens, is only alleviated when he wakes up to find a kind-hearted siren from a medicine show bending over him. He joins the medicine show, annexes the siren and life is wonderful, until Dresser-Mature is mercilessly laughed at by a passing New York stage star. She would be Rita Hayworth, as Sally Elliott, later the inspiration of "My Gal Sal."

Dresser is portrayed as a bit on the love-'em-and-leave-'em side and, stung by the laughter of the girl from the Main Drag, he leaves the medicine show and his sweetheart, heads for Broadway. The main thread of the story takes up from here with success coming too fast and too easily for the young song writer. He meets Sally Elliott again. But no sooner does he feel sure of Sally than he is dazzled by the "high society" of the time, takes out in pursuit of a countess, whose moral standing doesn't seem to be quite so incontestable as her position in the Almanach de Gotha. What seems to have been planned as the big laugh moment of the picture occurs along here when Sally cuts up all of Dresser's trousers to keep him from keeping an engagement with the countess. He retaliates by tearing her gowns to shreds. It's all good fun, if a bit on the simplified clowning pattern.

Jimmy Gleason stands out as a song publisher. But when did Gleason ever fail to stand out? John Sutton is personable as Sally's producer and admirer. Phil Silvers and Walter Catlett appear briefly as ingratiating crooks and someone named John Kelly plays John L. Sullivan right up to the hilt.

Jimmy Stewart, now a lieutenant, sponsors the best war-selling picture to date, "Winning Your Wings." It's both inspirational and informative. Pete Smith's newest short is about some insanely daring young folks who do sea-sledding right up into the air—behind a blimp.

Broadway Glossary

New York, May 28.

HEROISM: When Brig. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle set out on his bombing mission to Tokyo, all the men who flew in those planes were men who had volunteered for the special job . . . At the last moment, it was decided that the load might be too heavy. To provide for more bombs, and more gas, it was decided to reduce the plane crews. One man from each plane had to be left behind. They drew lots, and the ones who drew the marked pieces of paper had to forego the flight. Those men, however, refused to accept the drawing, and insisted upon going to Tokyo with Doolittle. They were so insistent that they all had to be "detained."

BEN BERNIE

MEMORY: When Eli Shenbrun took the witness stand this week, to clear Madeline Webb of any complicity in the Hotel Sutton murder, he testified that he had been a singer with the orchestras of Hal Kemp, Ben Bernie and Vincent Lopez. Bernie was in Reuben's last night and was asked whether he remembered Shenbrun . . . "The police officials asked me that, and I told them I couldn't remember anything about the singers who used to work for me," Bernie confessed. "I told them 'How do you expect me to remember Shenbrun when I don't even remember anything about another singer who used to work with me—Rudy Vallee.'"

PROGRESS: The Archduke Franz Josef was in the Stork Club celebrating his new status. He originally had been classified by his draft board as 4-C, the status given to enemy aliens. Now he's been reclassified as 3-A. "That is a great improvement; it's progress," said the delighted archduke. And he's making further progress. Soon he'll be in the Coast Guard.

ENTERPRISE: Eva LaGallienne last week returned to Broadway in "Uncle Harry." This play was directed by Lem Ward, who had directed "One-third of a Nation" and "Brooklyn, U. S. A." . . . It was Ward who induced Miss LeGallienne to emerge from her retirement. He brought the script to the star's home in Connecticut. "You're a tradition in the theater. Yet I've never seen you on the stage," he began. "I'm too old, never to have seen you; and you're too young to be a tradition."

ERROR: Fannie Hurst was the guest speaker this week at the Fort Tryon Community Center. The chairman introduced her as "the famous author of 'Cimarron'" . . . "Edna Ferber wrote 'Cimarron,'" Miss Hurst corrected. "But people often make that mistake" . . . After the lecture, a questioner asked: "Tell us—how did it feel to be married to Billy Rose?" . . . "That was another Fannie—Fannie Brice," Miss Hurst replied. "I never mind those mistakes—as long as I'm never mistaken for Fannie Ward."

CHATTER: Henry Ford will have a new public relations counselor—Steve Hanningan . . . King Carol expects to test American reaction to his residency here by making a two-week visit to Detroit next month . . . S. P. Eagle's "Tales of Manhattan" will rank among the season's top grosses . . . Vera Korene, star of the Comedie Francaise, will arrive in N. Y. from Rio this week. She'll perform here, in French . . . Joe E. Lewis will be the guest star for the Copacabana's closing night . . . Fefe's Monte Carlo reopens June 3 . . . The American Theater Wing will start a War Production Training drive on Monday. The 27,000 members of the amusement industry here will be polled as to their talents for factory work.

Raft and O'Brien Star in Keith's 'Broadway'

By Ernest L. Schier

In a melancholy mood and deep in nostalgia, Universal has done a remake of the old Broadway stage hit, which bears the name of that busy little street. Unfortunately, however, the picture has none of the color and excitement of the "roaring '20s" around which the story is built.

After an interesting opening, which promises better things, the story bogs down into just another gangster picture. George Raft, playing himself, the successful movie star, returns to New York and recalls the early days of his career, the days of prohibition and gun fights, of Texas Guinan and sugar daddies. The story which purports to trace the career of Raft, the dancer, to Raft, the actor, is in itself a fictitious one.

In this particular fable he plays a night club dancer, who, on the eve of his big break, gets mixed up in a gangland killing. Pat O'Brien plays the detective, a character patterned after Johnny Broderick, the police department's nemesis of crooks and gunmen. In an attempt to keep his dream of a great dance career from breaking up, Raft is framed by the gangleader who is trying to lure the feminine half of the dance team away. He makes his break from the police just in time to get mixed up in another killing. When it looks as if things are really getting bad for him (as though one murder were not enough) our very paternal detective steps in and lists the killing as a suicide even though he and the audience both know the guilty party.

It's all very confusing and somehow the "good old days" seem a little out of place with times as they are.

In addition to the two stars of the picture, some fine character actors are seen. Brod Crawford gives a convincing performance as the underworld chief and S. Z. Sakall, as a humorous night club proprietor; Marjorie Rambeau, Janet Blair, the dance partner; Anne Gwynne, Marie Wilson and Edward Brophy all turn in competent performances.

In addition to the feature, R. K. O.-Keith's is showing a short entitled "Winning Your Wings," in which Lieut. James Stewart explains and demonstrates how your eligibles may join the Army Air Corps.

HEDDA HOPPER

'Gentleman Flynn!'

Hollywood, Calif., May 28. Sports Expert Ed Cochrane, who's here from Chicago doing the technical end of "Gentleman Jim Corbett," says Errol Flynn is going to surprise you in that picture. He has a mighty good left hand, boxed in Australia, and was in the Olympics in 1928. And Corbett has always been an idol of his. Well, Corbett's always been an idol of mine, too. I knew him, and I hope Ed's right.

ERROL FLYNN

If and when Arleen Whelan and Alexander D'Arcy divorce, it's assumed that Arleen will marry Don Briggs, radio announcer.

Could it be love? Edmund O'Brien says, "Michele Morgan is the only girl with a spiritual quality I've met in Hollywood."

Who said it can't happen here? Nigel Bruce and his wife celebrated their twenty-first wedding anniversary.

Valentino's widow, Natacha Rambova, arrives here soon. And did you know she'd become famous for her horoscopes? She'll visit Ganna Walska, at Santa Barbara.

'Twould be strange indeed if Jane Bryan, Mrs. Justin Dart, returned to the screen, 'cause after she married the rich Mr. Dart, she wanted no part of movieland. I hear he's not so rich any more, which may be the reason she's considering an offer from Warners.

Ann Lee, who's always had a desire to do a shower bath sequence in a picture, got close to it in Republic's "Flying Tigers." Her voice is heard from the bath.

Army Will Parade Its Best Tomorrow

The Army's hardest-hitting weapons and its hardened fighting men will swing through the Capitol Grounds and pass west along Constitution Avenue to Seventeenth Street Northwest tomorrow in celebration of Memorial Day.

A tremendous crowd is expected to view this first grand-scale military spectacle held in the Capital since the United States entered the war—a parade emphasizing the most modern of fighting equipment rather than the traditional Memorial Day march of veterans and other patriotic groups.

Following is a synopsis of the day's activities here:

Georgetown University Law School Memorial Day exercises, 10 a. m., at the law library, Georgetown Law School Building, Sixth and E Streets Northwest; speakers, Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, U. S. N., director, Office of Procurement and Materials, Navy Department; Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent and professor of jurisprudence, Georgetown University Law School.

Welles to Speak at 1:30

An address by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, 1:30 p. m., at the Arlington National Cemetery Amphitheater. The address will follow the placing of wreaths on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb by patriotic groups.

James G. Yaden, president of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, will preside at the Arlington Amphitheater program. Jan Peerce, Metropolitan Opera Company soloist, will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The Camp Lee Glee Club will sing.

The Military Parade will begin at 4 p. m., at New Jersey Avenue and B Street Southeast, move north across the Capitol grounds, then west on Constitution Avenue and past the reviewing stand at Sixteenth Street and Constitution, and to Seventeenth Street, to disband.

The participating Army units will include infantry, field artillery, cavalry, coast artillery, Army air forces and the armored force, a War Department announcement said yesterday. Included will be service branches' equipment—road and bridge building equipment used by the corps of engineers; personnel and weapon carriers used by the quartermaster corps, and exhibits from the ordnance department.

The naval forces will be represented by a company of bluejackets and a battalion of coastguardsmen. A battalion of marines will come from Quantico.

An infantry combat team of one regiment, a battalion of field artillery, 105-mm. howitzer and attached battery of field artillery, 155-mm. howitzer, will, for the most part, be composed of men whose homes are in adjacent Virginia, the War Department said. There will be one full company of Negro troops who, as civilians, lived in Washington.

General Lewis to be Marshal

The parade marshal will be Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Washington military district. He will be preceded with his staff by a detail of Metropolitan Motorcycle Police and followed by a cavalry escort from Fort Myer. In the marshal's party will be six automobiles carrying representatives of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation of Patriotic Organizations.

Opposite the reviewing stand, where Government, military, naval and diplomatic representatives will view the parade, will be seats for 7500 spectators. The Army Emergency Relief will receive 40 per cent of proceeds from the sale of the seats.

Participating units and personnel and their order of march follows:

Platoon of Metropolitan Motorcycle Police.

Grand Marshal, Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general, Military District of Washington, and staff.

Cavalry escort, Fort Myer.

"WAR BOND DAY" will be celebrated today and on every Friday of the coming year at the Lafayette Hotel. The generous and patriotic Lafayette management will not sell war bonds to its patrons on these days, but is pledging " per cent of its gross receipts on Fridays to the purchase of war bonds. If you dine or have cocktails at the Lafayette, half of your bill will be transformed into war bonds. Credit for this fine American move is due to Jeff Ford, president of the Lafayette.

Say lingering goodbys to Layton Bailey and his band in the Metronome Room tonight and tomorrow. They're leaving Washington to go on a theater tour.

TERRACE AND ROOF OPENINGS. With both the Shoreham Terrace and Starlight Roof opening tonight, night spotters are faced with an embarrassment of riches. This is the first time that the Shoreham and Starlight have staged summer openings on the same evening. At the Shoreham you'll find the Barnee-Lowe Orchestra playing with its customary suave sparkle, also a sleek floor revue. The Starlight Roof opening will be signalized by the appearance of Arthur Warren's Orchestra, new to Washington, but highly favored at Florida's swank Boca Raton Country Club, where it's played for the last three winters.

BANDSMEN'S SPECIALTIES. Enric Madriguera, now at Del Rio, has set a record for luring our town into Pan-Am stepping. Folks who didn't dare to try a mild tango are now rumba-ing like mad to Madriguera rhythm . . . Les Brown, whose band is currently giving on such cyclones as "Joltin' Joe Di Maggio," in the Victory Room, says frankly that he's out for the collegiate trade. Les is also appreciated by the great Artie Shaw, who celebrated his birthday in the Victory Room the other night . . . The Lounge Riviera's Pete Macias has been a favorite with junior Washington society for ever so long. You'll find all the debbies and their beaus at Lounge Riviera when the clock strikes 12.

The entire Rainbow Room Band will be digging divots at Beaver Dam Country Club on Sunday. They're to be the guests of golf pro Al Houghton

MAYFAIR STRIPTEUSE. Dorothy Hutcheson, who pianos at Mayfair, is also an actress and a bit of a romp. She recently attired herself as a scrub woman, played the piano with one finger for 485 Engineers at the University of Maryland. Then she began to doff her clothes while playing "boogie-woogie." Cruellest part of the whole thing was that she wore an evening gown under the scrub-lady getup.

IMAGINE THESE! The Hi Hat's Jack Neal is playing "Deep in the Heart of Texas" in the Russian, Chinese, Dutch and Pan American manners . . . The Mayflower Lounge management vows that their page boy, Billie, anounces names in perfect pitch with the orchestra . . . The Casino Royal's Jeannette Hackett Girls are doing a number they call "New Faces" and have huge comic masks painted on their bustles! . . . The Merry-Land serves a monogrammed cocktail with a big red "M" floating on top . . . Collins and Arlo of the Neptune Room, are using their piano and novachord to give such a realistic imitation of a circus calliope that you'll think you're under the big top . . . Jimmy Nichols of Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, has been a farmer, house painter and music professor. He's also a papa and a grad of Ithaca Music Conservatory . . . Dancer Douglas of the Lotus, is wearing a foundation! But lest he visits us with fire in his eye, we'd better explain that it's only because he has a wrenched ligament.

Next week's star event looms up dazzlingly as the appearance of the Adrian Rollini Trio at El Patio.

CELEBRITIES CLUSTER in La Salle du Bois as thickly as strawberries in a shortcake. Recent distinguished visitors included Lady Norman Stone, Lord Forbes, who'll soon return to the Egyptian front; Edgar Hoover with Harvey Firestone, jr., Columnist Ernie Pyle with Archibald MacLeish.

ARTHUR WARREN, brilliant young bandsman, whose orchestra will open at the Starlight Roof tonight

EXPLOSIVES AND DELICACIES. Pianist Oscar Heintze of Restaurant "823," says that the most violent concoction he ever tasted was the "Stanislauer," a Polish cocktail . . . Those of your who think of borsch as the only Russian soup should try "Solainka Muscovite' at the Balalaika. It's a thick and luscious vegetable soup . . . Last summer, Burt's Trans-Lux was serving a "Summertime Stinger," and we suppose they still do. It's a beauteous pale green creation with fruit floating in its depths like submarines . . . Do you like ravioli with a grand homemade savor? You'll find it at the Copocabana. Also the Chianti that properly goes with it . . . We hear that Representative and Mrs. Adolph Sabath dine every Thursday at Restaurant "400," always choose the chicken en casserole, family style with matzoth balls, that's the day's specialty . . . And that Capt. Frank Hoover, who manages all the Government cafeterias, ordered an extra pot of New England baked beans when he recently dined at the Burlington . . . The hors d'oeuvres in the Pall Mall Room look like a chef's dream, taste even better . . . They're brought out a "dive bomber cocktail" at Lee's Stables. It's powered with applejack . . . And the time has rolled around again for those "King Cole juleps" in the King Cole Room. They're frozen in a silver cup.

You can have your rumbas and sambas say the dancing crowds at Kavakos Grill. They'll take their country dances with plenty of Paul Jones tossed in. Kavakos country dances, staged on Sunday afternoons, are as much fun to watch as to step.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Shakeup Seen In Freedmen's Hospital Probe

Reorganization of personnel at Freedmen's Hospital has been started under the direction of the Federal Security Agency and eventually will involve replacement of two subordinate officials at the institution, it was learned from an authoritative source last night.

The reorganization is the result of a seven-month investigation of Freedmen's by representatives of the General Accounting Office and the FSA.

Watson B. Miller, assistant Federal Security Administrator, yesterday confirmed reports, current on Capitol Hill for several days, that a "canvass of the management of the affairs" of the hospital was conducted "concurrently" by the two agencies.

Miller exonerated Dr. T. Edward Jones, the hospital's director in chief, of "personal or official dishonesty" in connection with certain irregularities which the investigation disclosed.

Dr. Jones Paid Tribute

Dr. Jones was paid tribute by the assistant administrator as a "distinguished surgeon." For some time, Dr. Jones had been considering retiring after 41 years of "outstanding" Government service, Miller said.

During the last World War, Miller recalled, Dr. Jones served overseas and twice received decorations for valor. On one occasion, the then young Army surgeon exposed himself to direct enemy machine-gun fire to attend a wounded soldier.

In confirming reports on the hospital investigation, Miller emphasized that, while certain irregularities were found to exist, the investigators found "that patients received epert medical treatment and adequate provisions were made for their care."

"These important services are considered to be in excellent shape," Miller stated.

The General Accounting Office's report of its investigations will be made public, it was announced last night by Representative Hare (Democrat) of South Carolina, as soon as the Appropriations Subcommittee of which he is chairman is satisfied that proper corrective measures have been taken.

A copy of the GAO report was submitted to the subcommittee when it called for an explanation of why, in the last fiscal year, only 10 per cent of Freedmen's patients paid for hospitalization while the balance was caried on hospital records as indigent. The subcommittee's curiosity was aroused by disclosure that of the 7537 patients treated at Freedmen's in the 1941 fiscal year, for example, only 802 paid for services.

"Shocking" Irregularities

The GAO, said Hare when asked about the investigation, "found evidence of many administrative irregularities, some of which are rather shocking, particularly where it was shown that some of the internes or possibly outside physicians collected fees from patients sufficient to cover professional services and hospitalization charges and then had the patients entered in hospital records as indigents, making no payment whatsoever to the hospital."

Hare declared that his subcommittee, soon to report to the House the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill which normally provides for Freedmen's, an FSA institution, has no jurisdiction over the hospital administration, but does "have the authority to refuse appropriations and the chances are this will be done until the subcommittee is satisfied that any funds appropriated will be legally spent."

Miller confirmed reports that the investigators also found evidence of "some so-called 'ambulance-chasing' and 'fee-splitting,' largely due to activities of certain physicians and attorneys outside the hospital."

"Where any connection between these persons and individuals within the hospital has been discovered, dismissals of subordinate employes have followed," he said.

Miller explained how the fee-splitting worked. Persons hurt in accidents, he said, whose injuries were found in the hospital to be minor, were approached, after their discharge, by "certain attorneys" who arranged for a second examination, outside the hospital. At the second examination, the patient was made to believe he had suffered more serious injuries which might be the basis for legal action.

"This would produce fees for all participating and without doubt some part of these recoveries have been shared by subordinate hospital employes without the knowledge of the director-in-chief," Miller said.

From other sources it was learned that the report charges physicians with "choking fees," a practice by which injured or ill persons are required to pay as a condition of receiving medical attention.

The report also accuses hospital nurses of writing liquor prescriptions for patients and cites collection of hospital fees by internes who failed to deposit them with the hospital.

Charges of liquor shortages also are made, including the disappearance of 12 quarts on the day of a physicians' meeting in New York, and the "loss" of 18 quarts "in transit"—but officials maintained that an alleged shortage of 239½ quarts was due to a GAO error in computation.

Removing A Menace

One source of disease, filth, crime and immorality is about to be cleared up in Washington through the efforts of a single Congressman, the Washington Housing Association and The Post. Hereafter the Government will not rent slum properties to racketeers who pack them with a family in each room. Government-owned houses that are not fit for human occupancy will be demolished, and those which can be used temporarily with a minimum standard of decency will be repaired before being rented.

Dilapidated houses taken over by the Government to make way for public buildings have long been a headache to the Washington Housing Association. Many of these shacks have been rented for years before being demolished. It has been impossible to enforce sanitary laws against them because they are property of the Government. The Post exposed the situation through data supplied by the Housing Association. Shocked that such conditions could exist in the Capital, Representative Paddock took the matter up with the Public Buildings Administration. It is in reply to Mr. Paddock's appeal for the removal of this health menace that Commissioner W. E. Reynolds has outlined a new policy for the operation of slum properties owned by the Government.

In addition to putting the best of these houses into livable condition, the PBA proposes to revise its leases so as to prevent the crowding of 12 or 14 persons into a single small house with only an outdoor toilet. In the future, Commissioner Reynolds also agrees, it will be necessary for the PBA to select its tenants with greater care. This policy will not, of course, convert hovels into modernized low-rent dwellings. But it will eliminate some of the worst violations of the city's meager housing standards. The next logical step is, of course, the compulsory cleaning up or demolition of foul shacks in private ownership, which are a much greater menace to public health because they are so much more numerous.

Vichy And Rome

There is probably far more than meets the eye to the renewed Italian clamor for Nice and Corsica at this time. For to all intents and purposes Italy today is an occupied country. Mussolini can do precious little without the consent and approval of his German lord and master. Had it suited Hitler's interests Italy would have been allowed to occupy Nice and Corsica at the time the Franco-German and Franco-Italian armistice went into effect. But Hitler had his own ideas as to what should be done with France, and these did not include permission for the junior member of the Axis to come into possession of any great amount of French loot.

Now Hitler has his own nominee running the show at Vichy. But in the last six weeks Pierre Laval—for all his collaborationist leanings—has been unable to do Hitler's full bidding. He has been unable to do so because the French people, hungry, disarmed and seemingly helpless as they are, are so overwhelmingly opposed to any action that would align France against the United Nations that any attempt to force such action might lead to great bloodshed. Then Hitler, who has no surplus of troops at this time, would be forced to occupy the Vichy-governed part of France. This the Fuehrer is obviously anxious to avoid.

Is it possible that, after using Laval as a bludgeon in an attempt to browbeat Italy into providing more troops for the Eastern Front, he is now using Mussolini as a bludgeon to extract from Laval concessions which Laval has so far hesitated to grant? The question is very much in order. If the French hate the Nazis, they despise the Fascists, whose stab-in-the-back at the moment of France's collapse they will never forget and can never forgive. Let us keep that in mind in thinking of Hitler's problem. By taking a strong stand against Mussolini's demands for Nice and Corsica—demands which the Duce is ostentatiously backing up by a concentration of Italian troops along the French border—Laval might secure sufficient popularity with the French people to enable him to weather the storm likely to arise from a capitulation to Hitler without question. An intricate game of blackmail and double-dealing is being played in Berlin, Vichy and Rome.

Rubber Confusion

The indictment against those who are responsible for our rubber unpreparedness had already been written before the Truman Committee made its report. There is enough blame, as we have said many times, to go around. The usefulness of the Truman report at this time lies in the recommendations for present action. For action is what is desperately needed, and on three fronts. There is the problem of making the facts known to the people so that they will cooperate in conserving rubber. Then a plan for the mobilization of unused rubber is required. And, finally, the administration of the rubber program, which seems to have been dispersed among several agencies, needs to be centralized.

The Truman Committee issued its report just at the time that the White House seemed to be encouraging hope of the early realization of the synthetic rubber program. Nothing in the Truman Committee's report gives any ground for such optimism. The committee explored every possibility which would assure the general public "at least a little rubber within the next two years." The exploration seems to have been exceedingly, even uniquely, thorough. Yet the conclusion is that "no reasonable assurance has been found anywhere that individuals will have rubber for private, as distinct from defense, uses within the next three years." By defense uses the committee had in mind the war needs of our allies of the United Nations as well as of this country.

There should be no further delay in letting the public know this conclusion and the facts in support of it. For there has been a noticeable slackening in public willingness to conserve rubber. Cars once put away have been brought out again. The doubling-up campaign has fallen off. These results are the natural consequences of the public disputations on the rubber situation on the part of officials and other persons in authority. The people are now inclined to think that the picture is better than it really is. Actually the situation is extremely grim, though the job of reeducating the public as to its grimness may now have been made impossible by official contradictions.

For this reason alone the proposal by Mr. Nelson to make gasoline rationing Nation-wide is inevitable. That will save rubber for the maintenance of necessary civilian transport till the distant time that the shortage has been overcome. There was always the argument of equality of treatment in favor of rationing on a national scale, anyway. Now the rubber shortage adds a clinching argument, though even the stark account by the Truman Committee does not warrant the threat—evidently uttered by those who believe in sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice—that the conservation of rubber may require the commandeering of passenger cars on the roads.

What the Truman Committee shows, on the contrary, is that there is a great deal of scrap awaiting collection and reclamation. Estimates of the amount available vary widely, but the minimum estimate is as much as 500,000 tons. That is a valuable reserve for immediate war, though not civilian purposes. For, even though rubber reclaimed from scrap is not a 100 per cent substitute for crude rubber, many products required by the armed forces today can be and should be made entirely from scrap. Moreover, the used and unused cars in dealers' hands make up a sizable stockpile. There are three million of them throughout the country. In storage they are a wasting asset, for automobile tires wear out almost as fast when held in reserve as spare tires.

The final problem concerns the centralization of authority over rubber. In getting the facts about rubber the Truman Committee had to go to seven agencies. All manner of unfortunate consequences have flowed from this dispersion of authority. Waste of effort is only one of them. Just as serious is that the heads of all the agencies concerned seemed to have taken it upon themselves to talk authoritatively about rubber prospects or the lack of them, though few of them can have an overall picture. A coordinator for rubber has been appointed in the person of Mr. Arthur Newhall, but Mr. Newhall's authority will remain limited so long as so many agencies share the responsibility of carrying out the rubber program.

In Libya

Since the bitter fighting of last winter when, for the second time in a year, the British swept across Cyrenaica only to be driven back once again by the Axis forces under Field Marshal Rommel, the Libyan theater has been one of the quietest of the war. At least that was true until last Tuesday when, suddenly, four German columns began to press forward against the British lines.

The principal immediate objective of this drive appears to be Tobruk. Without Tobruk the Axis forces would be seriously handicapped in any offensive operations against the Suez Canal. It is thus in the Tobruk region that Marshal Rommel has centered his main forces, and it is there he has achieved his principal gains. The lateral thrusts that accompanied the drive on Tobruk may have been deliberately intended as diversionary efforts to fool the British and get them to divide their forces.

It is not yet clear whether Rommel's latest thrust to the east is only a reconnaissance in force or the beginning of a large-scale offensive aimed at driving the British out of Libya and then pushing on to the Suez Canal. That will depend, in part, on the degree of resistance he meets. His foray of last April quickly spent itself, and so may this latest Axis offensive in North Africa. The British as well as the Germans have been adding to their strength. Planes and tanks from the United States and from Great Britain have been pouring into Cairo.

Yet, with so many other theaters to reinforce, the Allies may not have been able to do as much for Egypt and Libya as is necessary to repel Rommel. Besides, Rommel has proved himself one of the ablest generals produced by the war. It can be anticipated that he will take advantage of every opportunity to forge ahead or at least to keep the British busy enough in North Africa to dissipate any temptation on their part to create a second land front in Europe.

Lewis Vs. Murray

John L. Lewis appears to have timed his open break with Philip Murray so as to produce a maximum of embarrassment for the present head of the C. I. O. It is difficult for Mr. Murray to fight back effectively, because he is committed to cooperation with the Government in winning the war, and labor battles certainly would not be conducive to that end. Mr. Lewis has no such scruples about aiding the national effort, as his coal strike last year indicated. Events of the last week suggest that he is deliberately fomenting disunion within the ranks of the C. I. O. when the national interest calls for unity and cooperation. It does not follow, however, that this strategy will work to Mr. Lewis' advantage.

The objective observer will find no basic cause for a split between Mr. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the C. I. O. But Mr. Lewis appears determined to bring about such a split at all cost. Only a few years ago he came to a parting of the ways with the American Federation of Labor largely because he could not dominate it. Now he finds it impossible to tolerate the leadership of his "former friend" and trusted associate of long standing. So he is again splitting the segment of organized labor which he previously caused to be split from the parent body. In these circumstances it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that any organization harboring Mr. Lewis and refusing to submit to his domination is likely to be a victim of fission.

While the emergence of hostile labor factions at this time is particularly deplorable, the Lewis-Murray fight may well be the forerunner of greater unity in the ranks of labor as a whole. Last week the A. F. of L. renewed its bid to the C. I. O. for a resumption of peace negotiations. With Mr. Lewis out of the picture, the chance of reuniting the two central organizations will certainly be improved. In most instances, too, the progress of recent years in organizing previously unorganized workers should minimize the antagonism between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. Where rival unions are operating in the same field, the unscrambling process would be very difficult. But with a will to achieve unity, even that baffling problem could be solved.

In any event, Mr. Lewis has given Mr. Murray his cue to resume peace conferences with the A. F. of L. The war has brought the two great labor organizations a greater community of interest than they had before, and they may well discover that it is easier for them to work together than for either to work with John L. Lewis.

MAN'S VOICE SINGING

Here is the relentless urgency of birth,
From warmth to cold, from darkness
To the first crashing of light against the blinded eyes.
The first beneficent gift of milk to the round, seeking mouth
Flows as the song flows.
The spring and summer of life are in the sounds
That come from the deep throat.
The first fruit of the body is here . . .
The sadness of seed-giving
And the tenderness of the whole man.

All the bones and the net of the flesh
Are bound together through the long days
To come to this singing.
And the twilight is here,
Behind the full sum of the song,
The twilight over the proud head,
The first dimming of delight,
Subtle as the music's echoing
When the song is done.

Less Garbage, Please

We can all help Uncle Sam win the war, by conserving food. "Eat what you buy and whittle down your waste."

It is estimated that from 5 to 20 pounds of nourishing food is thrown in the family garbage pail each week. This does not include the tons of waste from hotels and restaurants. Enough food is wasted every day in America, to feed the low countries of Europe. Fifty years ago the average American family never heard of a garbage pail. What was left of the family dinner, if any, was warmed over or fed to the chickens. When Grandma, prepared a pot-o-beans, those days, it was beans to the finish. Municipalities today spend huge sums to collect garbage, while millions of Federal funds have been spent to erect incinerator plants throughout the country.

Food is the most important factor in our whole war effort. When the devastated countries of Europe, are stripped of their cattle, grain and foodstuffs and famine and starvation stalk across the land, it will then become our mission to feed these stricken countries. But should we fail, we may awaken some morning, goose-stepping to the tune of "The Watch on the Rhine" and pay homage to the Japanese.

Camden Race Track

Given till June 6 to complete the Camden Race Track, the boys seem to be trying to nose ahead of the War Production Board on the home stretch—working night and day with a large force of men who should be in war production and using gas, steel, lumber, etc.

Once operating, many in the shipyards, etc., will find they need time off for illness or otherwise; and use more gas and rubber. Camden voted against the track, but private interests seem more important than public even while the public tries to win a war.

Silent Parades

The other day a parade went by—a parade of boys in uniform. It was a very grim parade. No one cheered. No one smiled. A half-hearted band played one tune and then lapsed into silence. The boys marched to the accompaniment of silence and the rumble of new tanks. Some of the boys were stoop-shouldered. Some of them looked bewildered. All of them looked too young.

Where's the music to send our boys off singing?

Have you ever been "marching as to war . . .," with nothing but silence to keep you going? Do you think it's easy to keep in step without the drums' roll, do you think it's easy to keep heart and head high without a tune to swing along to?

Where's the music to drown out the awful silence?

Proverbs said, long ago, that without vision, the people perish. Can any claim to have vision—or practicality, either, for that matter—and yet push music aside as a pleasant diversion for peacetime, push music aside as one of the "arts" having little use in wartime? Where does that put "Yankee Doodle," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Over There" and "The Star-Spangled Banner?"

That perishing business is no joke. Any more than winning the war without music is a joke.

Better take a look at some of those silent parades, Congress. Better think of Chaplain Col. E. Raymond Attebery and his assistants, working in night and day shifts, to send out music from a collection of 300 records to the music-starved Allied field troops somewhere in Australia.

Where's the music for us everywhere in America? AMY LEE.

Banish Worry

The best definition on people who believe rumors comes from the newly appointed director of the division of propaganda research of the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety, Robert H. Knapp of Harvard University.

Mr. Knapp defines it this way: "In the main, people who believe rumors are those who have a lot of worries and anxieties, those who have a feeling of insecurity. Emotional stability or instability is usually the determining factor."

Here Mr. Knapp is absolutely right. Recently the writer listened to rumors spoken by a person whose name he does not know but whose face is familiar. During a discussion which followed in which the writer endeavored to point out the danger in spreading rumors, the innocent rumor monger confessed that he wasn't too sure of his employment status and he was a bit critical of the promotional system since he believed he had been discriminated against when one who had not had seniority was advanced ahead of him.

The writer feels sure this victim of a troubled soul took the former's advice, since when we last saw him on the street he was walking with his head up and his chin out and there was pep in his stride which had been lacking before.

And this advice was this: "Ignore your troubles by giving twice the amount of effort to your job and cooperate more than you have ever done before with the men around you and with your superiors. Hard work, and a long walk after sundown, scares hell out of the imps that perplex the soul. Give 'em hell for the hell they're caused you."

There is a victory slogan for all of us to adopt for the duration: "If you want to be happy, work like hell."

Author Moore

I was much interested in a letter printed in last Sunday's Post signed by one Otto Torney Simon, giving the pleasing story of Ethelbert Nevin and his writing of the "Rosary."

In the latter part of his letter Mr. Simon says "it recalls a similar case of the Rev. Mr. Morehouse, who aspired to be a poet, and not until he wrote "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" did he gain fame.

The point of this letter is it was Clement Clark Moore, LL. D., who wrote the much-cherished verses.

Prior to coming to Washington I was a member of St. Peter's Parish, West Twentieth Street, New York City. The church was built on land given by Dr. Moore. It was finished in 1838.

I have before me an article about old St. Peter's which appeared last summer in the Episcopal Church magazine, Forth. One of the illustrations shows a tablet erected to the memory of Dr. Moore. Born in New York City, 1779; died in Newport, R. I., 1843. This tablet is rededicated every Christmas eve by the church school children, who decorate it with holly and greens.

Can We Trust The Isolationists?

Mark Sullivan in The Washington Post of May 25 says that Congressmen's pre-war views are of no importance, that "to bring them up now would be a threat to national unity" and to oppose all isolationists "might kindle serious acrimony among the people."

We do not think it acrimonious to point out the extreme unfitness for office of the Congressmen who fought all defense measures for the past two years. By their words and their votes they proved their total lack of understanding of the dangers that menaced us. They tried in every way to keep us weak and defenseless. They shouted "war-monger" and "dictator" at those who warned of the perils ahead. And now that war has come to us, now that their former stand is completely discredited, now that they are shown for dupes or worse, they ask us to forget the past and reelect them to the office they are unworthy to hold.

Mr. Sullivan says that a Congressman's pre-war views are of no importance. He is wrong. The are of the utmost importance. How shall we judge of a man's ability except by his record? Let us examine the record of the isolationists.

(1). The isolationists fought the Selective Service Act bitterly. They called it Mr. Roosevelt's plot to make himself a dictator. They called it an insult to the American people. They said we should wait until we were at war before we built up a large Army. That is the first the isolationists would like us to forget.

(2). The isolationists fought the Lease-Lend Act. They said it was a dictatorship bill, and a plot to get us into war. The said that Mr. Roosevelt was as bad as Hitler and Stalin. They tried to keep us from sending goods to England and repairing British ships in our yards. That is the second thing they would like us to forget.

(3. The isolationists opposed aid to Russia. They introduced amendments into the lease-lend appropriations bill to that effect. They said they hated Hitler but they hated Stalin worse. That is the third thing they would like us to forget.

(4). The isolationists fought the draft extension. They said it was treachery to our boys. They said, six months before Pearl Harbor, that we were in no danger of attack. They said that a large Army in peacetime would lead to dictatorship. That is the fourth thing they would like us to forget.

(5). The isolationists fought the amendment to the Neutrality Act enabling us to deliever war materials to the nations fighting fascism. Three weeks before Japan attacked us they were saying that we were safe behind our ocean barriers. That is the fifth thing they would like us to forget.

But these are things the American people should not forget if they value their freedom and independence. And the American people must not forget that we must participate in the making of the peace. Can we trust these isolationists who have been so mistaken about world affairs? The answer is no.

Bullfight

Scarcely had the stench of Tangier, Morocco, left our nostrils with the steamer headed toward the mighty Pillars of Hercules when the whole ship became engrossed in an all-absorbing topic—the bullfight at Algeciras. Such mild anticipation as visiting the bazaars, clustering in the shadow of the mighty fortress, was for the time forgotten.

They all knew Bizet's opera—the magnetic, picturesque Carmen flouting the pleadings of Don Jose, the dash and skill of the splendid Escamillo, etc. They were opera-conscious rather than bullfight-conscious.

The fight was scheduled for 5 o'clock and the crowd was impatient, fretting at the delay of the president of the fight, who was late in arriving. Vendors moved through the crowd, disposing of their wares very much in the same way as our American boys sell pop and popcorn at baseball games. But these viands consisted of shrimp, dried beef, ripe olives and figs, flanked on all sides by bottles of wine. The senoritas, with accustomed cinema etiquette, draped their bright shawls over the railings of their boxes—not overlooking a by-play of coquetry behind large fans.

From somewhere a trumpet shrilled forth loudly. Music struck up. The gates swung open, and in marched a dozen toreadors. Then came two picadors on horses. All were garbed in brilliant suits, set off jauntily with gold and silver lace. After a gracious salute to the President's box they sprang into the ring amid the eager applause of the Spaniards.

For a moment the audience was hushed, holding its breath, waiting for something to happen. A trumpet blast cut the air sharply, and no sooner had the sound died down when a gate swung open and a huge, dark bull dashed into the arena. The brilliant cape of the nearest toreador challenged the animal as he blinked hesitatingly in the unaccustomed sunlight. The flaunting color angered him and he charged the toreador with a bellow that made the spine of every American creep.

For the important fights held on fete days in the large cities of Spain, only choice animals are used. They are raised on the big plains of Andalusia and only the exceptional, quick and courageous animal is chosen for the ring. These unpampered animals roam wild and free with their herds until placed in boxes on top of railway coaches which carry them to the darkened stalls of the bull ring. To the casual observer the holes in the top of the stall would be for conveying air to the animal. Not at all. These holes are for the express purpose of prodding him with a spear or sharpened stick until he is enraged into a blind fury, when the poor beast will attack the first thing he sees with sudden ferocity.

This animal on that hot July day had been going through this maddening torture and the first object that met his view was the toreador with the flashing cape. Rush upon rush he made with futile lunges while his antagonist evaded his sharp horns with the alertness and step of a graceful dancer. The bull was visibly tired. His eyes showed a haunted, bewildered look as he shot past the American party with great flecks of foam dripping from his body. His every rush seemed futile. At one time an unsuppressed murmur swept through the American party when it looked as if the bull might be gaining a little advantage—but no, the beast never had half a chance against the merciless spears of his tormentors.

It would have been too tame—too devoid of dash and daring—to dispatch the bull without prolonged torture; consequently two picadors on well-padded horses rode into the arena to put a little more punch in the performance. These animals were without the mettle and spirit that one would naturally expect of horses in a bull ring, but just two old, worn-out plugs, brought forth to die ingloriously in mortal combat.

Lance after lance had pierced the hide of the bull until his body was red with blood, and still he would not down. It was harrowing. Just as a matador plunged a lance into the neck of the tortured animal, from which the blood spurted in streams, with new-born ferocity the toro wheeled and ripped a long gash in the uncovered flank of the horse.

The American contingent was growing somewhat unsteady by this time. Two of our women had become faint and had to be removed from the scene. When the horses had been taken out a banderillo with two wooden darts, barbed with steel, waved tormentingly at the bull, which in sheer madness charged. With a facility born of practice, the man stepped aside lightly and buried the lance deep in the beast's shoulder. Loud huzzahs from the Spanish side. The band began a strain of soft music. It was agonizing torture, and the Americans who had stayed it out drew a sigh of relief when the brave matador stepped gallantly forward and ended the toro's misery.

The Spanish spectators arose to their feet and the amphitheater rang with their cheers. Then came the mules with jingling bells to drag out the dead toro from Andalusia. The matador swaggered about the ring, graciously receiving the plaudits of his countrymen.

All of the American women and nearly all of the men by this time had lost their enthusiasm for bullfights and left the amphitheater, but the Spanish had just begun to get interested and saw the seventh animal slaughtered before calling it a day. JOHN FRANCIS STEELE.

Test For Congress

By Ernest Lindley

Leaders Invited To England

AN INTERESTING TEST has come up for the congressional leaders of both parties. An informal invitation has been tendered for a bipartisan delegation to go to England to meet and exchange views with members of the British Parliament. The invitation was tendered by or through Sir Howard D'Egville, secretary of the United Kingdom branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association. The latter is an association of members of the parliamentary bodies within the British empire. It provides an exchange of information and views and puts out at least two publications for legislators within the British empire.

LINDLEY

Obviously, it is a sensible idea to bring members of Congress into closer touch with the parliamentary bodies of our Allies, and especially with the British Parliament. It has been discussed and advocated for some time by a few farsighted members of Congress.

Unfortunately, some of the first published accounts of the invitation to visit Great Britain gave the proposed meeting a more formal character than is intended. It is not intended to negotiate anything or to bring about any commitments, actual or implied, official or personal. The Britishers who suggested the meeting are quite familiar with the differences between their government, where the government is a committee of Parliament, and our separation of the executive and legislative powers. They have talked only of a get-acquainted meeting, inspired by the inescapable fact that the United States and Great Britain are comrades in a war in which the life of both is at stake, and also by the feeling that, when they have won the victory, they must continue to work together to preserve the peace.

UNDOUBTEDLY those who suggested the meeting would like to have leading legislators of both parties in this country see at first hand what the British are doing about the war. But they are also interested in exchanging ideas, especially ideas about the future. Peace must be prepared for. There is, certainly, no indication that the British Parliament has any particular idea it wants to "sell" to the American Congress. There are differences of opinion, there as well as here, as to the character of the peace and to the future relations between Great Britain and the British empire and the United States. These differences run between individuals, even more markedly than between political groups. In fact, thought as to the future is fluid on both sides of the ocean. People are groping for means of avoiding the errors of the first World War peace.

Our Constitution, of course, vests primary responsibility for the conduct of foreign relations with the President. But, as we know from the past, the President cannot get very far without the approval of Congress. The influence of Congress on foreign relations extends beyond the duties specifically assigned to the Senate, such as the ratification of treaties and the confirmation of diplomatic and consular appointments, and the responsibility of Congress as a whole for declaring war.

BUT THESE constitutional limitations are no barrier to closer communication between Congress and legislative bodies abroad. There is every reason to suppose that the executive branch of our Government would welcome the growth of such communication. The conduct of foreign relations by the Executive is often hampered by the sheer ignorance of members of Congress who have lacked the opportunity or the will to acquaint themselves with the subject matter.

The United States is not, as it was in the first World War, an associated power hanging on the fringes of Europe. It is the center of an alliance which stretches around the world. The terms of the alliance were laid down, for the most part, by the President of the United States, and they bind its members not only to fight until the common victory is won but also to cooperate in establishing a peace based on certain broad, but stated, principles.

From now on, national questions will be even less distinguishable from international questions than they have been in the past. The members of Congress must increase the range of their interest and knowledge; otherwise their collective importance in our scheme of government is likely to shrink, as it has shrunk, partly because of the petty partisanship and narrow provincialism of so many of them.

But the simple and natural suggestion that a bi-partisan delegation go to England to get acquainted with members of the British Parliament has met with a mixed reception on the Hill. Some members, of course, are enthusiastically in favor of it, but most of them are men who already favor close cooperation with the British. Others seem to be fearful that they will be "taken in" or that their constituents will regard the trip as a "junket."

A delegation, if it goes, should include the chairmen and ranking members of the important committees most closely concerned with international affairs, including Military and Naval Affairs. The test is especially interesting for the Republican side of the House, where, despite the Chicago resolution on foreign policy, some apparently feel that even a talk with members of the Parliament of one of our chief Allies might be pretty entangling.

Aviation Training for High School Boys Favored by Large Majority in Survey

By George Gallup

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 28.—The common people of America, who in the past have appraised the value of air power even more accurately than many military experts, give renewed evidence of their faith in the future of aviation.

If the question of teaching the fundamentals of aviation to boys in high schools were left up to the people of each community, boards of education need have little fear of public disapproval of such a program. The majority of the country votes overwhelmingly in favor of preliminary instruction in high schools in aviation essentials. Even the mothers are for it by a majority virtually as large as that among men.

Plans Already Made

A number of high schools are already making plans to include courses of instruction in aviation principles, except actual flynig. The public's reaction to this idea has been tested in a Nation-wide cross section survey by the Institute, with the following results:

Favor aviation instruction for boys in high schools	77%
Opposed	12
Undecided	11

Many military observers are inclined to credit Germany's early air superiority to the fact that German youths were trained in aviation, and particularly in gliding, while still in their teens. Te war has shown that the best pilots are generally those 20 years old or younger.

In the United States the public is inclined to favor high school aviation training not merely as a war measure, but because it is looking beyond the war into the future of commercial aviation. "Aviation will be more important than ever when this war is over"—that is the way most voters put it.

Foes' Arguments Cited

Opposition to the plan is pitched on the arguments that high school boys are too young to learn to fly, and that such training would interfere with the normal educational program.

Those who favor the idea point out, however, that such training would help prepare young men for future national emergencies, and that the country "would not be caught unprepared again." They also declare that this program would help to promote the future of commercial air travel which they call the "coming trend."

Many also point out that early training of boys would simplify the problem of instruction in the Army or Navy Air Corps later on.

The public has been strongly air-minded for many years. Institute polls show that the people were calling for a stronger American air force as early as November, 1935, when more than 60 per cent favored expanding the air arm. When war broke out in Europe in September, 1939, the proportion calling for this had reached 91 per cent.

Golf Gets The Go-By

THIS LACK of tires and gasoline probably will mean the end of golf, and there, my countrymen, will be the most significant change of all to be wrought by Adolf Hitler in this Nation, unoffending victim of the corpuscle god which swims in the veins of the chosen people of the master race.

Time was when there was not golf, although the memory of few of us runneth back that far, but then, of a sudden, golf was and, out of our geographical vastness, we allotted an aggregate acreage approximating that of the Scandinavian Peninsula exclusively for the pursuit of an ornery little object containing within its dimpled or waffled rind the purest essence of all the meanness, contrariness and malice in all the world and in hell below, but capable at times of the most startling goodness of soul. I visited one time a factory where golf balls were made, and although the young women who deftly wound the rubber threads on little rubber bags of liquid seemed rather nice they were demons breathing frustration and woe into their work, for the golf ball had supernatural qualities and these were not of heaven.

NO TIRES or fuel with which to drive to Bosky Burn or Mushy Moor, plus no time to spare from fighting or work equals no golf, and when a layout isn't golfed the crab grass and dandelions sneak into the greens as advance troops for the goldenrod; the fairways run to little birches, spruce and hay, and the bar-man, and the keepers, the locker-boy and caddies run to the armed forces, the factories and the building jobs. There is no more melancholy sight than a golf course gone to ruin for such is the perverse effect of the humbling game upon the victim's soul that though it gave him little else but anguish all his playing years he loves it with the mournful devotion of a drunkard's dog.

Golf was, I should say offhand, the most useless outdoor game ever devised to waste the time and try the spirit of man. It was a walking game and so, as any postman's physician will attest, tended to shake down the victim's plumbing into a jumble in his flabby abdomen while trying no muscle but those of the legs. It promoted sun burn, apoplexy and alcoholism, domestic infelicity and indolence, and many a fraud in real estate and stocks. Moreover, it was unfair in that the game, itself, was invincible except in the most fantastic theory, according to which it were possible to shoot 18 holes in 18 strokes whereat, even then, the proud challenger could get no better than a standoff. He couldn't shoot 18 holes in 17 even in theory, and so couldn't hope to beat golf. Par he might beat, of course, and so mighty and yet so deft some golfers were toward the end that par had ceased to be par except for duffers. But those who beat par habitually were no more happy than those who struggled years on end to beat a hundred. For the great professional with his miraculous 68 would sit with his head in his hands on the bench before his locker and repine over the short-hole where his drive died a hair's breadth from the cup. The greatest score ever shot left golf with plenty of margin over the player.

SOCIALLY golf was, next to craps, the most popular American game and far more so than baseball. An imported eccentricity of the idle rich 40 years ago, it finally provided a common ground for men from both sides of the tracks, as caddies became great champions and were fawned upon by men whose tools they had toted when observing what, by all means, not to do. Noted gorillas of the prohibition era, dressed in double-breasted bloomers with gaudy tassels at the knees, and Tutankhamen sweaters., played over the same suave pasturage with pirates of politer methods from the busy marts of larceny under law. The boss and the clerk fell under its spell, drawn at first by a vague, aspiring sense that, with boys in white jackets to fetch them ginger ale and ice for their hooch and the casual mention of "my club" they were coming on to be minor league Vanderbilts at least.

True, the clubs observed a certain callow snobbery, for some barred Jews but welcomed cheats and muckers, provided they were Aryan and rude and rich enough, but we all played and a waiter in a Washington hotel used to tell me of his rounds with a retired general. My own club had four Japanese members for years who doubtless plotted the bunkers for gun pits, which goes to show that you can lower the bars too far.

We will not realize what golf was and how much it was of the life and scene of the U. S. A. until, pretty soon, golf abruptly ain't.

Those Under Twenty

By Mark Sullivan

Precedent Indicates Draft Extension

EXTENDING the draft, to take in youths of 18 and 19, was this week in the stage of informal discussion by officials. Allusion to this, by radio and press, has caused some anxiety among parents of such youths. It is not merely anxiety about a draft as such—it is especially an anxiety about the time it may take place. Youths of this age are leaving school. They and their families would like to plan for the near future—in some cases about going to college; in others, about taking up a line of work, or training for it. Such planning is made difficult by not knowing whether a youth may be drafted in a few months, or in a year, or two years.

SULLIVAN

To youths and families thus troubled, not much can be said that is definite—they are at the mercy of the uncertainties and anxieties that war has brought to all. Extending the draft below age 20 is not an early prospect. About the probability of it, some time, two opposing statements can be made. One is, it can only be done by act of Congress, and Congress is and will be reluctant to do it. The other is, in all probability it will be done. The only "if" has to do with the length of the war, and as a practical matter that is hardly an "if" at all. However long the war may turn out to be in fact, our planning must assume it will be long. The strongly prevailing expectation, among persons responsible for conducting the war, is that it will last a considerable time—certainly that no early end is now in sight. And even a not very long war would mean extending the draft to take in ages 18 and 19.

We can get some light from precedent. Every war America has fought has taken in youths down to 18. Our experience in the Great War was much like the present. Then, as now, we thought we could do without drafting the younger ages. Our first draft, May, 1917, was confined to ages 21 to 30 inclusive. But our reluctance had to yield. Fifteen months later, in August, 1918, we got around to broadening the ages so as to take in from 18 to 45.

IT WOULD be humane to relieve the inconvenience put upon youths and families by uncertainty about the date of draft. But this is hardly possible. If the Army officials in charge of the draft could do it, they undoubtedly would. It is their admirable policy to practice consideration. But this is not in their power. The draft can be extended only by act of Congress, and Congress is subject to two forces. One is popular psychology and the wish to avoid drafting youths. The other force, ultimately decisive, is the necessities of war. As it was in the Great War, so will it be now—the draft of the younger ages will come at a stage of the war when conditions call for it.

Uncertainty about the actual time of draft troubles not only those under 20 and their parents; it troubles all of any age within the draft limits. They know they are subject to being called. They know they have been put in certain classifications, but they do not know when the draft may reach down as far as their classification. Also, they know their classifications may be changed. The result is, some millions of men and their families are unable to make personal plans, with any confidence, for even a few weeks or months.

SO FAR as this uncertainty can be relieved, officials in charge of the draft do it. General Hershey the other day indicated assurance—so far as war permits any assurance—that men in the classification based on "genuine dependency" are not likely to be called before next year. And General Hershey was wise and humane in his definition of dependency. The Selective Service, he said, is interested in maintaining the home, "especially the home engaged in nurturing of little children—and we want to avoid jeopardizing the genuine American family that is the basis of American citizenship."

A formula that would minimize to a great extent the uncertainty about time of draft has been suggested by Senator Taft of Ohio in a bill he introduced. He would divide all men subject to draft into seven classes. All in the first class would be called first. After the first class is exhausted, those in the second class would be called. And so on. The classes Senator Taft defined in his bill were:

First—Men under 35 who are unmarried and childless, or married since September 16, 1940, the date of the Draft Act.

Second—Men between 35 and 45 who are unmarried and childless, or married since December 20, 1941, when the draft was extended above 35.

Third—Married men under 35 without children.

Fourth—Married men over 35 without children.

Fifth—Men under 28, married before the draft, with children.

Seventh—Men over 35, married before December 20, 1941, with children.

This suggestion, about classifications and order of induction, although set out in a Senate bill, remains a suggestion only, with such force as may appeal to local draft boards. Apparently Congress is not disposed to act upon it. Congress is reluctant to put limitations upon the discretion of Army officials, whose conduct of the draft is generally admired. Congress is reluctant likewise to put limitations on the discretion of local draft boards. The very heart and theory of America's draft system is that the maximum of authority and discretion should be entrusted to local officials.

Reporter Tells How It Feels When Torpedoes Come At You

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., May 28.—How do you feel when you see a torpedo heading straight for your ship?

John A. Moroso 3d, Associated Press correspondent who was with the convoy of the largest A. E. F. yet to land in Ireland, says you don't become panicky or frightened, but carry on appointed tasks with surprising tranquility.

He told this story of one enemy attack during the voyage to Ireland. A submarine was reported nearby, men were ordered to battle stations and the ship started zig-zagging to present a more difficult target. One torpedo barely missed the ship.

And all the while a young American sailor had been calmly swabbing the deck. The skipper, during a free moment, told the swabber to cease and "immediately cut four feet off that mop." It had been jabbing officers in the ribs as they rushed by during the brush with the undersea raider.

May Have Sunk 3 Subs, Writer Asserts

By John A. Moroso 3d
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Atlantc Fleet, May 28 (AP).—Our naval task force has put into an eastern port after one of the most successful convoying jobs in history—a nose-thumbing thrust through U-boat-infested waters with ships carrying thousands of mechanized men and supplies to Britain.

We sailed serenely through "Submarine Alley" last night and this dawn, despite a brilliant moon to help the enemy on this last lap of our trip.

The captain put the bow of our hard-hitting flagship right on the channel buoy he had aimed at 3000 miles away. We were just six minutes off the time he said he would hit the buoy.

The official record will list us as arriving safely. It will not tell of the skill and cunning exerted to bring us home without a single contact with enemy submarines skulking along our coast.

It will not tell of tortuous zig-zagging in six days of fog, of sleepless, red-eyed officers who plotted and schemed how to outwit Axis submarines.

Using thunderous depth charges, we made 11 attacks en route. We may have sunk three subs—an excellent record for one trip.

We lost not a ship in the 5700-mile round trip.

I have sailed 10,000 miles with this unit and our record is still perfect. We have "pushed periscopes down" in every section of the Atlantic. We have bested fog and escaped German planes—an amazing record to a landlubber like me, but just an every-day job to the men of the Navy.

The skipper of our ship typifies this task force. Living in a cubby hole on the navigation bridge, he averaged less than two hours' sleep in 24.

Our record may sound strange to the civilian who reads of ship sinkings along our coast.

One answer is that submarines dodge strength. They prefer lonely ships without guns or convoy protection. The other answer is skill in avoiding them.

The Once Over

Another Tax Idea!

It's all done by suction pump! The Treasury Department has proposed that Congress require that 10 per cent of your wages and other income be deducted at the source and paid to Uncle Sam for income taxes!

* * * *

It's a pay-as-you-enter levy.

* * * *

No pains! No sleepless nights! No complicated mathematical problems! No troublesome routines! No blanks. (Just come in and bring a gallon of blood.)

* * * *

Randolph Paul, the Treasury expert behind the latest idea, says there will be 28 novice taxpayers under our new laws, all in the lower brackets, and that, as few of them can save any money for taxes, the only way to collect is to take it at the source. It's a perfect tax collection plan. Ball-bearing, high-speed and frictionless, it picks up the lint off the rugs and the dandruff off your shoulders.

* * * *

A baby can use it as well as an adult.

* * * *

You pay through the nose. Under Federal nose control.

* * * *

It makes it easier for everybody except the boss and the bookkeeping department. Well, they're too groggy to notice a little extra work, anyhow.

* * * *

Under Mr. Paul's proposal the boss handles the whole business. He does the deducting, answers your squawks, tries to smooth your wounded feelings and then prepares certificates, affidavits and miscellaneous papers to be filed and forwarded to all necessary addresses

* * * *

The employer gets carbon copies while the glee club softly sings "Among My Souvenirs."

* * * *

Not that you don't have to bother to make out a tax blank. You have to do that just the same as ever. The new plan makes it more exciting. If, when you figure up what you owe Uncle Sam, you find the 10 per cent share of your salary has overpaid the tax, you apply for a refund. If you find you're still shy a few dollars you send 'em in.

* * * *

(And if you're still baffled you retire to a cool dry place and await further advices.)

* * * *

It probably never will be passed. But if it is, the folks will take it without undue lamentations. War is war and it costs money.

Lament of an A-Card Motorist

I do not mind the limitation
To mere three gallons weekly,
In fact, I shall accept the ration
Both gratefully and meekly.

But I confess, and this is very,
Oh, very confidential,
It makes me anything but merry
To think I'm nonessential.

RICHARD ARMOUR.

IT IS NO SECRET that the Allies plan sooner or later to open a second land front in Europe. That fact has been proclaimed from the housetops lo these many weeks. It is underlined at this time by the great Anglo-American war council which has been held in London and which was attended by the heads of our Army and Navy air forces, the chief of the Service of Supply and by other high ranking American military and naval officers.

NOVER

The only uncertainty, and it is an uncertainty which has its advantages since it helps keep the Nazis on tenterhooks, is when and where that second front will be established and what form it will take.

Will that front come into being next month or by midsummer or next fall? Will the Allied invasion of Europe choose Norway or France as its principal locale or concentrate on what Henry J. Taylor in "Time Runs Out" calls the soft under side of the Axis turtle, namely, Italy?

This question Hitler would like to have answered. Lacking an answer, he cannot help but hesitate before committing to the Russian struggle his entire army and air force.

WHAT IS NOT so clearly realized is that it is not the Allies alone who are preoccupied at this time with the problem of a second front.

The Axis harbors the same thought and not merely with a defensive but also with an offensive purpose in mind. It, too, would like to divide the forces of the enemy so that he will be unable to concentrate his full strength at any one point. It, would like to pin the enemy down at a point removed from the principal theater.

This may be why, at this relatively late date in the season, Marshal Rommel has suddenly launched an offensive in Libya. Libya is not a new front. It has been fought over for 18 months with neither side achieving a clear-cut decision.

The Libyan theater also happens to be important in its own right. If Rommel's present offensive develops any great force Suez would be threatened. But Suez will be threatened. But even if, in the calculation of the Nazi high command, Suez could not be captured this year an Axis offensive in Libya would have justified itself if it forced the Allies to rush to Egypt military and air power that could be used either to reinforce the Russians or to help establish a second European land front.

THE SAME considerations hold true of the Axis submarine campaign in American waters.

We do not know what that campaign has cost the German and Italian navies in terms of undersea craft that have been sent to the bottom. The toll may have been considerable. We do know that it has not been sufficient to prevent the Allies from building up a ready serious shipping confronting the Allies.

So important does Hitler consider that submarine campaign that no effort was made to mollify Mexico when that country protested the sinking of a Mexican freighter. The result has been to drive Mexico into war. And the effect of Mexico's addition to the ranks of the United Nations may be felt throughout Latin America and in a manner distinctly harmful to the Axis.

Renewed Axis pressures on Vichy also fit in with this "second front" strategy of Berlin and Rome.

The Italians are now crying to high heaven for a slice of French territory and they are backing up their demands by a show of force. For Laval to give way to Italian demands would destroy what little political capital he has. But the Italian demands may only be a feint employed by Hitler to get possession of the French fleet and thus alter the naval balance of power in the Mediterranean.

THE NET EFFECT of these and other moves by the Axis to destroy the possibility of a second Allied land front in Europe cannot yet be estimated. This much can be said, however. A second Allied front of some kind will be established in Europe soon even if it consists of nothing more than the use of air power alone. That front, in fact, is already in being.

The aerial bombardment of German cities, such as Luebeck, Rostock and Augsburg by the R. A. F. during recent months is still in its early stages. Bad weather has kept the R. A. F. grounded on many days. Strategic considerations have played their part in causing the British to refrain from employing against Germany the full force they are capable of unleashing. And so far the American air force has not joined in the fight.

The time is soon at hand, however, when what happened at Luebeck will seem to Germans a mere token raid in comparison with the punishment that will be visited on their cities from the air. And when that time comes Hitler will have to decide whether to concentrate on Russia alone and thus fail to give Germany the air defense it needs to repel an Allied attack or divide his air force and thus weaken the Wehrmacht's driving power in the East. Should Allied air power prove formidable enough not only will great destruction be visited on the Reich and her war production seriously hampered but the way to an invasion will be paved.

But if, in the meantime, the Allies have been forced further to divide and dissipate their strength such an invasion may prove impossible of successful execution.

The recent moves on the chessboard of war are all, in a sense, preliminary. But they are leading up to a gigantic struggle for the highest possible stakes.

Removing A Menace

One source of disease, filth, crime and immorality is about to be cleared up in Washington through the efforts of a single Congressman, the Washington Housing Association and The Post. Hereafter the Government will not rent slum properties to racketeers who pack them with a family in each room. Government-owned houses that are not fit for human occupancy will be demolished, and those which can be used temporarily with a minimum standard of decency will be repaired before being rented.

Dilapidated houses taken over by the Government to make way for public buildings have long been a headache to the Washington Housing Association. Many of these shacks have been rented for years before being demolished. It has been impossible to enforce sanitary laws against them because they are property of the Government. The Post exposed the situation through data supplied by the Housing Association. Shocked that such conditions could exist in the Capital, Representative Paddock took the matter up with the Public Buildings Administration. It is in reply to Mr. Paddock's appeal for the removal of this health menace that Commissioner W. E. Reynolds has outlined a new policy for the operation of slum properties owned by the Government.

In addition to putting the best of these houses into livable condition, the PBA proposes to revise its leases so as to prevent the crowding of 12 or 14 persons into a single small house with only an outdoor toilet. In the future, Commissioner Reynolds also agrees, it will be necessary for the PBA to select its tenants with greater care. This policy will not, of course, convert hovels into modernized low-rent dwellings. But it will eliminate some of the worst violations of the city's meager housing standards. The next logical step is, of course, the compulsory cleaning up or demolition of foul shacks in private ownership, which are a much greater menace to public health because they are so much more numerous.

There is probably far more than meets the eye to the renewed Italian clamor for Nice and Corsica at this time. For to all intents and purposes Italy today is an occupied country. Mussolini can do precious little without the consent and approval of his German lord and master. Had it suited Hitler's interests Italy would have been allowed to occupy Nice and Corsica at the time the Franco-German and Franco-Italian armistice went into effect. But Hitler had his own ideas as to what should be done with France, and these did not include permission for the junior member of the Axis to come into possession of any great amount of French loot.

Now Hitler has his own nominee running the show at Vichy. But in the last six weeks Pierre Laval—for all his collaborationist leanings—has been unable to do Hitler's full bidding. He has been unable to do so because the French people, hungry, disarmed and seemingly helpless as they are, are so overwhelmingly opposed to any action that would align France against the United Nations that any attempt to force such action might lead to great bloodshed. Then Hitler, who has no surplus of troops at this time, would be forced to occupy the Vichy-governed part of France. This the Fuehrer is obviously anxious to avoid.

Is it possible that, after using Laval as a bludgeon in an attempt to browbeat Italy into providing more troops for the Eastern Front, he is now using Mussolini as a bludgeon to extract from Laval concessions which Laval has so far hesitated to grant? The question is very much in order. If the French hate the Nazis, they despise the Fascists, whose stab-in-the-back at the moment of France's collapse they will never forget and can never forgive. Let us keep that in mind in thinking of Hitler's problem. By taking a strong stand against Mussolini's demands for Nice and Corsica—demands which the Duce is ostentatiously backing up by a concentration of Italian troops along the French border—Laval might secure sufficient popularity with the French people to enable him to weather the storm likely to arise from a capitulation to Hitler without question. An intricate game of blackmail and double-dealing is being played in Berlin, Vichy and Rome.

Rubber Confusion

The indictment against those who are responsible for our rubber unpreparedness had already been written before the Truman Committee made its report. There is enough blame, as we have said many times, to go around. The usefulness of the Truman report at this time lies in the recommendations for present action. For action is what is desperately needed, and on three fronts. There is the problem of making the facts known to the people so that they will cooperate in conserving rubber. Then a plan for the mobilization of unused rubber is required. And, finally, the administration of the rubber program, which seems to have been dispersed among several agencies, needs to be centralized.

The Truman Committee issued its report just at the time that the White House seemed to be encouraging hope of the early realization of the synthetic rubber program. Nothing in the Truman Committee's report gives any ground for such optimism. The committee explored every possibility which would assure the general public "at least a little rubber within the next two years." The exploration seems to have been exceedingly, even uniquely, thorough. Yet the conclusion is that "no reasonable assurance has been found anywhere that individuals will have rubber for private, as distinct from defense, uses within the next three years." By defense uses the committee had in mind the war needs of our allies of the United Nations as well as of this country.

There should be no further delay in letting the public know this conclusion and the facts in support of it. For there has been a noticeable slackening in public willingness to conserve rubber. Cars once put away have been brought out again. The doubling-up campaign has fallen off. These results are the natural consequences of the public disputations on the rubber situation on the part of officials and other persons in authority. The people are now inclined to think that the picture is better than it really is. Actually the situation is extremely grim, though the job of reeducating the public as to its grimness may now have been made impossible by official contradictions.

For this reason alone the proposal by Mr. Nelson to make gasoline rationing Nation-wide is inevitable. That will save rubber for the maintenance of necessary civilian transport till the distant time that the shortage has been overcome. There was always the argument of equality of treatment in favor of rationing on a national scale, anyway. Now the rubber shortage adds a clinching argument, though even the stark account by the Truman Committee does not warrant the threat—evidently uttered by those who believe in sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice—that the conservation of rubber may require the commandeering of passenger cars on the roads.

What the Truman Committee shows, on the contrary, is that there is a great deal of scrap awaiting collection and reclamation. Estimates of the amount available vary widely, but the minimum estimate is as much as 500,000 tons. That is a valuable reserve for immediate war, though not civilian purposes. For, even though rubber reclaimed from scrap is not a 100 per cent substitute for crude rubber, many products required by the armed forces today can be and should be made entirely from scrap. Moreover, the used and unused cars in dealers' hands make up a sizable stockpile. There are three million of them throughout the country. In storage they are a wasting asset, for automobile tires wear out almost as fast when held in reserve as spare tires.

The final problem concerns the centralization of authority over rubber. In getting the facts about rubber the Truman Committee had to go to seven agencies. All manner of unfortunate consequences have flowed from this dispersion of authority. Waste of effort is only one of them. Just as serious is that the heads of all the agencies concerned seemed to have taken it upon themselves to talk authoritatively about rubber prospects or the lack of them, though few of them can have an overall picture. A coordinator for rubber has been appointed in the person of Mr. Arthur Newhall, but Mr. Newhall's authority will remain limited so long as so many agencies share the responsibility of carrying out the rubber program.

In Libya

Since the bitter fighting of last winter when, for the second time in a year, the British swept across Cyrenaica only to be driven back once again by the Axis forces under Field Marshal Rommel, the Libyan theater has been one of the quietest of the war. At least that was true until last Tuesday when, suddenly, four German columns began to press forward against the British lines.

The principal immediate objective of this drive appears to be Tobruk. Without Tobruk the Axis forces would be seriously handicapped in any offensive operations against the Suez Canal. It is thus in the Tobruk region that Marshal Rommel has centered his main forces, and it is there he has achieved his principal gains. The lateral thrusts that accompanied the drive on Tobruk may have been deliberately intended as diversionary efforts to fool the British and get them to divide their forces.

It is not yet clear whether Rommel's latest thrust to the east is only a reconnaissance in force or the beginning of a large-scale offensive aimed at driving the British out of Libya and then pushing on to the Suez Canal. That will depend, in part, on the degree of resistance he meets. His foray of last April quickly spent itself, and so may this latest Axis offensive in North Africa. The British as well as the Germans have been adding to their strength. Planes and tanks from the United States and from Great Britain have been pouring into Cairo.

Yet, with so many other theaters to reinforce, the Allies may not have been able to do as much for Egypt and Libya as is necessary to repel Rommel. Besides, Rommel has proved himself one of the ablest generals produced by the war. It can be anticipated that he will take advantage of every opportunity to forge ahead or at least to keep the British busy enough in North Africa to dissipate any temptation on their part to create a second land front in Europe.

Lewis Vs. Murray

John L. Lewis appears to have timed his open break with Philip Murray so as to produce a maximum of embarrassment for the present head of the C. I. O. It is difficult for Mr. Murray to fight back effectively, because he is committed to cooperation with the Government in winning the war, and labor battles certainly would not be conducive to that end. Mr. Lewis has no such scruples about aiding the national effort, as his coal strike last year indicated. Events of the last week suggest that he is deliberately fomenting disunion within the ranks of the C. I. O. when the national interest calls for unity and cooperation. It does not follow, however, that this strategy will work to Mr. Lewis' advantage.

The objective observer will find no basic cause for a split between Mr. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the C. I. O. But Mr. Lewis appears determined to bring about such a split at all cost. Only a few years ago he came to a parting of the ways with the American Federation of Labor largely because he could not dominate it. Now he finds it impossible to tolerate the leadership of his "former friend" and trusted associate of long standing. So he is again splitting the segment of organized labor which he previously caused to be split from the parent body. In these circumstances it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that any organization harboring Mr. Lewis and refusing to submit to his domination is likely to be a victim of fission.

While the emergence of hostile labor factions at this time is particularly deplorable, the Lewis-Murray fight may well be the forerunner of greater unity in the ranks of labor as a whole. Last week the A. F. of L. renewed its bid to the C. I. O. for a resumption of peace negotiations. With Mr. Lewis out of the picture, the chance of reuniting the two central organizations will certainly be improved. In most instances, too, the progress of recent years in organizing previously unorganized workers should minimize the antagonism between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. Where rival unions are operating in the same field, the unscrambling process would be very difficult. But with a will to achieve unity, even that baffling problem could be solved.

In any event, Mr. Lewis has given Mr. Murray his cue to resume peace conferences with the A. F. of L. The war has brought the two great labor organizations a greater community of interest than they had before, and they may well discover that it is easier for them to work together than for either to work with John L. Lewis.

MAN'S VOICE SINGING

Here is the relentless urgency of birth,
From warmth to cold, from darkness
To the first crashing of light against the blinded eyes.
The first beneficent gift of milk to the round, seeking mouth
Flows as the song flows.
The spring and summer of life are in the sounds
That come from the deep throat.
The first fruit of the body is here . . .
The sadness of seed-giving
And the tenderness of the whole man.

All the bones and the net of the flesh
Are bound together through the long days
To come to this singing.
And the twilight is here,
Behind the full sum of the song,
The twilight over the proud head,
The first dimming of delight,
Subtle as the music's echoing
When the song is done.

Less Garbage, Please

We can all help Uncle Sam win the war, by conserving food. "Eat what you buy and whittle down your waste."

It is estimated that from 5 to 20 pounds of nourishing food is thrown in the family garbage pail each week. This does not include the tons of waste from hotels and restaurants. Enough food is wasted every day in America, to feed the low countries of Europe. Fifty years ago the average American family never heard of a garbage pail. What was left of the family dinner, if any, was warmed over or fed to the chickens. When Grandma, prepared a pot-o-beans, those days, it was beans to the finish. Municipalities today spend huge sums to collect garbage, while millions of Federal funds have been spent to erect incinerator plants throughout the country.

Food is the most important factor in our whole war effort. When the devastated countries of Europe, are stripped of their cattle, grain and foodstuffs and famine and starvation stalk across the land, it will then become our mission to feed these stricken countries. But should we fail, we may awaken some morning, goose-stepping to the tune of "The Watch on the Rhine" and pay homage to the Japanese.

Camden Race Track

Given till June 6 to complete the Camden Race Track, the boys seem to be trying to nose ahead of the War Production Board on the home stretch—working night and day with a large force of men who should be in war production and using gas, steel, lumber, etc.

Once operating, many in the shipyards, etc., will find they need time off for illness or otherwise; and use more gas and rubber. Camden voted against the track, but private interests seem more important than public even while the public tries to win a war.

Silent Parades

The other day a parade went by—a parade of boys in uniform. It was a very grim parade. No one cheered. No one smiled. A half-hearted band played one tune and then lapsed into silence. The boys marched to the accompaniment of silence and the rumble of new tanks. Some of the boys were stoop-shouldered. Some of them looked bewildered. All of them looked too young.

Where's the music to send our boys off singing?

Have you ever been "marching as to war . . ." with nothing but silence to keep you going? Do you think it's easy to keep in step without the drums' roll, do you think it's easy to keep heart and head high without a tune to swing along to?

Where's the music to drown out the awful silence?

Proverbs said, long ago, that without vision, the people perish. Can any claim to have vision—or practicality, either, for that matter—and yet push music aside as a pleasant diversion for peacetime, push music aside as one of the "arts" having little use in wartime? Where does that put "Yankee Doodle," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Over There" and "The Star-Spangled Banner?"

That perishing business is no joke. Any more than winning the war without music is a joke.

Better take a look at some of those silent parades, Congress. Better think of Chaplain Col. E. Raymond Attebery and his assistants, working in night and day shifts, to send out music from a collection of 300 records to the music-starved Allied field troops somewhere in Australia.

Where's the music for us everywhere in America? AMY LEE.

Banish Worry

The best definition on people who believe rumors comes from the newly appointed director of the division of propaganda research of the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety, Robert H. Knapp of Harvard University.

Mr. Knapp defines it this way: "In the main, people who believe rumors are those who have a lot of worries and anxieties, those who have a feeling of insecurity. Emotional stability or instability is usually the determining factor."

Here Mr. Knapp is absolutely right. Recently the writer listened to rumors spoken by a person whose name he does not know but whose face is familiar. During a discussion which followed in which the writer endeavored to point out the danger in spreading rumors, the innocent rumor monger confessed that he wasn't too sure of his employment status and he was a bit critical of the promotional system since he believed he had been discriminated against when one who had not had seniority was advanced ahead of him.

The writer feels sure this victim of a troubled soul took the former's advice, since when we last saw him on the street he was walking with his head up and his chin out and there was pep in his stride which had been lacking before.

And this advice was this: "Ignore your troubles by giving twice the amount of effort to your job and cooperate more than you have ever done before with the men around you and with your superiors. Hard work, and a long walk after sundown, scares hell out of the imps that perplex the soul. Give 'em hell for the hell they're caused you."

There is a victory slogan for all of us to adopt for the duration: "If you want to be happy, work like hell."

Author Moore

I was much interested in a letter printed in last Sunday's Post signed by one Otto Torney Simon, giving the pleasing story of Ethelbert Nevin and his writing of the "Rosary."

In the latter part of his letter Mr. Simon says "it recalls a similar case of the Rev. Mr. Morehouse, who aspired to be a poet, and not until he wrote "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" did he gain fame.

The point of this letter is it was Clement Clark Moore, LL. D., who wrote the much-cherished verses.

Prior to coming to Washington I was a member of St. Peter's Parish, West Twentieth Street, New York City. The church was built on land given by Dr. Moore. It was finished in 1838.

I have before me an article about old St. Peter's which appeared last summer in the Episcopal Church magazine, Forth. One of the illustrations shows a tablet erected to the memory of Dr. Moore. Born in New York City, 1779; died in Newport, R. I., 1843. This tablet is rededicated every Christmas eve by the church school children, who decorate it with holly and greens.

Can We Trust The Isolationists?

Mark Sullivan in The Washington Post of May 25 says that Congressmen's pre-war views are of no importance, that "to bring them up now would be a threat to national unity" and to oppose all isolationists "might kindle serious acrimony among the people."

We do not think it acrimonious to point out the extreme unfitness for office of the Congressmen who fought all defense measures for the past two years. By their words and their votes they proved their total lack of understanding of the dangers that menaced us. They tried in every way to keep us weak and defenseless. They shouted "war-monger" and "dictator" at those who warned of the perils ahead. And now that war has come to us, now that their former stand is completely discredited, now that they are shown for dupes or worse, they ask us to forget the past and reelect them to the office they are unworthy to hold.

Mr. Sullivan says that a Congressman's pre-war views are of no importance. He is wrong. The are of the utmost importance. How shall we judge of a man's ability except by his record? Let us examine the record of the isolationists.

(1). The isolationists fought the Selective Service Act bitterly. They called it Mr. Roosevelt's plot to make himself a dictator. They called it an insult to the American people. They said we should wait until we were at war before we built up a large Army. That is the first the isolationists would like us to forget.

(2). The isolationists fought the Lease-Lend Act. They said it was a dictatorship bill, and a plot to get us into war. The said that Mr. Roosevelt was as bad as Hitler and Stalin. They tried to keep us from sending goods to England and repairing British ships in our yards. That is the second thing they would like us to forget.

(3. The isolationists opposed aid to Russia. They introduced amendments into the lease-lend appropriations bill to that effect. They said they hated Hitler but they hated Stalin worse. That is the third thing they would like us to forget.

(4). The isolationists fought the draft extension. They said it was treachery to our boys. They said, six months before Pearl Harbor, that we were in no danger of attack. They said that a large Army in peacetime would lead to dictatorship. That is the fourth thing they would like us to forget.

(5). The isolationists fought the amendment to the Neutrality Act enabling us to deliever war materials to the nations fighting fascism. Three weeks before Japan attacked us they were saying that we were safe behind our ocean barriers. That is the fifth thing they would like us to forget.

But these are things the American people should not forget if they value their freedom and independence. And the American people must not forget that we must participate in the making of the peace. Can we trust these isolationists who have been so mistaken about world affairs? The answer is no.

Bullfight

Scarcely had the stench of Tangier, Morocco, left our nostrils with the steamer headed toward the mighty Pillars of Hercules when the whole ship became engrossed in an all-absorbing topic—the bullfight at Algeciras. Such mild anticipation as visiting the bazaars, clustering in the shadow of the mighty fortress, was for the time forgotten.

They all knew Bizet's opera—the magnetic, picturesque Carmen flouting the pleadings of Don Jose, the dash and skill of the splendid Escamillo, etc. They were opera-conscious rather than bullfight-conscious.

The fight was scheduled for 5 o'clock and the crowd was impatient, fretting at the delay of the president of the fight, who was late in arriving. Vendors moved through the crowd, disposing of their wares very much in the same way as our American boys sell pop and popcorn at baseball games. But these viands consisted of shrimp, dried beef, ripe olives and figs, flanked on all sides by bottles of wine. The senoritas, with accustomed cinema etiquette, draped their bright shawls over the railings of their boxes—not overlooking a by-play of coquetry behind large fans.

From somewhere a trumpet shrilled forth loudly. Music struck up. The gates swung open, and in marched a dozen toreadors. Then came two picadors on horses. All were garbed in brilliant suits, set off jauntily with gold and silver lace. After a gracious salute to the President's box they sprang into the ring amid the eager applause of the Spaniards.

For a moment the audience was hushed, holding its breath, waiting for something to happen. A trumpet blast cut the air sharply, and no sooner had the sound died down when a gate swung open and a huge, dark bull dashed into the arena. The brilliant cape of the nearest toreador challenged the animal as he blinked hesitatingly in the unaccustomed sunlight. The flaunting color angered him and he charged the toreador with a bellow that made the spine of every American creep.

For the important fights held on fete days in the large cities of Spain, only choice animals are used. They are raised on the big plains of Andalusia and only the exceptional, quick and courageous animal is chosen for the ring. These unpampered animals roam wild and free with their herds until placed in boxes on top of railway coaches which carry them to the darkened stalls of the bull ring. To the casual observer the holes in the top of the stall would be for conveying air to the animal. Not at all. These holes are for the express purpose of prodding him with a spear or sharpened stick until he is enraged into a blind fury, when the poor beast will attack the first thing he sees with sudden ferocity.

This animal on that hot July day had been going through this maddening torture and the first object that met his view was the toreador with the flashing cape. Rush upon rush he made with futile lunges while his antagonist evaded his sharp horns with the alertness and step of a graceful dancer. The bull was visibly tired. His eyes showed a haunted, bewildered look as he shot past the American party with great flecks of foam dripping from his body. His every rush seemed futile. At one time an unsuppressed murmur swept through the American party when it looked as if the bull might be gaining a little advantage—but no, the beast never had half a chance against the merciless spears of his tormentors.

It would have been too tame—too devoid of dash and daring—to dispatch the bull without prolonged torture; consequently two picadors on well-padded horses rode into the arena to put a little more punch in the performance. These animals were without the mettle and spirit that one would naturally expect of horses in a bull ring, but just two old, worn-out plugs, brought forth to die ingloriously in mortal combat.

Lance after lance had pierced the hide of the bull until his body was red with blood, and still he would not down. It was harrowing. Just as a matador plunged a lance into the neck of the tortured animal, from which the blood spurted in streams, with new-born ferocity the toro wheeled and ripped a long gash in the uncovered flank of the horse.

The American contingent was growing somewhat unsteady by this time. Two of our women had become faint and had to be removed from the scene. When the horses had been taken out a banderillo with two wooden darts, barbed with steel, waved tormentingly at the bull, which in sheer madness charged. With a facility born of practice, the man stepped aside lightly and buried the lance deep in the beast's shoulder. Loud huzzahs from the Spanish side. The band began a strain of soft music. It was agonizing torture, and the Americans who had stayed it out drew a sigh of relief when the brave matador stepped gallantly forward and ended the toro's misery.

The Spanish spectators arose to their feet and the amphitheater rang with their cheers. Then came the mules with jingling bells to drag out the dead toro from Andalusia. The matador swaggered about the ring, graciously receiving the plaudits of his countrymen.

All of the American women and nearly all of the men by this time had lost their enthusiasm for bullfights and left the amphitheater, but the Spanish had just begun to get interested and saw the seventh animal slaughtered before calling it a day. JOHN FRANCIS STEELE.

Test For Congress

By Ernest Lindley

Leaders Invited To England

AN INTERESTING TEST has come up for the congressional leaders of both parties. An informal invitation has been tendered for a bipartisan delegation to go to England to meet and exchange views with members of the British Parliament. The invitation was tendered by or through Sir Howard D'Egvile, secretary of the United Kingdom branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association. The latter is an association of members of the parliamentary bodies within the British empire. It provides an exchange of information and views and puts out at least two publications for legislators within the British empire.

LINDLEY

Obviously, it is a sensible idea to bring members of Congress into closer touch with the parliamentary bodies of our Allies, and especially with the British Parliament. It has been discussed and advocated for some time by a few farsighted members of Congress.

Unfortunately, some of the first published accounts of the invitation to visit Great Britain gave the proposed meeting a more formal character than is intended. It is not intended to negotiate anything or to bring about any commitments, actual or implied, official or personal. The Britishers who suggested the meeting are quite familiar with the differences between their government, where the government is a committee of Parliament, and our separation of the executive and legislative powers. They have talked only of a get-acquainted meeting, inspired by the inescapable fact that the United States and Great Britain are comrades in a war in which the life of both is at stake, and also by the feeling that, when they have won the victory, they must continue to work together to preserve the peace.

UNDOUBTEDLY those who suggested the meeting would like to have leading legislators of both parties in this country see at first hand what the British are doing about the war. But they are also interested in exchanging ideas, especially ideas about the future. Peace must be prepared for. There is, certainly, no indication that the British Parliament has any particular idea it wants to "sell" to the American Congress. There are differences of opinion, there as well as here, as to the character of the peace and to the future relations between Great Britain and the British empire and the United States. These differences run between individuals, even more markedly than between political groups. In fact, thought as to the future is fluid on both sides of the ocean. People are groping for means of avoiding the errors of the first World War peace.

Our Constitution, of course, vests primary responsibility for the conduct of foreign relations with the President. But, as we know from the past, the President cannot get very far without the approval of Congress. The influence of Congress on foreign relations extends beyond the duties specifically assigned to the Senate, such as the ratification of treaties and the confirmation of diplomatic and consular appointments, and the responsibility of Congress as a whole for declaring war.

BUT THESE constitutional limitations are no barrier to closer communication between Congress and legislative bodies abroad. There is every reason to suppose that the executive branch of our Government would welcome the growth of such communication. The conduct of foreign relations by the Executive is often hampered by the sheer ignorance of members of Congress who have lacked the opportunity or the will to acquaint themselves with the subject matter.

The United States is not, as it was in the first World War, an associated power hanging on the fringes of Europe. It is the center of an alliance which stretches around the world. The terms of the alliance were laid down, for the most part, by the President of the United States, and they bind its members not only to fight until the common victory is won but also to cooperate in establishing a peace based on certain broad, but stated, principles.

From now on, national questions will be even less distinguishable from international questions than they have been in the past. The members of Congress must increase the range of their interest and knowledge; otherwise their collective importance in our scheme of government is likely to shrink, as it has shrunk, partly because of the petty partisanship and narrow provincialism of so many of them.

But the simple and natural suggestion that a bi-partisan delegation go to England to get acquainted with members of the British Parliament has met with a mixed reception on the Hill. Some members, of course, are enthusiastically in favor of it, but most of them are men who already favor close cooperation with the British. Others seem to be fearful that they will be "taken in" or that their constituents will regard the trip as a "junket."

A delegation, if it goes, should include the chairmen and ranking members of the important committees most closely concerned with international affairs, including Military and Naval Affairs. The test is especially interesting for the Republican side of the House, where, despite the Chicago resolution on foreign policy, some apparently feel that even a talk with members of the Parliament of one of our chief Allies might be pretty entangling.

Aviation Training for High School Boys Favored by Large Majority in Survey

By George Gallup

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 28.—The common people of America, who in the past have appraised the value of air power even more accurately than many military experts, give renewed evidence of their faith in the future of aviation.

If the question of teaching the fundamentals of aviation to boys in high schools were left up to the people of each community, boards of education need have little fear of public disapproval of such a program. The majority of the country votes overwhelmingly in favor of preliminary instruction in high schools in aviation essentials. Even the mothers are for it by a majority virtually as large as that among men.

Plans Already Made

A number of high schools are already making plans to include courses of instruction in aviation principles, except actual flynig. The public's reaction to this idea has been tested in a Nation-wide cross section survey by the Institute, with the following results:

Favor aviation instruction for boys in high schools	77%
Opposed	12
Undecided	11

Many military observers are inclined to credit Germany's early air superiority to the fact that German youths were trained in aviation, and particularly in gliding, while still in their teens. Te war has shown that the best pilots are generally those 20 years old or younger.

In the United States the public is inclined to favor high school aviation training not merely as a war measure, but because it is looking beyond the war into the future of commercial aviation. "Aviation will be more important than ever when this war is over"—that is the way most voters put it.

Foes' Arguments Cited

Opposition to the plan is pitched on the arguments that high school boys are too young to learn to fly, and that such training would interfere with the normal educational program.

Those who favor the idea point out, however, that such training would help prepare young men for future national emergencies, and that the country "would not be caught unprepared again." They also declare that this program would help to promote the future of commercial air travel which they call the "coming trend."

Many also point out that early training of boys would simplify the problem of instruction in the Army or Navy Air Corps later on.

The public has been strongly air-minded for many years. Institute polls show that the people were calling for a stronger American air force as early as November, 1935, when more than 80 per cent favored expanding the air arm. When war broke out in Europe in September, 1939, the proportion calling for this had reached 91 per cent.

Golf Gets The Go-By

THIS LACK of tires and gasoline probably will mean the end of golf, and there, my countrymen, will be the most significant change of all to be wrought by Adolf Hitler in this Nation, unoffending victim of the corpuscle god which swims in the veins of the chosen people of the master race.

Time was when there was not golf, although the memory of few of us runneth back that far, but then, of a sudden, golf was and, cut of our geographical vastness, we allotted an aggregate acreage approximating that of the Scandinavian Peninsula exclusively for the pursuit of an ornery little object containing within its dimpled or waffled rind the purest essence of all the meanness, contrariness and malice in all the world and in hell below, but capable at times of the most startling goodness of soul. I visited one time a factory where golf balls were made, and although the young women who deftly wound the rubber threads on little rubber bags of liquid seemed rather nice they were demons breathing frustration and woe into their work, for the golf ball had supernatural qualities and these were not of Heaven.

NO TIRES or fuel with which to drive to Bosky Burn or Mushy Moor, plus no time to spare from fighting or work equals no golf, and when a layout isn't golfed the crab grass and dandelions sneak into the greens as advance troops for the goldenrod; the fairways run to little birches, spruce and hay, and the bar-man, and the keepers, the locker-boy and caddies run to the armed forces, the factories and the building jobs. There is no more melancholy sight than a golf course gone to ruin for such is the perverse effect of the humbling game upon the victim's soul that though it gave him little else but anguish all his playing years he loves it with the mournful devotion of a drunkard's dog.

Golf was, I should say offhand, the most useless outdoor game ever devised to waste the time and try the spirit of man. It was a walking game and so, as any postman's physician will attest, tended to shake down the victim's plumbing into a jumble in his flabby abdomen while trying no muscle but those of the legs. It promoted sun burn, apoplexy and alcoholism, domestic infelicity and indolence, and many a fraud in real estate and stocks. Moreover, it was unfair in that the game, itself, was invincible except in the most fantastic theory, according to which it were possible to shoot 18 holes in 18 strokes whereat, even then, the proud challenger could get no better than a standoff. He couldn't shoot 18 holes in 17 even in theory, and so couldn't hope to beat golf. Par he might beat, of course, and so mighty and yet so deft some golfers were toward the end that par had ceased to be par except for duffers. But those who beat par habitually were no more happy than those who struggled years on end to beat a hundred. For the great professional with his miraculous 68 would sit with his head in his hands on the bench before his locker and repine over the short-hole where his drive died a hair's breadth from the cup. The greatest score ever shot left golf with plenty of margin over the player.

SOCIALLY golf was, next to craps, the most popular American game and far more so than baseball. An imported eccentricity of the idle rich 40 years ago, it finally provided a common ground for men from both sides of the tracks, as caddies became great champions and were fawned upon by men whose tools they had toted when observing what, by all means, not to do. Noted gorillas of the prohibition era, dressed in double-breasted bloomers with gaudy tassels at the knees, and Tutankhamen sweaters., played over the same suave pasturage with pirates of politer methods from the busy marts of larceny under law. The boss and the clerk fell under its spell, drawn at first by a vague, aspiring sense that, with boys in white jackets to fetch them ginger ale and ice for their hooch and the casual mention of "my club" they were coming on to be minor league Vanderbilts at least.

True, the clubs observed a certain callow snobbery, for some barred Jews but welcomed cheats and muckers, provided they were Aryan and rude and rich enough, but we all played and a waiter in a Washington hotel used to tell me of his rounds with a retired general. My own club had four Japanese members for years who doubtless plotted the bunkers for gun pits, which goes to show that you can lower the bars too far.

We will not realize what golf was and how much it was of the life and scene of the U. S. A. until, pretty soon, golf abruptly ain't.

Those Under Twenty

By Mark Sullivan

Precedent Indicates Draft Extension

EXTENDING the draft, to take in youths of 18 and 19, was this week in the stage of informal discussion by officials. Allusion to this, by radio and press, has caused some anxiety among parents of such youths. It is not merely anxiety about a draft as such—it is especially an anxiety about the time it may take place. Youths of this age are leaving school. They and their families would like to plan for the near future—in some cases about going to college; in others, about taking up a line of work, or training for it. Such planning is made difficult by not knowing whether a youth may be drafted in a few months, or in a year, or two years.

SULLIVAN

To youths and families thus troubled, not much can be said that is definite—they are at the mercy of the uncertainties and anxieties that war has brought to all. Extending the draft below age 20 is not an early prospect. About the probability of it, some time, two opposing statements can be made. One is, it can only be done by act of Congress, and Congress is and will be reluctant to do it. The other is, in all probability it will be done. The only "if" has to do with the length of the war, and as a practical matter that is hardly an "if" at all. However long the war may turn out to be in fact, our planning must assume it will be long. The strongly prevailing expectation, among persons responsible for conducting the war, is that it will last a considerable time—certainly that no early end is now in sight. And even a not very long war would mean extending the draft to take in ages 18 and 19.

We can get some light from precedent. Every war America has fought has taken in youths down to 18. Our experience in the Great War was much like the present. Then, as now, we thought we could do without drafting the younger ages. Our first draft, May, 1917, was confined to ages 21 to 30 inclusive. But our reluctance had to yield. Fifteen months later, in August, 1918, we got around to broadening the ages so as to take in from 18 to 45.

IT WOULD be humane to relieve the inconvenience put upon youths and families by uncertainty about the date of draft. But this is hardly possible. If the Army officials in charge of the draft could do it, they undoubtedly would. It is their admirable policy to practice consideration. But this is not in their power. The draft can be extended only by act of Congress, and Congress is subject to two forces. One is popular psychology and the wish to avoid drafting youths. The other force, ultimately decisive, is the necessities of war. As it was in the Great War, so will it be now—the draft of the younger ages will come at a stage of the war when conditions call for it.

Uncertainty about the actual time of draft troubles not only those under 20 and their parents; it troubles all of any age within the draft limits. They know they are subject to being called. They know they have been put in certain classifications, but they do not know when the draft may reach down as far as their classification. Also, they know their classifications may be changed. The result is, some millions of men and their families are unable to make personal plans, with any confidence, for even a few weeks or months.

SO FAR as this uncertainty can be relieved, officials in charge of the draft do it. General Hershey the other day indicated assurance—so far as war permits any assurance—that men in the classification based on "genuine dependency" are not likely to be called before next year. And General Hershey was wise and humane in his definition of dependency. The Selective Service, he said, is interested in maintaining the home, "especially the home engaged in nurturing of little children—and we want to avoid jeopardizing the genuine American family that is the basis of American citizenship."

A formula that would minimize to a great extent the uncertainty about time of draft has been suggested by Senator Taft of Ohio in a bill he introduced. He would divide all men subject to draft into seven classes. All in the first class would be called first. After the first class is exhausted, those in the second class would be called. And so on. The classes Senator Taft defined in his bill were:

First—Men under 35 who are unmarried and childless, or married since September 16, 1940, the date of the Draft Act.

Second—Men between 35 and 45 who are unmarried and childless, or married since December 20, 1941, when the draft was extended above 35.

Third—Married men under 35 without children.

Fourth—Married men over 35 without children.

Fifth—Men under 28, married before the draft, with children.

Seventh—Men over 35, married before December 20, 1941, with children.

This suggestion, about classifications and order of induction, although set out in a Senate bill, remains a suggestion only, with such force as may appeal to local draft boards. Apparently Congress is not disposed to act upon it. Congress is reluctant to put limitations upon the discretion of Army officials, whose conduct of the draft is generally admired. Congress is reluctant likewise to put limitations on the discretion of local draft boards. The very heart and theory of America's draft system is that the maximum of authority and discretion should be entrusted to local officials.

Reporter Tells How It Feels When Torpedoes Come At You

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., May 28.—How do you feel when you see a torpedo heading straight for your ship?

John A. Moroso 3d, Associated Press correspondent who was with the convoy of the largest A. E. F. yet to land in Ireland, says you don't become panicky or frightened, but carry on appointed tasks with surprising tranquility.

He told this story of one enemy attack during the voyage to Ireland. A submarine was reported nearby, men were ordered to battle stations and the ship started zig-zagging to present a more difficult target. One torpedo barely missed the ship.

And all the while a young American sailor had been calmly swabbing the deck. The skipper, during a free moment, told the swabber to cease and "immediately cut four feet off that mop." It had been jabbing officers in the ribs as they rushed by during the brush with the undersea raider.

May Have Sunk 3 Subs, Writer Asserts

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Atlantic Fleet, May 28 (AP).—Our naval task force has put into an eastern port after one of the most successful convoying jobs in history—a nose-thumbing thrust through U-boat-infested waters with ships carrying thousands of mechanized men and supplies to Britain.

We sailed serenely through "Submarine Alley" last night and this dawn, despite a brilliant moon to help the enemy on this last lap of our trip.

The captain put the bow of our hard-hitting flagship right on the channel buoy he had aimed at 3000 miles away. We were just six minutes off the time he said he would hit the buoy.

The official record will list us as arriving safely. It will not tell of the skill and cunning exerted to bring us home without a single contact with enemy submarines skulking along our coast.

It will not tell of tortuous zig-zagging in six days of fog, of sleepless, red-eyed officers who plotted and schemed how to outwit Axis submarines.

Using thunderous depth charges, we made 11 attacks en route. We may have sunk three subs—an excellent record for one trip.

We lost not a ship in the 5700-mile round trip.

I have sailed 10,000 miles with this unit and our record is still perfect. We have "pushed periscopes down" in every section of the Atlantic. We have bested fog and escaped German planes—an amazing record to a landlubber like me, but just an every-day job to the men of the Navy.

The skipper of our ship typifies this task force. Living in a cubby hole on the navigation bridge, he averaged less than two hours' sleep in 24.

Our record may sound strange to the civilian who reads of ship sinkings along our coast.

One answer is that submarines dodge strength. They prefer lonely ships without guns or convoy protection. The other answer is skill in avoiding them.

The Once Over

Another Tax Idea!

It's all done by suction pump! The Treasury Department has proposed that Congress require that 10 per cent of your wages and other income be deducted at the source and paid to Uncle Sam for income taxes!

* * * *

It's a pay-as-you-enter levy.

* * * *

No pains! No sleepless nights! No complicated mathematical problems! No troublesome routines! No blanks. (Just come in and bring a gallon of blood.)

* * * *

Randolph Paul, the Treasury expert behind the latest idea, says there will be 28 novice taxpayers under our new laws, all in the lower brackets, and that, as few of them can save any money for taxes, the only way to collect is to take it at the source. It's a perfect tax collection plan. Ball-bearing, high-speed and frictionless, it picks up the lint off the rugs and the dandruff off your shoulders.

* * * *

A baby can use it as well as an adult.

* * * *

You pay through the nose. Under Federal nose control.

* * * *

It makes it easier for everybody except the boss and the bookkeeping department. Well, they're too groggy to notice a little extra work, anyhow.

* * * *

Under Mr. Paul's proposal the boss handles the whole business. He does the deducting, answers your squawks, tries to smooth your wounded feelings and then prepares certificates, affidavits and miscellaneous papers to be filed and forwarded to all necessary addresses

* * * *

* * * *

Not that you don't have to bother to make out a tax blank. You have to do that just the same as ever. The new plan makes it more exciting. If, when you figure up what you owe Uncle Sam, you find the 10 per cent share of your salary has overpaid the tax, you apply for a refund. If you find you're still shy a few dollars you send 'em in.

* * * *

* * * *

It probably never will be passed. But if it is, the folks will take it without undue lamentations. War is war and it costs money.

Lament of an A-Card Motorist

I do not mind the limitation
To mere three gallons weekly,
In fact, I shall accept the ration
Both gratefully and meekly.

But I confess, and this is very,
Oh, very confidential,
It makes me anything but merry
To think I'm nonessential.

Second Fronts

By Barnet Nover

Moves On War's Chessboard

IT IS NO SECRET that the Allies plan sooner or later to open a second land front in Europe. That fact has been proclaimed from the housetops lo these many weeks. It is underlined at this time by the great Anglo-American war council which has been held in London and which was attended by the heads of our Army and Navy air forces, the chief of the Service of Supply and by other high ranking American military and naval officers.

NOVER

The only uncertainty, and it is an uncertainty which has its advantages since it helps keep the Nazis on tenterhooks, is when and where that second front will be established and what form it will take.

Will that front come into being next month or by midsummer or next fall? Will the Allied invasion of Europe choose Norway or France as its principal locale or concentrate on what Henry J. Taylor in "Time Runs Out" calls the soft under side of the Axis turtle, namely, Italy?

This question Hitler would like to have answered. Lacking an answer, he cannot help but hesitate before committing to the Russian struggle his entire army and air force.

WHAT IS NOT so clearly realized is that it is not the Allies alone who are preoccupied at this time with the problem of a second front.

The Axis harbors the same thought and not merely with a defensive but also with an offensive purpose in mind. It, too, would like to divide the forces of the enemy so that he will be unable to concentrate his full strength at any one point. It, would like to pin the enemy down at a point removed from the principal theater.

This may be why, at this relatively late date in the season, Marshal Rommel has suddenly launched an offensive in Libya. Libya is not a new front. It has been fought over for 18 months with neither side achieving a clear-cut decision.

The Libyan theater also happens to be important in its own right. If Rommel's present offensive develops any great force Suez would be threatened. But Suez will be threatened. But even if, in the calculation of the Nazi high command, Suez could not be captured this year an Axis offensive in Libya would have justified itself if it forced the Allies to rush to Egypt military and air power that could be used either to reinforce the Russians or to help establish a second European land front.

THE SAME considerations hold true of the Axis submarine campaign in American waters.

We do not know what that campaign has cost the German and Italian navies in terms of undersea craft that have been sent to the bottom. The toll may have been considerable. We do know that a very large number of American vessels have been sunk and these sinkings have enormously complicated the already serious shipping problem confronting the Allies.

So important does Hitler consider that submarine campaign that no effort was made to mollify Mexico when that country protested the sinking of a Mexican freighter. The result has been to drive Mexico into war. And the effect of Mexico's addition to the ranks of the United Nations may be felt throughout Latin America and in a manner distinctly harmful to the Axis.

Renewed Axis pressures on Vichy also fit in with this "second front" strategy of Berlin and Rome.

The Italians are now crying to high heaven for a slice of French territory and they are backing up their demands by a show of force. For Laval to give way to Italian demands would destroy what little political capital he has. But the Italian demands may only be a feint employed by Hitler to get possession of the French fleet and thus alter the naval balance of power in the Mediterranean.

THE NET EFFECT of these and other moves by the Axis to destroy the possibility of a second Allied land front in Europe cannot yet be estimated. This much can be said, however. A second Allied front of some kind will be established in Europe soon even if it consists of nothing more than the use of air power alone. That front, in fact, is already in being.

The aerial bombardment of German cities, such as Luebeck, Rostock and Augsburg by the R. A. F. during recent months is still in its early stages. Bad weather has kept the R. A. F. grounded on many days. Strategic considerations have played their part in causing the British to refrain from employing against Germany the full force they are capable of unleashing. And so far the American air force has not joined in the fight.

The time is soon at hand, however, when what happened at Luebeck will seem to Germans a mere token raid in comparison with the punishment that will be visited on their cities from the air. And when that time comes Hitler will have to decide whether to concentrate on Russia alone and thus fail to give Germany the air defense it needs to repel an Allied attack or divide his air force and thus weaken the Wehrmacht's driving power in the East. Should Allied air power prove formidable enough not only will great destruction be visited on the Reich and her war production seriously hampered but the way to an invasion will be paved.

But if, in the meantime, the Allies have been forced further to divide and dissipate their strength such an invasion may prove impossible of successful execution.

The recent moves on the chessboard of war are all, in a sense, preliminary. But they are leading up to a gigantic struggle for the highest possible stakes.

Quins Visit Old Home on Birthday

Callander, Ontario, May 28 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets got a surprise present on their eighth birthday anniversary today—they were allowed to visit the humble farm house where they were born.

Marie, Yvonne, Emilie, Annette and Cecile enjoyed it immensely, romping about the place and watching the farm animals. They had dinner in the house with their parents and brothers and sisters. There were five birthday cakes.

Doriet to Succeed Laval, Tass Reports

Moscow, May 28 (INS).—Important changes are soon expected in the Vichy government and Jacques Doriet, French Fascist, is prominently being mentioned as Pierre Laval's successor, the Soviet News Agency Tass reported today from Geneva.

The changes will be brought about through Italian demands for Tunisia, Corsica and Nice, it was said.

with supplying proper food for the whole Army. In addition, it supplies the Sixth Corps Area and certain other units with clothing and equipment.

Clothing is purchased by the Philadelphia depot and is controlled here for the units the Chicago depot supplies. That involves the most rigorous ordeal of inspection a careful and inflexible buyer can devise. In this war there will be no shirts with one sleeve, no overcoats with pockets misplaced, no mismated shoes like those which plagued the doughboy in the first World War.

Out of every clothing shipment, 10 per cent is brought here and inspected minutely. Every legging passes through an inspector's hands and every eyelet and every hook is counted and checked for spacing. Trousers and blouses and overcoats are gone over by journeyman tailors. Every part of every item is checked against Quartermaster specifications.

Should too high a proportion of the 10 per cent be defective, the entire shipment is gone over and if the percentage of bad material continues, the shipment is rejected. That holds true of everything the Quartermaster Corps buys.

It is in food, though, that the Quartermaster Depot here is doing things that may go a long way toward winning the war. Food is the Chicago depot's specialty and it looks at food from several angles.

First, it must be good to eat. It must be nutritious, no matter what process it undergoes. It must be reduced to the smallest possible weight and bulk.

So they have half oranges, half grapefruits, pineapples and carrots reduced to pellets the size of a cough drop and retaining all their essential vitamins and minerals. They have a ration for fliers which packs a day's sustenance in a package less than half the size of an ordinary brick. They have a paratrooper's ration which contains three full meals and can be carried in his pockets.

Vegetables and meats are dehydrated to save weight and shipping space. Meats are boned before they are shipped. Milk and eggs are dried and powdered.

Nor do they stop there. While they labor to save weight and space they also are seeking and finding means to avoid use of precious tin and tinfoil and lead. These metals have been superseded by paper and cellophane in scores of instances; and the transition from metal to paper has been made by using existing producers of paper packages.

The Subsistence Research Laboratory, which is the heart of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot, has gone a long way in developing dehydrated foods which retain all their nutritional value and their taste. Practically all vegetables will be dehydrated for shipment overseas, as will milk and eggs. The dehydration may save as much as 93 per cent in weight and 50 to 75 per cent in bulk in the case of vegetables.

They order their dehydrated vegetables from manufacturers who are equipped to do this work but, unfortunately, are not equipped to put their product up in packages suitable for shipment overseas. So rather than go through the time-consuming business of installing packaging machinery in the dehydrating plants, the processed vegetables are shipped to cereal, cracker, chewing gum and candy manufacturers who already have packaging machinery. There the dehydrated vegetables are packed in containers designed for corn flakes or chocolate drops and the processor's containers are folded flat and shipped back to him for another consignment.

However it is not quite so simple as that. Food for the modern American Army must be packaged to be impervious to moisture, to extremes of heat and cold, to insects and unlike anything in the commercial packager's experience, to resist poisonous gases.

So the package in which dried spinach or cabbage or onions is shipped to the Army at the front may resemble a corn flakes box in shape but in no other manner. It is made of cardboard impregnated with moisture resisting wax and is wrapped in heavy paper impregnated and sealed with wax which will keep out both moisture and poison gas.

Furthermore, leafy vegetables and a few others may be compressed when they are packaged, saving about another one-third in bulk. These corn flake, cracker and candy boxes, drafted into the Army, are then packed in cases small enough to be fitted into cargo space aboard ship which would not take the big cases in which food commonly is packed.

When the cook gets his consignment of dehydrated vegetables he adds water, brings it back almost to its original weight and bulk and serves it to his hungry company or battery, who don't care if it was shipped dried or whole, as long as it tastes like what it is supposed to be. And it does.

They make sure of that here. Officers attached to the laboratory, from the chief down, spend a large part of their time eating. They try out their own ideas before turning them over to the men in the field. Every new concoction is given laboratory tests for vitamin and mineral content and then is cooked and served to the laboratory staff in a test for taste.

City's Magnificent Edifices Should Be on Your 'Must' List

THREE REMBRANDTS from the Mellon collection hang on this wall of the National Gallery of Art. Paint has been used to render the wires holding them almost invisible

(Because of wartime restrictions on gasoline, annual leave and—just around the corner—train and bus travel, stay-at-home vacations may be the rule here this summer. This is the sixth in a series by Mr. Kelly describing recreational opportunities in the Capital's own backyard.)

By Edward J. Kelly
Administrative Officer, National Capital Parks

Your visit to the U. S. Capitol may be a matter of great moment. It has become popular for the blase Washingtonian to cast aspersions on the demeanor of both Houses of the Congress, and the interest taken in their sessions, but since the charge that not more than 10 per cent of the local population has taken the trouble to witness the Nation's lawmakers in session is probably well-based, you should go and see for yourself. Congress is doing big things these days, and you may wish to tell your grandchildren that "I was there when . . ."

The building itself is one of the world's finest. The magnificent dome, the classic architecture, and the sculptural groups and decorated pediments of the exterior facades and portals could occupy your attention for an entire vacation period. In any city other than Washington, this magnificent edifice would be an object of great wonderment. The interior with its great rotunda, statuary hall, small rotundas, Senate and House chambers, and many great halls, contains some of the world's great art and sculpture, depicting the saga of America.

The United States Supreme Court building, at East Capitol and First Streets, is another "must" on the sightseer's tour. The interior of this great marble temple of justice is not equalled in magnificence and simple beauty in any other building in the world, and if you are fortunate enough to be present when the black-robed Justices who compose the Nation's supreme tribunal meet in session, you will never forget the impressive experience. You may learn when the court will be in session by telephoning NAtional 5328.

A visit to the National Gallery of Art is another promise to yourself that you may keep during your stay-at-home vacation. This is another Washington institution that is beyond all adjectives. Made possible by the philanthropy of the late Andrew W. Mellon, the gallery is the depository of art treasures equal to the collections of the Louvre, the Vatican galleries and other famous Old World galleries. An easy rule for the layman to follow in order to obtain the most in enjoyment and understanding from the paintings of the great masters is to join one of the tours of the gallery, conducted by the expert staff guides. The service is free.

An elevator flight to the top of the Washington Monument will give you an opportunity to survey the rapidly changing Washington scene. The Lincoln Memorial is within a pleasant walking distance, and the great statue of Lincoln by Daniel Chester French will inspire a spirit of hushed reverence. You will acquire a fresh understanding of the meaning of freedom from reading the Emancipator's second inaugural address, carved on the north wall, and a greater appreciation of true patriotism and sacrifice from the immortal Gettysburg address which is inscribed on the south wall of the meomorial.

The Pan American Union Building holds an added interest for citizens of the United States in the light of present-day hemisphere developments, and offers an opportunity to see the good neighbor policy actually at work. The unique relief maps will help to acquaint you with the topography and shore lines of the Latin countries and you will enjoy a brief pause for relaxation in the beautiful South American patio and tropical gardens which rank high among the real beauty spots in the National Capital.

You may not have time to visit, on the same day, the U. S. Grant or George Gordon Meade Memorials in Union Square, at the eastern extremity of the Mall; the National Society D. A. R., or American Red Cross Buildings, the Corcoran Art Gallery, or any of the many other places of public interest in the central area, but they should be on your list for your next day off.

PLATTER CHATTER

Stay in Own Back Yard and Like It; Man's Offering May Be Barbecued Meat, Woman's Contribution a Sugarless Dessert

GYPSY spirits will have to find different ways of expression this Memorial Day than in former years. The usual excursions that Washingtonians are accustomed to take to seashore, mountains and countryside will be curtailed because of gasoline rationing.

Green pastures may seem to have more "come hither" on first thought, but when all things are added up, the backyard, terrace or porch of one's own home has advantages. There's no getting up at the crack of dawn to start on a long drive on a crowded highway, there's no lunch to pack, no bugs to swat, no unquenched thirst, and no long drive home. Those are but a few of the blessings to be derived from a backyard party.

A built-in-the-yard fireplace is a grand thing to have but not necessary when you can improvise a barbecue spot with nothing more than an old stove grate laid over two stones, or use an inexpensive cast iron grill with flat feet that rest firmly on the ground. Barbecue equipment, tea-wagon style, to be rolled around on rubber tired wheels, carrying a charcoal pit, a spit, table top and shelves, is doing the cooking in the manner grand.

But it is the goodness of the food that really counts and how adept you are as a buckaroo. There's no end to the foods that take eagerly to out-of-door cookery and keep a crowd cheery.

Barbecuing Man's Hobby

Barbecueing is essentially a man's hobby. Here's the chance for the women to take time out and let the men do the honors. And you may be sure that when man takes over there will be all the necessary equipment for carrying out his hobby. All the things that save time, trouble and steps, wooden racks filled with all the necessary and unnecessary spices, more sauces than you can shake a faggot at, spatula sets, long handled spoons so he won't scorch himself, asbestos-lined mittens for handling hot dishes, and anything else that is needed for efficiency.

Barbecued chicken, steaks and frankfurters are always favorites. But if you want to cook the food inside and serve it outside there are some dishes that can be prepared in advance without flit or flurry, and so leave the cook to eat with pleasure and leisure. That should be the formula for out-of-door meals.

Ham loaf made in the up-side-down manner is a meat that can be prepared in advance and served with potato salad and other fixings. Recipe for making it follows:

Upside Down Ham Loaf.

Mix together 1 pound ham, 1½ pounds ground veal, 2 slightly beaten eggs, 1 cup cracker crumbs, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Grease a large baking dish generously. Place 6 medium sized slices pineapple with a maraschino cherry in the center and between each slice. Over this spread the meat, packing into place. Spread ½ sauce made by following recipe over the pineapple and then spread rest of sauce over the top of the loaf. Bake in oven or roaster at 400 degrees for 1½ hours. To make the sauce: Combine ¾ cup brown sugar, ¼ cup vinegar, and 1 teaspoon ground mustard.

Ready and Waiting

Barbecue Veal Roast, accompanied by a casserole of scalloped potatoes and buttered young beets is another tempting combination. This can be prepared previous to serving time too. To make the barbecue veal use the following recipe:

Barbecue Veal Roast.

Rub a 4-pound rolled shoulder of veal with salt and pepper. Combine ¾ cup tomato catsup, ½ cup water, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoons dry mustard and a dash of cayenne pepper. Pour sauce over meat. Bake in 300 degree oven for about 3 hours.

A hot Spanish entree made of cubed tender meat in tomato sauce with chili powder seasoning, onions and possibly beans, will be a zestful dish to feed a large crowd. As an innovation, serve the entree in the seed cups of Calavo half-shells and you will have your salad and entree all in one. Don't attempt to warm the calavo. Take the fruit out of the refrigerator long enough beforehand to remove all chill. Sprinkle cut surfaces lightly with lemon juice and salt and fill the half-shells just before ready to eat. Add ripe olive sandwiches to the menu along with several other relishes, then with a sweet dessert there's nothing else needed except a cold or hot beverage.

Sugarless Dessert

What could be more fitting for a Memorial Day dessert than a sugarless dessert? A fudge cake is possible without sugar if you use the recipe that Miss Mary Turner has developed in her kitchen as director, Home Service Bureau, Potomac Electric Power Co. Her recipe follows:

Fudge Cake—Cream 7 tablespoons shortening in large bowl of electric mixer until consistency of heavy mayonnaise. Add 1 cup dark corn syrup gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add 2 whole eggs, one at a time, beating well after the addition of each egg. Add 2½ squares melted chocolate and beat until thoroughly blended. Add 1¾ cups cake flour sifted with ⅞ teaspoon soda, alternately with ¾ cup milk to which has been added 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat only until batter is smooth. Pour into greased 8-inch layer cake pans and bake in preheated oven, at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Spread with fudge frosting, made without sugar, for which the recipe follows:

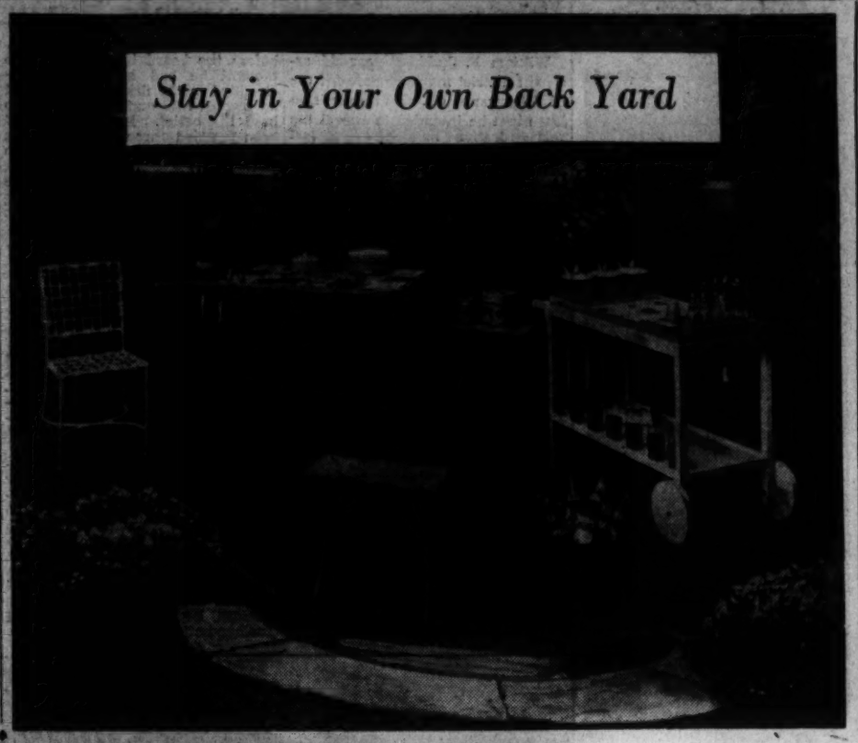
Fudge Frosting—Melt 3 squares chocolate over low heat. Add 1 can condensed milk, blend well and cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla and spread on cake. Yield: Frosting for two 8-inch layers.

You can make an Apricot Honey Pie too as dessert using little sugar. The following recipe is the one Miss Turner also developed in her test kitchen.

Apricot Honey Pie—Mix 3 tablespoons cornstarch with 3 tablespoons flour. Add ¼ cup milk. Mix until smooth. Add ½ cup honey, ¼ teaspoon salt and 2 cups milk. Cook on low heat until thick. Beat 2 egg yolks, and add the milk mixture slowly. Cook on low heat for 5 minutes. Cool. Pour into pastry shell. Beat 2 egg whites stiff, add 6 tablespoons sugar gradually, beating constantly. Fold in 3 tablespoons dried apricots that have been cooked and sieved. Swirl on baked pastry shell. Bake in 325 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

Retain Vitamins

Tomato juice will retain its valuable vitamins if it is stored securely covered, in the refrigerator. So for the sake of your budget you can buy tomato juice in large sized cans or jars, then open and transfer the juice to several smaller jars with tightly fitting lids.



Picnic devotees will carry on in back yards this year. Attractive spots like the one shown above, plus good food, will make family and guests content to stay at home tomorrow to celebrate Memorial Day. Here, both eyes and stomach can feast. Fried chicken, the picnic classic, can be done to a turn either on the charcoal grill or in the fireplace, left. Steaks are being broiled by the man of the hour, but the fireplace is workable for almost any type of cooking.

Malted Nectar Punch Appealing Beverage For Kiddies' Picnic

Children love picnics. And there is no better way to entertain children and their little friends. If it is only the sewing table set in the yard as the center of attraction, loaded with lots of grated vegetable sandwiches, the cookie jar and cool, nutritious beverage, in a tall glass, it will be fun.

Malted Pear Nectar Punch is a wholesome form of sweet party beverage that asks nothing from the sugar ration. The sweet fruitiness of nectar combines well with malted milk and allows dilution with the attractive but poorly nutritive soda water and ginger ale. Apricot, plum or peach nectar, of the same whole fruit character as the pear nectar of the following recipe are equally usable in the recipe.

Malted Pear Nectar Punch—Combine 2-3 cup dry malted milk and 1 cup water and bring to boiling point; stir until smooth. Chill. Combine with 3 cups chilled pear nectar, 1 2-3 cups ginger ale, 1¾ cups orange soda water and few drops red food coloring. Stir to blend. Serve very cold. Makes about 2 quarts.

Biddle Orders Deportation Of Bridges

production and labor-management unity, and will urge all workers and unions I can influence to redouble efforts in speeding production to win the main fight—the fight against the Axis."

Biddle told newspapermen that his rulings about the Communist Party in the Bridges case would not, in his opinion, serve as a blanket ruling for all alien Communist deportation cases. He said he believed it would be necessary to prove each case separately.

Union Dominated by Party

The Attorney General found that the Communist Party dominated and controlled the Marine Workers Industrial Union and that Bridges belonged to both the marine union and to the Communist Party.

Accordingly, said the Attorney General, Bridges was not entitled to remain in the United States, but must be sent back to Australia, whence he came in April, 1920, when he was a 20-year-old seaman.

The Biddle opinion recited that the Communist Party, as formed in 1919, was a part of the Third International, which advocated a class struggle, approved illegal methods, undertook systematic agitation in the Army and urged the renouncing of patriotism.

"Penetration into trade unions was strongly emphasized in Communist literature," the Attorney General declared . . . "Fractions were organized within particular unions to advance the aim of communism."

Eleswhere, the opinion said "testimony on front organizations showed that they were presented to the public for some legitimate reform objective, but actually used by the Communist Party to carry on its activities pending the time when the Communists believe they can seize power through revolution."

Among front organizations, the Attorney General listed the Workers Alliance the International Labor Defense, the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, the American Negro Congress and the American League Against War and Fascism.

Bridges became active in trade union work in San Francisco in 1933. The Attorney General commented that "it is apparent that he has done much to improve the conditions that existed among the longshoremen." However, the opinion said the fact that Bridges was a "good" labor leader, and said he thought a Communist could be a good labor man, did not show that Bridges himself was not a Communist.

The fight to deport Bridges began in 1938. After a long hearing, Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School ruled, as trial examiner, that Bridges was not a Communist at the time the warrant for him was issued and accordingly was not liable, under the law, to be deported.

The law was amended in 1940 to provide that any alien who had been a Communist at any time since he entered this country should be deported. A new proceeding was started against Bridges, under the new act, and Judge Charles B. Sears, retired, of the New York Court of Appeals, presided over a hearing that lasted 10 weeks.

Judge Sears ruled that Bridges ought to be deported.

The Board of Immigration Appeals disagreed with Judge Sears in a 99-page opinion. This brought the case before the Attorney General for final decision, and he reversed the board.

The Attorney General's decision does not mean that Bridges will be placed on the next boat for Australia, or even any vessel sailing this year.

He still can appeal to the courts.

Jap Cruiser Hit, 2 Ships Sunk by Subs

rine attacks bring to 69 the total our undersea service has bagged in the Pacific, counting only actions officially announced by the Navy Department.

The American submarine total includes 44 Japanese vessels sunk, 13 probably sunk and 12 others damaged.

Unofficial estimates of Japanese ship losses by American military and naval action place the total at about 248 vessels. They list 44 warships and 88 other craft sunk, 14 warships and 17 non-combatant craft probably sunk and 47 men-o-war and 38 other vessels as damaged.

Three School Board Members Reappointed

Three members of the Board of Education, whose terms were to expire June 30, have been reappointed by the Justices of the District Court to serve another three years. They are Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, C. Melvin Sharpe and John H. Wilson.

Brazilians Join War on Subs, Sinking One

ington to "shoot on sight."

It was disclosed earlier in the day that Brazilian pilots already had bombed and probably sunk at least one Axis submarine off the northeast coast.

Official news of the attacks was made public in the following communique issued by the air ministry:

"Attacks of submarines in Brazilian territorial waters against our merchant ships prompted action by the air force to safeguard our sovereignty the liberty of our navigation and the life of undefended sailors who are being machine gunned and cannonaded—in one case after the vessel was torpedoed and left unable to continue its voyage.

"After inhuman aggression to the steamer Commandante Lyra, three submarines were located, pursued and attacked along the Brazilian coasts, one of them being sunk."

U. S. S. Blakely Survives Second U-Boat Attack

St. Lucia, British West Indies, May 27, (Delayed) (AP).—Surviving a second undersea attack within three days, the crippled United States destroyer Blakeley reached port here tonight after a sea and air battle with a pack of Axis submarines lurking off Martinique.

Sinking of one or more of the submarines by United States planes was indicated, but whether in this later clash or the earlier one was not disclosed.

(Reuters, British news agency, said in London that a submarine which attacked the Blakeley had been sunk and that it was the second destroyed in that area within a week.)

The Blakeley was damaged by a torpedo on Monday in territorial waters of Martinique, Vichy-French island only 20 miles from here. Six of her crew were killed and 12 injured.

She reached Fort de France, Martinique, under her own power, however, and today put out for Port Castries, St. Lucia. Crippled, she could make only 10 knots.

The attacks by the pack of submarines followed. Naval authorities, already aware of the submarine's presence in this area, were not surprised.

(This dispatch did not disclose whether the destroyer was hit again. Previous accounts of the first attack had listed the Blakeley's casualties at 10 missing and six wounded, but whether the new casualty figures referred to the first or second attack was not clear.

28 Survivors Landed From Panamanian Ship

Barnegat, N. J., May 28 (AP).—Nine seamen were killed in the torpedoing of a medium-sized Panamanian tanker off the Atlantic Coast Monday afternoon, May 25, the Navy disclosed today.

Six of the 28 survivors were injured. They were landed here by a Navy vessel a few hours after the attack.

'Blame Mr. Roosevelt,' Sub Skipper Tells Victims

Key West, Fla., May 28 (AP).—A submarine commander who blamed the plight of his torpedo victims on President Roosevelt bobbed up for the second time within a week in survivors' stories of the sinking of a United States merchantman off the southern coast of Cuba May 23.

Five members of the sunken ship's crew told from hospital beds here how the submarine surfaced after the attack and the captain came on deck to express regrets in broken English and suggest there was "no one to blame but Mr. Roosevelt."

Ome Cady, 17, of Denver, Colo., said that "someone in the lifeboat asked for drinking water and cigarettes and a member of the crew started below for some, but he was called back on deck by the captain, who said, 'Let Mr. Roosevelt supply them.'"

"The only thing they would give us was the time," commented Herbert Sellers, 18, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Only two were believed to have been lost from a crew that included 39 merchant sailors and a naval gun crew of 15 enlisted men and an officer.

'U. S. Warship' Survivors Prove to Be British

Recife, Brazil, May 28 (AP).—The arrival of the Argentine steamer Rio Iguazu today with 52 survivors of the torpedoed British ship Barrdale knocked one of the principal props from under the week-old Italian claim to have torpedoed and sunk a United States battleship of the Maryland class.

The Rome radio for several days had been broadcasting statements that the survivors picked up by the Rio Iguazu were from the United States battleship.

It was disclosed here that the Barrdale, attacked May 17 450 miles off Martinique, sank within four minutes after a torpedo exploded in her engine room. The crew was picked up from two lifeboats the next day.

Chinese Forces Still Hold Kinhwa

vaders' losses were listed simply as "heavy" or "considerable."

The main Japanese attempt on Kinhwa apparently was made from the east. After failing Tuesday, the Japanese brought up 10,000 reinforcements for a second attack which lasted all day yesterday, ending in a Japanese repulse.

The Chinese charged that the Japanese used poison gas in the Chekiang drive, but said it had had only small effect because the Chinese had been prepared.

On China's second great front, the Yunnan-Burma region to the southwest, the high command reported that Chinese forces had recaptured "many points" on the outskirts of Tengyueh, in western Yunnan, and that they now were "converging on the city itself," which fell to the Japanese three weeks ago.

Chinese gains in Burma also were reported, but the communique made it plain heavy fighting still was underway in both Yunnan and Burma.

There was especially heavy fighting about 12 miles west of Kinhwa in the vicinity of Lanchi, where from 30 to 40 Japanese planes took part. Here the enemy was repulsed, losing 1000 killed.

The Chinese acknowledged loss of the railway town of Tangki, 16 miles west of Kinhwa, after the Japanese brought up reinforcements and lost more than 1400 killed. In two other clashes in this region the Japanese were declared to have lost 500 and 300 men respectively.

On the coast of Fukien Province, about 125 miles southeast of Kinhwa, the Japanese may have been preparing a new landing attempt by shelling the island port of Santuao at dusk Tuesday from six or seven warships. The Chinese beat off the attack, the communique stated.

Insurance Man Appeals Surprise Reclassification in Draft

William F. Judd, 33-year-old assistant district manager here for the Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, said last night he intended to appeal the reclassification handed down last week by the District Board of Appeals, which moved him from Selective Service class 3-A to 1-A on a move instituted by someone other than himself.

Judd declared he had no knowledge of why his case had been brought before the board and said that the first he knew about his reclassification was when he read of the action in afternoon papers.

His case was one of 26 appeals handled by the board. Four, asking to be reclassified from 1-A to 3-A, were approved, and another, appealing from 1-A as a conscientious objector, was placed in 1-A-O, which makes him eligible for noncombat duty.

5 Stays Recommended

Of the 20 other cases, two were returned to the local boards involved for further information and the others were rejected, although in five separate instances the appeals boards recommended that stays of induction, ranging up to 90 days, be granted.

Judd, who resides at 3931 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, said he assumed his case had been brought before the board by someone who thought he had been improperly classified in the first place, but had no specific information on which to base his belief. He said he had been married three years, that his wife works, and that they have no children.

"I'm not going to appeal with the intent of escaping service," he said. "If my country needs me, I'm ready to serve. But I doubt if I'd be accepted for physical reasons, and, moreover, I know plenty of single fellows who haven't been called up. It seems a bit raw to me."

Occupational Survey Next

Meantime, William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, announced that occupational questionnaires soon would be sent to men between 45 and 65 who signed up in the third registration April 27. The questionnaires, he said, would be employed as guides in the mobilization of workers for war industries.

Since local draft boards are now finishing their inventories of men listed in the first and second registrations not yet in the armed services, the new mailing will complete the classification of all man power available in the District.

Men who registered on April 27 will receive their questionnaires early in June, said Leahy, who added that the War Man Power Commission expects to gain the greater part of its recruited strength as a result of the information secured from the returns.

Selective Service headquarters also announced that the first of the volunteer officer candidates would be inducted today at Fort Myer, Va. These men, listed under the 3-A classification who have volunteered to receive officer training, will leave Selective Service headquarters at 8:45 a. m.

Hains Point Tea House to Be Closed Over Gas Scarcity

One of Washington's most popular summer rendezvous, the Little Tea House at Hains Point, will be closed for the duration after next Sunday, Capt. F. W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, announced last night.

Dependent on the business of motorists for patronage, Capt. Hoover stated the association felt it inconsistent with the general effort to reduce gasoline consumption to keep the tea house open.

For the convenience of bicyclists, however, the soft drink counter in the rear of the establishment will be open Saturday afternoons and Sundays beginning June 6, until further notice.

If Your Diet Leaves You Hungry and Cross—Eat; Good Steak Often Will Cure Snappish Temper

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN you get so hungry on your diet that you are ready to snap at anybody who comes along, it's time you eat. Go right out and tie into a good-sized steak. And have a potato with it. Your bad disposition is a bad sign.

It may be a symptom of actual weakness. In cutting your calories down so that most of the carbohydrates are omitted, the burning of the fat calories is slowed down and you may not have enough energy to go on.

To avoid this, take smaller meals and have some between meal calories in the form of carbohydrates to furnish quick energy. Have a big glass of tomato juice between breakfast and lunch and in the midafternoon have a banana, an orangeade made with just a little sugar, hot tea with lemon and one lump of sugar, or a pep cocktail of orange juice with a raw egg beaten into it. The fruit juices help to maintain the mineral and vitamin balance and are excellent for the overweight.

Bedtime Snack

If you find that a snack before going to bed is a great comfort, you can have it—but take it in place of dessert with your dinner. Nutritionally, a glass of skim milk would be the thing to have. But if it's something stronger you want, just count the calories in. Alcohol is just calories. It is not food in the sense that it furnishes anything for repair or protection.

Since you don't want these between-meal calories to interfere with your loss of weight, they must be scrupulously counted, whatever they add up to must then be lopped off your regular meals so that your day's total calories do not exceed 1200. This spacing of your calories to allow for between meal snacks will help to keep you from experiencing the acute hunger pangs that make reducing such a trial to you and all concerned.

Consider Temperament

Take your temperament into consideration and you will get along much better on your diet. Don't put too great a strain on your will power. Diet the way it is easiest for you.

It may be that simply skipping one meal altogether works the best for you. I couldn't do it that way, but you might rather not have any food at all than to tantalize yourself with a small meal. If you do this, you must be sure to get all your protective foods at these two meals. Otherwise you will not improve your health along with your weight loss.

Perhaps you know the list of protective foods to be eaten daily but here it is again: A green leafy vegetable, a second vegetable and a raw vegetable salad, a citrus fruit and a second fruit, an egg, two glasses of skim milk, four slices of 100 per cent whole grain bread, three small pats of butter and a serving of lean meat, fish or fowl. You can switch these foods around as you please—just don't skip one! You need them all during the day.

Heed the Label On Fabrics to Be Dry Cleaned

Today, when every ounce of material must be made to count, it is unpatriotic waste as well. Hence the growing trend among women bent on conservation to ask "Will it dry clean?" as often as they ask "Will it wash?"

Fabric manufacturers are taking increasing pains to make it crystal clear to the consumer that many fabrics should not merely be dry cleaned, but should be trusted only to a reliable dry cleaner. The smart new crepey weaves particularly need expert treatment. It is in the nature of crepe to stretch, and it takes knowledge and skill to prevent it. A good dry cleaner, however, can clean a crepe to the same perfection of fit as it boasted brand new.

It is folly to ignore the labels which manufacturers have gone to considerable trouble and expense to place on merchandise. And if you meet a saleslgirl who says airily, "Oh, that label doesn't mean a thing, this fabric washes like a dream,"—believe her at your own risk.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Learning Her Husband Had Flirtation With Secretary, Wife Insists He Committed Adultery; He's Innocent; But How Prove Innocence to Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You seem to understand the male of the species better than he understands himself. Therefore, I am writing to you for advice. Recently, while my wife was away on an extended trip, I took advantage of her absence to indulge in several drinking parties with members of both sexes,—including some young folks from the office, one of whom was my secretary. Upon one of these occasions, I visited this young lady's apartment, where drinks were served and no one else was present. I also had her out to the house alone and served drinks. We indulged in some petting and kissing two or three times; but nothing further was even considered.

I was not in love with this young woman, although I had given her cash for personal work done; and did make her gifts from time to time. She was a very capable business woman and had my confidence. Therefore, I fell in the habit of discussing my personal affairs with her, including some difficulties I was having with my wife. And I respected her advice. At various times, my wife was discussed in a very unfavorable light with her.

On my wife's return, I discontinued all such drinking parties and, after informing my wife of all the details, recently broke off all relations with the secretary,—who is no longer in my employ. Because I had lied to my wife repeatedly about this entire matter, the truth came to light only bit by bit, very painfully, until finally she had the whole story. Now, because I am normally attracted to the fair sex, my wife has lost confidence in me and believes that I am guilty of adultery. Of that I am innocent; but I admit circumstantial evidence is against me; and I have no way of proving my innocence.

What assurance can I give my wife that I am not guilty of the charge, and that never again will I depart from the strait and narrow path? Do you think it possible to restore the mutual trust and confidence upon which our marriage was founded? Or do you recommend separation and steps leading to divorce? I love my wife and family devotedly and want to do all in my power to make amends for past injuries; but I am at my wits' end to know what to do. Harassed by this ever-present misunderstanding, I cannot perform my duties, and neither can my wife resume her wifely duties and forget what has happened. Your advice is greatly needed. Sincerely,

DISTRESSED HUSBAND.

No Point in Wearing Sackcloth and Ashes

DEAR D. H.: In my opinion, the time has come for you to cast aside your sackcloth and ashes and go about your business with stoic self containment—leaving your wife to pull herself out of her jealous, evilly-imagining doldrums as best she can. Continued immersion in tortured self-reproach will avail you nothing. Further protestations of your innocence of adultery and hangdog solicitations of forgiveness for your foolish transgressions are likewise futile—when directed at a smugly self righteous woman who would, apparently, rather nurse a sense of irreparable injury in the situation, than try to cooperate in healing the wound to the relationship.

Granted that you violated the gentleman's code and, worse yet, tore at the foundations of psychic solidarity in marriage, in subjecting your wife to unfavorable discussion with your secretary—still, the advice-seeking nature of that incipiently disloyal trend clearly shows that your wife had long since and progressively fallen down on her job as your first and best friend, confidante and morale builder, thus leaving you unconsciously hungering for compensatory companionship of mind and heart, which you eventually developed in some measure with your secretary. Considering the latter's trusted role in your business life, it was fairly natural that you would "spill the beans" to her when personal vexations weighed heavily on your mind and a disinterested viewpoint seemed needed. And, considering the fact that you are a man and she a woman, it was equally natural that, in time, you would develop a sentimental fondness for her, in consequence of her consistent attitude of helpfully friendly interest.

By all of which I mean to say that your wife, through her own faults of omission and commission through the years, has been largely instrumental in bringing her present dismay upon herself. And the same complacent stupidity which undoubtedly animated her disappointing (and perhaps sorely trying) performance in the past is still operating full blast today—to bitterly intensify and prolong a very serious situation. Whatever her virtues—and I daresay they are many, of the "respectable" woman variety—your wife lacks the great spiritual gift of personal humility.

If she had the clear insight and gentle charity which that quality bestows, she would have made this time-of-reckoning an occasion for mutual forgiveness and chastened renewal of marriage vows. She would have been less concerned with prying into your peccadillos, once partially confessed, than with searching her own record to discover wherein she had simultaneously fallen short of your expectations. And when you implored her to forget your repented mistakes and give you a chance to undo the damage done, she would have agreed on one condition, namely, that you be equally generous with her;—if, as I say, she owned the saving grace of personal humility.

In one sense, at least, she appears to be a lesser person than you—in the sense that she declines to take profit from her mistakes. She declines, indeed, to face the possibility that she has made mistakes—or that she could be mistaken, in hysterically insisting that you are guilty of adultery. It is not a compliment to the quality of her thought, that she holds grimly to the conviction that a flirtation must inevitably lead to that denouement. As has been said, "Evil to him who evil thinketh."

By her morbid disposition to see the situation as worse than it is, she is undoubtedly hastening the day when, actually, it will be as bad as,—or worse than,—she proclaims it to be. And the only way she can avert that catastrophpe, which she is not so willfully inviting, is by purging her mind of pestilent thoughts, opening her heart to compassion and penitence, and dedicating herself to the proposition of starting anew, with you, to restore (by faith and action) the trust and confidence that have been so badly shaken.

These remarks are addressed more to your wife than to you—for the reason that it is her attitude of today, and not your short-lived misconduct of yesterday, that threatens to wreck the marriage. If she fails to grasp, or ignores, the import of this advice and continues to place sullen, nagging and suspicious emphasis upon the past, I believe you would be justified in suggesting to her, coolly but kindly, that perhaps a complete separation is the best solution of the intolerable situation. This suggestion, sincerely and unemotionally tendered, probably will shock her into a more constructive frame of mind, and cause her to promptly abandon her vengefully punitive tactics of pained distrust and lurid accusation.

Glamour debs of the last three years have organized the Post-Glamour Deb League to do war work. The young women will sell programs at benefit fetes, act as hosteses at garden parties and old house tours, model fashions at luncheon fashion shows and pose for advance publicity photographs for war benefits.

Canteen Service

Mrs. Featherton Dabbler is sponsoring a new defense activity, a canteen service for unmarried commissioned officers. Local debs will officiate at the canteen, which will be in the space formerly occupied by Mrs. Dabbler's "Ye Olde Tyme Gift Shoppe," next door to the Hotel Swank. The canteen was was to have opened yesterday morning, but was delayed until afternoon as Mrs. Dabbler had an appointment with her psychoanalyst. "We expect to be very casual about the whole thing," she explained, as she arrived several hours behind schedule.

Plan Embassy Reception For Dr. C. Parra Perez

Venezuelan Minister of Foreign Affairs To Arrive Here Next Wednesday

By Patricia Grady

Prime ministers, presidents, foreign ministers, have become the order of the day here since Washington has become the Capital of the United Nations. But excitement increases rather than diminishes with the arrival of each new foreign dignitary and when the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Venezuela, Dr. C. Parra Perez, arrives on Wednesday the town will turn out to meet him.

A large group of Washingtonians will have a chance to geet the Latin American statesman at the 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock reception at which the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante will entertain next Saturday. But between his arrival on Wednesday and his departure on Sunday, fetes are being planned to fill every minute of his time not taken up by official conferences.

Accompanying the Foreign Minister—he will come in answer to an invitation of the United States Government—will be the Venezuelan Minister of Agriculture, Rodolfo Rojas, and J. M. Herrera Mendoza, the president of the Central Bank of Venezuela. They will share honors with the Foreign Minister at the embassy reception.

Invitations will be sent out by the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante for the event to Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justices, other high Government officials, some Senators and Representatives, heads of diplomatic missions, counselors of embassies and legations and a scattering of residential society.

Began Career as Attache in France

A lawyer, Dr. Perez received his doctor of laws degree from the University of Los Andes, the Foreign Minister started out his diplomatic career in 1912 when he was sent to Paris as an attache. From an orthodox beginning, his rise was meteoric and in 1924 he became his country's minister to Italy where he served 12 years. He entered the cabinet in 1936 when he became minister of National Education but he was soon back in the diplomatic field.

After two tours of duty abroad—one as Minister to Great Britain, the other as Minister to Spain—he was recalled to Caracas to become Minister of Foreign Affairs. An old hand at foreign missions, Dr. Perez has represented his country at a number of international conferences including the famous Rio conference of last January. A noted historian and author, Dr. Perez has seven books to his credit, two of which were written in French.

After five days in the Capital, Dr. Perez and his party will go to Detroit and Buffalo. June 10 will find him in New York making his plans to return to Caracas. But hardly will the Foreign Minister have left Washington, than Capitalites will be dropping curtseys to King George II of Greece whose arrival is still scheduled for June 10.

Albert Deweys To Have Guests

Other visitors to Washington who will have quite a social whirl during their stay here are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen of New York who will arrive this weekend to be the house guests of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dewey. Mr. Frelinghuysen feels that Washington is definitely "in the family" for his grandfather made the Capital his headquarters when he was Secretary of State under President Arthur.

First party on their weekend schedule is the dinner that Percy Blair will give Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Dewey will honor their house guests at a buffet supper Sunday evening and the next day Mr. and Mrs. Frelinghuysen will return to New York where they will be joined by Mrs. Dewey after June 7, when the lease is up on her Dumbarton Avenue home. Though the Deweys have not yet made their plans for the summer, Mrs. Dewey will spend a few weeks in New York with her mother.

Celebrating their wedding anniversary on June 4, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey are planning a small dinner of 16 guests.

Turner–Murphy Engagement Made Known

Good Neighbor Theme Accented At 'Choproast'

A group of diplomats, with the emphasis on Latin-Americans, donned their most informal manner and went out to the Charleston Terrace home of Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas last evening for a choproast party in honor of Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the former Minister of the Dominican Republic.

Small tables, covered with bright-colored cloths, were set up on the terrace where the guests crowded around the outdoor fireplace to watch the ceremonies of the chop grilling. Typically North American ice cream cones topped off the South American repast.

Among the guests were Senora de Castillo Najera, whose husband, the Mexican Ambassador, and Senorita Erma de Castillo Najera will return from Mexico June 10, the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Troncoso, who canceled a trip to Pittsburgh in order to attend the party, the Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the Vice President of the Phillipines, Sergio Osmena, the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, Senora de Munilla, whose husband, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, is now in Florida, and Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro.

Others in the pleasant gathering were Mme. Ulises Espaillat, Col. and Mrs. Lee Wade, Senora de la Vega who is visiting here from California; the Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation, Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Dr. Fernando Sacasa, Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dreszer, Col. and Mrs. Consuelo Seaone, Mr. and Mrs. Barge L. Hartz, Mrs. Willard M. Kochenderfer, Alberto Bareto, Miss Anita Cajigas, Tom McMullen, Paul Cajigas, Miss Margaret Hart, Miss Betty Hynes and several others.

Egyptian Envoy And Mme. Hassan Give Dinner

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ian Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Childs, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Grosner, Miss Irene Boyle and Anis Azer, Egyptian Commercial Counselor.

Circus Fans Greet Circus Owners at Robert Party

Washington's most enthusiastic circus fans—Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, had a long chat with circus owners John Ringling North and Harry North yesterday afternoon.

The occasion was the informal 5-to-7 party given by Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert in honor of the Norths, including not only John and Harry, but also the former's wife, all of whom have been widely entertained here the past few days.

Others attending the late afternoon get-together in Mrs. Robert's Mayflower apartment were Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper and Senator and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews of Florida, Mrs. John H. Towers, whose husband is now in London; Tom Johnson, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, William McEvoy, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Otis Wingo, John O'Donnell, and several others.

Assisting the hostess was her mother, Mrs. Harold Walker.

Countes de Chambrun Attends Party for Mme. Pastoriza

Center of attention at a large luncheon yesterday was Countess Pierre de Chambrun, who with her husband is in Washington for a few days before going on to New York. The count and countess, who visited here briefly earlier in the season, have been in Palm Beach for some time. After a few days here, they will go on to New York and then probably on to a summer resort. Plans are now under way for them to return to Washington in October, however, and they will be here for a year at least—probably for the duration.

Countess de Chambrun, smartly turned out in a black frock, set off with a bright red straw hat, was among the guests entertained at luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Leigh Wade. Arranged in compliment to Senora de Pastoriza, who has been widely entertained since she arrived here recently from Santo Domingo, the party took place at the Mayflower Hotel.

Receiving in the lounge of the hotel, the hostess wore a becoming yellow suit, with a matching hat. A corsage of gardenias on her shoulder completed her costume. Also wearing gardenias was the guest of honor, who had chosen a black and white ensemble, featuring a tailored black frock, with white accents and a small white straw hat.

Protocol bowed out of the picture, as guests found places at the long table, without benefit of place cards. "I wanted this to be an informal luncheon," said Mrs. Wade, who admitted later that her original plan to have the party a very small one—"not more than half a dozen guests."

More than 30 were on hand for the pleasant fete. Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, was ranking guest.

Others there included Mrs. Eugene Cox, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Mrs. Barge Hartz, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Mrs. Robert Cahill, Mrs. George Trible, Mrs. Mackenzie Davison, Mrs Barge Hartz, Mrs. Walter Layman, Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, Mrs. Charles Windsor, Mrs. Consuelo Seoane, Mrs. Irene Williams, Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. John Beatty, Mrs. Harry Daniels, Mme. Elvina Dreszer, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. Harry Duncan, Mrs. Charles McEnerney, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Clarence Grosner, Mrs. Robert Le Baron, Mrs. Theodore Koenig, Mrs. Franklin Schneider, Mrs. Thomas Dawson, and Mrs. Edith Randon, who will entertain at a late afternoon party today in honor of Countess de Chambrun.

The latter is not to be confused with Countess Rene de Chambrun, daughter of Pierre Laval. Count Jean Pierre is an anti-Vichy cousin of Rene, and is a great-great-grandson of Lafayette. His wife is the former Giselle Hugo-Gratry, and his father is the 75-year-old Marquis Pierre de Chambrun, husband of the former Margaret Rives Nichols of Cincinnati.

The Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne entertained at a reception yesterday in the drawing room of the Embassy in honor of the couple. Among those in attendance were Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor, their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville, another daughter, Dr. Mabel H. Grosvenor, and Miss Grosvenor's cousin, Mrs. Leonard Muller of Miami, Fla., who will be an attendant at Monday's wedding. Others attending included members of the Embassy staff.

Miss Mannevillette Sullivan, who will be one of Miss Grosvenor's bridesmaids, will entertain members of the bridal party tonight with a dinner at the Shoreham and tomorrow night following the wedding rehearsal the bride-elect will be hostess to the same group at a buffet supper.

Among the events planned for Sunday is the breakfast to be given by Miss Frances Boone at the Toll House Tavern for the bridal party and a small group of guests. That afternoon Miss Janice Hale and Miss Martha Colmetz will entertain jointly at a cocktail fete for the couple.

In addition to Mrs. Muller and Miss Sullivan, Miss Grosvenor's attendants will be Miss Janet Ray and Miss Beverly Marshall, whose engagement to Richard Dexter Auerbach was announced this month.

Boons Give Garden Party

"It's a farewell party—for myself," said lovely Mme. Boon, wife of the Second Secretary of the Netherlands Embassy, when asked the purpose of her pleasant garden fete yesterday afternoon.

She explained further that she would be off to Eagles Mere, Pa., on Sunday, where she and Dr. Boon have taken a cottage for the summer. Meanwhile, however, since Dr. Boon will be able to join his family only on weekends, their home at 4925 Upton Street will be kept open for the season.

Mme. Boon, who received in the garden of her home yesterday, wore a trailing garden frock, featuring a red and green pattern on a white background. Dr. Boon was everywhere at once, seeing that everybody had a good time. The Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon were among the guests, as were the Netherlands Minister - Counselor and Baroness van Boetzelaer. The British First Secretary and Mrs. W. G. Hayter, Lieut. P. H. B. Otway-Smithers, and the British Second Secretary and Mrs. R. E. Barclay.

Still others there included the Czech First Secretary and Mme. Palic, Col. Oldrich Spaniel, also of the Czech Legation; the Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel, the Norwegian Second Secretary and Mme. Stabell, Mrs. Frederick Schenck, Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten, of the Netherlands Embassy, and many more.

FBI Man Tells Clubwomen How to Help Crush Fifth Column

ALERT housewives can aid the country in stamping out subversive activities. To do so, they must listen—listen alertly and intelligently. So declared S. K. MacKee, special FBI investigator, guest speaker at the annual meeting of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs held yesterday at 2600 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

"Once you think that you have questionable information, report it directly to FBI headquarters," he said. "Don't discuss it in clubs, among friends or family. It isn't necessary to get your club's approval before turning in clews."

The speaker warned against taking the attitude "It can't happen here." He pointed out that it was far better to give proper authorities the benefit of one's observation than to ignore it. The clew may or may not be valuable, but there is always a chance the information may have a bearing on tracking down enemy sabotage.

In a question and answer period that followed Mr. MacKee's discussion of FBI activities, members of the club wanted to know whether women were being used as special agents during the war. To this the speaker replied, "No."

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the D. C. Federation, presided and introduced the speaker. Following the 1 o'clock luncheon, the federation continued its annual reports. Also, the Fine Arts department awarded prizes for the best paintings and craft objects. First prize went to Mrs. Clara Saunders of the Petworth Woman's Club for her crayon picture, "Bouquet." Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs of the Entre Nous Club received second prize for her etching, "Street in Georgetown." Mrs. Edwin Webb Miles of Columbia Heights Art Club was awarded third prize for her work in crafts, a silver tray and cups.

Miss Vesta Furniss of Tech High School, will speak on the theme of the evening, "Lift Up Now Thine Eyes and Look From the Place Where Thou Standeth." A review of the Girl Reserve year will be given by Miss June Isaminger of Wilson High School. Following the installation of new Girl Reserve Club presidents, the banquet will end with the singing of the Girl Reserve Quest. The dance which will be held on the Y. W. C. A. roof top will begin at 9 o'clock, with music by Bruce Davis and his orchestra.

Women of Spain Performing Herculean Tasks, Asserts Therese Bonney, Reporter

By Genevieve Reynolds

UNACCUSTOMED to tasks outside the home, the women of Spain nevertheless are performing herculean duties for their country, asserts Therese Bonney, foreign correspondent and photographer who recently returned from Spain, France, Portugal, Switzerland and England.

"Aristocrats are working side by side with peasant girls in Spain," she says. "Every girl in the country is required to give six months to learning to be a good citizen. Peasant girls are brought to the cities and taught social hygiene. Then they return to their homes to improve the condition of their community."

Without fanfare, talk of recognition, the women of Portugal are performing a magnificent job in caring for the thousands of stranded refugees that have poured into the country, according to Therese Bonney. "Many families have taken one or more refugees into their home," she explains.

"Although women in conquered countries cannot organize into groups to make a concerted effort against the Axis," she asserts, "they are still fighting the enemy individually. Many act as messengers from one part of the country to the other. Also, they sabotage the enemy at a risk of their lives whenever possible."

Women of France are doing extremely heart-rending tasks. Specifically, one is the driving of 10-ton trucks filled with food from unoccupied to occupied sections of France. The food is for the French prisoners still in camps who have not been moved to Germany.

Therese Bonney

In Therese Bonney's estimation this is a most self-sacrificing and difficult duty, for if one person breaks any element of the oath not to accept either verbal or written messages from the French soldiers, the entire privilege of the prison corps is suspended.

As for the Swiss women, they perform without pay the tedious and arduous job of indexing cards for millions of war prisoners, and of communicating with the prisoners' families, according to the correspondent, who will be guest speaker at the Congressional Club's tea this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

"No task is too menial or humble for English women to do," she said. "Even when the women swing garbage cans, they do it with spirit. I think it's because of their indomitable spirit of 'swing to it, girls.'"

The war has made English women temperamentally as springy as cats. Like cats they have learned to adapt themselves into any position that they might fall, according to Therese Bonney's observation. In fact, the story of the English women's war work is told by Therese Bonney in her new book, "Battle for Freedom," which rolls off the press in England this week.

Miss Bonney reported the Battle of France, the Russian-Finnish War. Early in 1941 she was sent back to Europe by the Carnegie Corporation to continue to write her history with the camera lens. About three weeks ago she returned from a photographic tour of England, Spain, Portugal and France.

Catholic Daughters

COURT DISTRICT of Columbia, No. 212, of the Catholic Daughters of America, has cooperated enthusiastically with the Red Cross in its efforts to meet its quota of 5000 comfort kits for the men in our armed forces by June 1, and at its business meeting in May the court donated funds for this purpose.

At the beginning of its participation in Red Cross work, the court selected Mrs. Anna E. Uhl as chairman of the various Red Cross units, and the many hours of service given by the members and the volume of work completed bespeak her fine leadership.

The members of the knitting unit have been meeting with Mrs. Uhl every Wednesday at her home in Cortland Place Northwest, but now that yarn is no longer available they are turning their attention to other Red Cross activities. This unit, with an average attendance of 54, has completed 599 garments with 8754 hours of service to their credit. The sewing unit has made a good record also, having completed 129 pieces of clothing, blankets and caps, with 644 hours of service.

The surgical-dressing units meet at the Walsh House Tuesday morning and Thursday night of each week. Inspired by the presence of the grand regent and other officers of the court, they have completed more than 5550 hours of service.

However, these are not the only Red Cross activities to which the members devote their time. Eighty members have already been graduated as Red Cross instructors of first aid, and of advanced and standard first aid, and are utilizing the knowledge thus gained in instructing new recruits.

Russians Resume Advance on Kharkov

front to tell his generals that he would not stand for any criticism of his war policies and direction.

Officially, Hitler has been in charge of the German army since last fall when he took over the supreme command from Von Brauchitsch.

Latest reports from Stockholm also indicate that Nazi Field Marshal Fedor von Bock's offensive toward Izyum has been stemmed and that Marshal Timoshenko's Red troops have regained the initiative.

Even a German front-line reporter broadcast that "the situation constantly is changing to defense."

It is reported that Timoshenko made a strong thrust north of Kharkov toward the Kharkov-Belgorod Railway, which now is said to have been cut. This deprives Von Bock of another line of communications.

Meanwhile, strong German attacks failed to dislodge Soviet troops from a bridgehead on the Donets River.

The Soviet army newspaper Red Star declared that a fresh German infantry division had been routed in spirited fighting on the Kalinin Front, northwest of Moscow.

Timoshenko's armies had resumed their advances after beating back with heavy losses German thrusts in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector, 70 miles to the south.

Three hundred German planes have been shot down thus far in the "Battle of the Bulge," the Moscow radio declared.

The midnight Soviet communique stated:

"Enemy tanks and infantry made fierce attacks in the direction of Izyum-Barvenkova, which were repelled.

"There is nothing of importance to report on other sectors.

"On May 27, 28 German and 18 Soviet planes were destroyed.

"Soviet troops recaptured two inhabited localities on the Kalinin Front.

"On May 27 Soviet air units all along the front destroyed or damaged 32 enemy tanks and partly wiped out 11 infantry companies.

"On one sector of the northwestern front the Germans lost at least 500 men."

In a futile, last-ditch attempt to deceive Russian forces, German infantry units on the Kharkov front donned Soviet uniforms, stuck red pennants in their tank turrets and painted red stars on the wings of their planes.

Purge Hints of Trouble On Nazi Food Front

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, May 28.—Reports reaching here through semidiplomatic channels today said that Hitler had imprisoned his former food chief, Walther Darre, Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, former German army commander in chief, and 13 high Nazi Party officials in a purge.

Darre was removed as food chief by Hitler only a few days ago, and Von Brauchitsch was removed last December when Hitler himself took over the army command, announcing that by so doing he was following his "intuition."

Hitler was reported to have returned to Berlin suddenly from the Eastern Front a few days ago, and the purge was understood to have been carried out then.

Berlin announced officially on May 23 that Darre was taking "a leave of absence" as food minister.

Exactly what took Hitler away from the Russian front to launch the purge is not clear here, but inclusion of Darre among the imprisoned suggested trouble on the food production front, informed persons said.

There have been persistent reports that food conditions in Germany have been growing worse.

According to one report, Darre warned Hitler that if Germany were not to starve next winter, the present food rations must be cut in half. He also was said to have informed Hitler that crop estimates indicated that a 30 per cent deficit must be expected in grains this year, as well as large deficits in other food crops.

Hitler was said to have flown into a rage upon hearing this gloomy forecast and was reported to have declared that food rations could not be cut further because of the effect on morale.

(Just a week ago, Reichsmarshal Goering, speaking before Nazi war workers and admitting the failure of the last harvest, indicated the present outlook was extremely grave because of the need of rain.)

The winter must take care of itself, Hitler is said to have declared. When Darre protested that he could not be responsible if such a course were followed, Hitler sent him to prison along with party members who supported his view, according to the report reaching here.

Just where Von Brauchitsch fitted into the picture was not wholly clear. Early this month he was reported confined to a sanatorium near Munich, but last week one report said that he was in Berlin while Hitler was there on his flying trip from the front.

This second report said that Hitler tried to induce the former commander in chief to return to his old duties, but that Von Brauchitsch declined.

WARTIME NEEDS

SCHEDULES

EFFECTIVE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3RD...

Greyhound buses on many routes will operate on new wartime schedules. This change in service is being made in order to cooperate to the fullest extent with the wartime plans of the Office of Defense Transportation. The purpose is to make every bus work full time — keeping vital traffic on the move.

America's war program has the right of way! The great majority of the people Greyhound is carrying today and intends to carry efficiently are selectees traveling to examination centers, fighting men on leave or furlough, war workers moving to their jobs, businessmen traveling on essential work. The trips they take are necessary to keep the war program rolling.

With increased service demanded for war production areas—and little increase in buses available—it is necessary to divert equipment to routes where it is most needed.

Many peacetime features are discontinued. Operating speeds are somewhat reduced. Express and Limited schedules are eliminated entirely. Second sections of regular schedules are being eliminated unless the buses carry a sufficient number of passengers. Greyhound schedules will be combined with those of other bus companies, when necessary.

Conservation of rubber is all-important—and Greyhound is taking every possible step to increase the big savings already effected. Today buses use only a fraction as much rubber as private cars per passenger, per mile—and they average more than 40,000 miles per tire.

We hope that these wartime changes will not cause you inconvenience, crowding or delay. But if you don't find travel as comfortable and easy as in normal times, please make allowances! The war effort comes first with Greyhound as it does with you!

You Can Help

by getting information about the new schedules before you travel — taking as little baggage as possible — traveling before or after the mid-summer rush period — taking your trip on mid-week days, leaving seats on week-ends for soldiers and war workers.

Reprisal Killings Begin in Prague

Heydrich attack shall be shot.

[As the Prague radio was reporting Heydrich's new post, a Stockholm newspaper, Nyadagligt Allehanda, said in a Berlin dispatch that an operation was performed on him last night, the International News Service said.

[Condition of the No. 2 Gestapo agent was described as "dangerous."

[Conflicting opinions, meanwhile, were offered as to how the assassination attempt was made on "Hangman" Heydrich.

[Exchange telegraph quoted the Prague radio as saying that his assailants waited for hours to attack him, and that one man threw a bomb which exploded near the car Heydrich was driving.

[Swedish correspondents in Berlin said that Nazi officials were silent about the attack. It was considered certain, however, that his route was known only to a few, which made near success of the venture even more remarkable.

[It was not definitely explained whether Heydrich was shot, whether a bomb was thrown, or a time bomb concealed in his automobile. Czecho-Slovak quarters in London leaned to the shooting theory. These quarters said the attempt was made by two men with automatic rifles. Both men were reported to have escaped, one by bicycle and the other on foot. One of them was said to have left an attache case behind, which the Gestapo was using in an attempt to trace Heydrich's assailants.]

Meanwhile, the British radio reported that General Daluege issued a decree banning all Czech meetings, sports and theatrical shows and ordering that doors of all houses must be locked by 11 p. m.

Word reached London tonight of more trouble for the Germans on another front—Norway.

The British Broadcasting Corporation heard that Norwegian patriots on the island of Sotra had shot and killed the Nazi Gestapo chief ruling "the western part of Norway." His name was not given.

The attempt was said to have been made several days before the attack upon Heydrich. Quoting a Stockholm dispatch, the B. B. C. said the attempt was made in the village of Televague, on the island of Sotra, opposite Bergen.

"The Germans then proceeded to arrest the whole male population of the village," the B. B. C. said. "All the families were evacuated. Their property was confiscated and their houses were set on fire."

Czechs in London expected the worst to happen in their homeland.

One government spokesman estimated that the Germans had 15,000 Czechs in concentration camps in the protectorate of Moravia and Bohemia and expressed fears they would be used as hostages as the Nazis have been doing in France.

DCB Closes Public Radio, Wire Circuits

All public radio-telegraph circuits within continental United States yesterday were ordered closed, effective at midnight June 30, by the Defense Communications Board.

In ordering closure of public domestic point-to-point radio circuits, the DCB said transmission of private messages over these circuits could be heard and easily monitored outside of the United States.

"In many instances," the DCB said, "the nature of these private messages can give information of value to the enemy. The burden of possible censorship has been deemed insoluble within reasonable limits of available man power and funds. In any event, the censorship which would be necessary if these circuits remained, would involve a delay in transmission not necessarily found in the case of domestic wire circuits."

If on recommendation of the Federal Communications Commission the DCB should find any radio circuit "necessary to meet a vital public need," the announcement said, "it will follow as a matter of course that they will be effectively censored."

Not affected by the order are coastal and ship-to-shore radio stations which are under control of the Navy.

Eighty stations operated by 11 companies are affected. The chief radio carriers are R. C. A. Communications, Inc., Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co., Tropical Radio Telegraph Co., Globe Wireless, Ltd., Press Wireless, Inc., (press only), Radiomarine Corporation of America, Central Radio Telegraph Co., Michigan Wireless Telegraph Co., Wabash Radio Corporation, Pere Marquette Radio Corporation and the Western Radio Telegraph Co.

The DCB described the total traffic of the 11 companies as "quite small" in comparison with all domestic message volume. Chairman James Lawrence Fly, of the DCB and FCC said adequate wire line communication facilities were available to all users of the domestic radio circuits.

The battles raged today in an area roughly bounded by Tobruk on the northeast, Ain el Gazala on the northwest, Bir Hacheim on the southwest and Bir el Gobi on the southeast.

A British communique reported that the Germans and Italians of Marshal Edwin Rommel were repulsed with casualties in a frontal assault on Bir Hacheim and in a drive along the coast south of Ain el Gazala, but acknowledged that in the center the results of heavy combat had not yet been determined.

An R. A. F. communique, disclosing the German thrust to El Adem, said "many" Axis transport vehicles were wrecked by British bombers and that 12 Axis planes were shot down in offensive and defensive action which cost the British four planes.

R. A. F. Strafes Rear Areas

The R. A. F. also ranged far behind the lines, bombing and strafing the Axis takeoff points and bases.

British sources said that when the Axis drive started, apparently from the neighborhood of El Mechili, outlying British patrols fell back to unite with the main British armored forces which sped to the counter-attack.

It was conceded that some Axis forces probably got past a few British strong points, but this was described as a costly and not significant achievement against the British defense-in-depth system.

examples for 31 returns for 1941 that have been examined.

One company making an important airplane part is owned by one man who hired himself as its sales representative and paid himself $1,656,000 in 1941, Morgenthau said. The Treasury consolidated his earnings with those of the corporation and increased the corporation's income tax by $1,117,000, blocking "this obvious attempt to divert profits."

Another company making equipment for pilots paid $31,104 rent to the wife of the president for using property which cost her $45,412, paid the untrained brother of the principal stockholder a $15,000 salary and a son and a daughter just out of school, $7500 each.

Entertainment Plus

Another company included $1900 for tickets to football games, $14,000 for banquets and picnics, $4000 for photographs taken at these and $14,000 for watches given employes in deductions the Treasury disallowed them. This company paid its three chief officers $100,000 each and set aside $575,000 in bonuses. The Treasury disallowed $516,000 in salary and bonus payments.

In all of the cases, Government contracts were signed before the country entered the war, but Morgenthau said "an attempt to escape lawful taxes while we were actually at war would be only a slight degree blacker than an attempt to escape taxes which would pay for arming and equipping our Army and Navy when we stood in imminent danger of attack."

Other examples of concerns using "tax dodging" devices, were cited by Morgenthau as follows:

A company manufacturing an important aviation device is owned almost entirely by one man, his wife and his brother. The two men increased their salaries from $12,000 and $15,000 in 1939 to $72,000 and $90,000 in 1941. At the same time royalties paid to them had increased from $87,000 in 1939 to $1,179,000 in 1941.

A forgings concern, with stock owned by three families, increased salaries of employes who were stockholders and relatives of stockholders by 523 per cent from 1938 to 1941. The Treasury disallowed $568,000 in "excessive salaries" for 1941.

Two brothers and their wives own another company making tools and dies. It paid dividends of $40,000 in 1940 and $100,000 in 1941, while salaries totaling $128,000 were paid in 1941 to the firm's president, his wife and his brother.

Cited also was a steel company held by three families which paid excessive salaries to officers who were also stockholders. The revenue agent asked disallowance of $82,000 in salaries and the company has agreed to a $58,000 disallowance.

Morgenthau took an unusual course in placing this data before the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, which normally passes only on Treasury refunds. He said he thought the committee, Congress and the country "are entitled to know that the unscrupulous and selfish few are not being allowed to distort their tax returns so as to escape their fair share of the costs of the war."

Morgenthau said the following general standards would govern:

Greatly increased salaries and extraordinary bonuses will be disallowed unless the taxpayer proves they are services actually rendered, are reasonable and are what ordinarily would be paid for like services in like enterprises under like circumstances. The rule of "reasonableness" likewise would govern deductibility of rents, royalties, payments to shareholders, payments to pension trusts, expenditures for advertising and fees for obtaining Government business. Deductions for repairs would be confined strictly to repairs and not cover improvements.

House Unit Leans Toward Sales Tax Despite Opposition

Two days of Treasury arguments against any form of sales tax were concluded yesterday but left apparently unimpaired a strong Ways and Means Committee trend toward a general Federal retail sales levy.

A bipartisan alignment, including about six Democrats and more than that many Republican committeemen, still favored turning to a sales tax if the Administration insists on making up a $1,800,000,000 revenue shortage in the new tax bill.

The committee ordered a three-day weekend recess after Randolph Paul, Treasury tax advisor, and James W. Martin, tax consultant, concluded sales tax testimony. They stressed administrative difficulties.

Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, in reply, pointed out that existing Treasury excises on jewelry, furs and toilet articles are collected from retailers and are in effect "retail sales taxes." He asked:

"If administration of a retail sales tax would be so difficult and impossible, does the Treasury want us to repeal these three revenue producers?"

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Federal Workers May Be 'Frozen' in Jobs

The "freezing" of Federal employes in their jobs is reported to be under consideration by the War Man Power Commission. The freedom of employes to transfer and to resign for other jobs would be greatly restricted under the "freezing" order. In fact, the Government wouldn't be permitted to hire a clerk or an official away from a vital war industry without the approval of the United States Employment Service and the Civil Service Commission. Conversely, industries would no longer be free to make raids on Uncle Sam's civilian employes.

The Man Power Commission already has decided to "freeze" the jobs of essential war workers. A "freezing" policy is now being drawn up by Chairman Paul McNutt. The next logical move is to apply the same principle to the jobs of the two million Federal workers. In fact, the "freezing" of essential war workers in their jobs will cover indirectly the tens of thousands of mechanics and other skilled workers in the Federal shipyards and arsenals. These employes won't be able to move from the Government to industry under the man power order. It isn't fully realized, but the Man Power Commission has the authority indirectly to riddle the less essential war agencies. It could easily protect the personnel for the vital war agencies and leave the other agencies open to personnel raids.

Federal Deposit Insurance will be moved to Chicago on June 26 . . . About half of the employes will be transferred . . . War Department has set up central reviewing board here and 175 local boards to consider applications for deferment of essential civilian employes in the department. Millard F. Billings, assistant personnel director, is chairman. Serving with him are Lieut. Col. Gordon E. Clark of the Air Corps and Maj. S. P. Coblentz of Services of Supply . . . Federal Trade has no official car for its officials. Neither has the Civil Service Commission . . . John S. Shaw, administrative assistant in the Office of Education, was retired yesterday. He spent 48 years in the Federal service.

Ickes Stumbles

The New Dealers introduced the alphabetical agencies to the Nation but it took the most ardent New Dealer of them all, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, to get tripped up by their handiwork.

Ickes was asked yesterday to comment on a plan under study by OPC to make synthetic rubber from petroleum.

"I can't speak for OPC," he protested, "why don't you ask them about it?" (Note: OPC is for Office of Petroleum Coordinator. Ickes is its administrator.)

"You can't speak for the Office of Petroleum Coordinator," asked the flabbergasted reporter.

"Oh, I get all bawled up," the cabinet officer confessed, "when initials are used. I can't even recognize my own children by them."

The junior clerk exam that drew 30,000 applicants from Washington and vicinity a few weeks ago has been reopened by the Civil Service Commission. The age limit has been lowered to 16. There is no maximum age limit. The closing date for applications is June 26. Salary is $1260 for under clerks and $1440 for junior clerks. The test will be given in Washington, Baltimore and Alexandria . . . Able Interior Undersecretary Jack Dempsey has announced his candidacy for governor of New Mexico which means he will resign. Mike Straus, Ickes' former press chief who is now at WPB, is a good bet to be appointed undersecretary.

Hearings on the President's overtime pay plan for Federal employes will open Tuesday before the House Civil Service Committee. Three top-notch Federal officials will be on hand to testify, William H. McReynolds, Administrative assistant to the President; Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming, and Edgar Young, Budget Bureau personnel officer . . . Government phone operators have had their classifications boosted. Trainees are now started in at $1260. Full-fledged operators are paid $1440 and supervisors have been raised from Grade 3 to Grade 7. War Department put over the raises . . . Three units of Social Security's Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance are being moved this weekend—two to Philadelphia and one to Baltimore. Nearly 400 employes are involved . . . Veterans is sending 240 additional employes to New York City this weekend.

Attention! Commissioners

Los Angeles, May 28 (AP).—City Council President G. Vernon Bennett wants night war workers to get a good day's sleep.

He proposed that the city buy flags to be displayed by such workers to ward off callers and peddlers. The pennants would carry the legend: "Quiet Please. Defense Worker Asleep."

Named for Victory

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Casting about for an idea to feature an "on to victory" war bond and stamp sales campaign, the committee in charge came up with a natural. Selected to take part in the opening day ceremonies June 8, were Betty Bond, University of Maryland co-ed selected as Miss Maryland 1942, Adele Stamp, dean of women, and her neice, H. A. Stamp Herald.

Youthful Jail-Breakers Apprehended

an hour or so later Anderson, Foster and the girls returned.

When police confronted the men, they gave themselves up without a struggle, Anderson told Barrett:

"Well, you've got us."

A quantity of liquor and $7 was found on one of the prisoners. They had no guns. Police said they believe the money was obtained by the youths in a purse-snatching.

The prisoners said they came here immediately after fleeing the jail and had had no sleep or food since.

Break Well-Planned

Police said the jail break had been well planned. Hugh Walker, the assistant warden, said he was called to a cell by Foster, a barber trusty, who was cutting the hair of Yokley. As he opened the cell door, he said, he was hit on the head with a sock loaded with soap, knocking him unconscious.

Foster and Yokley then released Anderson and the trio fled.

Anderson had been in jail since last February. He was arrested on charges of raping a woman in a cottage near Glen Echo, where he had taken refuge after shooting at a policeman who had gone to the youth's home on a "trouble call." After raping the woman, police said Anderson robbed her of $7 and fled in her car. He was arrested by United States Park Police in a drive-in restaurant in Arlington, Va.

Police had been warned that Anderson would shoot to kill if an attempt were made to apprehend him.

Bill Would End Welfare Board Power

Commissioners Ask Congress to Reduce District Body to Advisory Capacity

The months-long struggle between the District Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare entered its final stages yesterday when the Commissioners revealed that they had sent a bill to Congress to strip the Welfare Board completely of its plenary powers, leaving it only as an advisory body.

At present, Commissioner John Russell Young said in the letter of transmittal to Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, the Welfare Board has supervision over the Occoquan Workhouse, the Lorton Reformatory, the Washington Asylum and Jail, the National Training School for Girls, the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the Municipal Lodging House, the Industrial Home School, the Industrial Home School for Colored Children and the District Training School.

Young Cites Inconsistency

"Under existing law," Young stated, "the supervision of the board over these institutions, as well as the exercise of certain other powers and authority vested in the board, is free from the control of the Commissioners. Employes of the board may be appointed by the Commissioners only upon the nomination of the board and may be discharged by the Commissioners only upon the recommendation of the board.

"The situation created is that employes of the board responsible to the board carry out programs of aid for which, under the law, the Commissioners are responsible.

"The Commissioners being responsible for the general welfare of the District, their powers should equal their responsibilities. It is therefore essential that the duties of the board should be vested in the Commissioners."

The proposed bill would create a Department of Public Welfare responsible to the Commissioners, rather than to the board. This, Young said, was in accordance with Federal Social Security regulations requiring the authority of aid to the blind, aged or dependent children must be concentrated in one State agency.

Checks Held Up in One Instance

On one occasion last summer the checks for Washington welfare cases were held up for several days because the Social Security Agency said the District board was not complying with this and several other of its regulations. Young said he believed this bill would bring the District in conformity with these provisions.

Another part of the bill would commit children to the Welfare Department rather than to the board. A director of the department would be appointed by the Commissioners and would be an ex-officio member of the board.

Vigorous opposition to this bill is expected on the part of some members of the board, who have protested the Commissioners' intention to clip their wings ever since this intention was announced some months ago.

WAAC Forms For Applicants Run Short

As the second day of recruiting for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps closed yesterday five of the nine Army corps areas had let the War Department know the 5000 application blanks allotted to each were "not nearly enough."

In Washington the second day brought a lessening of applicants, with "only 500" coming in for blanks and to ask questions. Recruiting officers here, however, had run out of booklets containing information on the unit and the blanks which had be be filled in by doctors.

"Just take the pink blank and have your doctor write out a statement that you are mentally and physically sound, and that he is a licensed physician," Capt. F. S. Sloan was telling the oncomers.

Although local recruiting officers had been informed informally that blanks could be given to women between the ages of 45 and 49, inclusive, they hade not been told that—if accepted for the school—these applicants would have to pay their train fare to Des Moines and also their fare back if they failed to receive commissions.

This was said to be true at the War Department, however. In all other respects, the department said, the older applicants will be on the same terms at the school as all others, with uniforms, maintenance, and training provided.

Although nation-wide figures are incomplete, the Associated Press said some 2000 women applied for blanks yesterday in California and about 1800 in Pennsylvania. The first day's candidates numbered about 13,000 and the call for blanks indicates it now has gone above 30,000.

The officers' training school will open about July 15, with "privates" being enrolled later in the autumn—when new WAAC officers will be stationed in recruiting stations to help answer questions.

Lafayette Hotel To Buy War Bonds

"War Bond Day" will be celebrated by the Lafayette Hotel at 12:30 this afternoon, the District War Savings Committee announced yesterday. Starting today and for each succeeding Friday during an indefinite period, the hotel will pledge 50 per cent of its gross receipts of that day to the purchase of War Bonds.

Commencing with the raising of the flag, the ceremonies will be under the direction of Jeff Ford, president of the Lafayette. Guests of Mr. Ford will include Rear Admiral Yarnell, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Representative Andrew Edmiston of West Virginia, Col. Lemuel Bolles and H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the District War Savings Committee.

Tommy Amburgy Chosen Holy Cross 'Miss Victory'

Miss Tommy Amburgy was chosen "Miss Victory" in the interclass competition for sale of war bonds and stamps yesterday at Holy Cross Academy. Along with other members of the winning section 3-B, she was awarded a victory pin, the group turning in a total of $2831.

Runners-up were members of Section 1-A, with $2194.40, and Section 1-B with $1436.15. The academy announced that more than $7000 was subscribed

Stores Set to 'Play War Game' In Air-Raid Test on Tuesday

Business and industrial establishments are well prepared for Tuesday's morning air-raid test, John J. Hasley, civilian defense chief of such houses, reported to Coordinator John Russell Young yesterday.

Lest people be discouraged from visiting stores and office buildings, business leaders said they were anxious to test the operation of such a daytime alert, and pointed out that the only way to do this will be through public participation.

Every large store has its own air-raid shelters and wardens, and when the sirens wail between 10 and 11 a. m. Tuesday for the half-hour raid period, customers will be expected to join in the drill along with the employes.

Hasley said that the emphasis in these drills would be on the protection of customers and employes from injury or death, rather than on the protection of property.

Doors of the stores will be left open to receive passers-by who are caught on the streets when the alarms are sounded, and guards will be stationed to ask those inside not to venture out.

However, the stores are not to issue any orders, and the requests for public participation are all in the spirit of "playing the war game."

Civilian Defense Sketch Planned in Brentwood

A dramatic sketch, written and produced by residents of the area, and an address by Chief Air-Raid Warden Clement Murphy will feature a mass meeting of the Brentwood civilian defense area to be held at 8:30 p. m. today in the Langdon Grammar School, Twentieth and Evarts Streets Northeast. . . .

The sketch will be called "Spirit of '76" and dramatizes the work of civilian defense, residents of the area said last night. Also on the program will be several numbers by a quartet and a moving picture which will be furnished by the War Department.

Defense Funds Sought For MacArthur Blvd. Area

A campaign to raise $2500 to be used for the purchase of needed equipment and operating expense has been announced by the executive committee of the MacArthur Boulevard Defense Area.

This area begins at the intersection of Foxhall Road and MacArthur Boulevard and extends along the west side of Foxhall Road to Nebraska Avenue and along Nebraska Avenue and Loughborough Road to Little Falls Road and the Dalecarlia Reservoir.

The needed equipment includes rope, hose, shovels, buckets, stirrup pumps and other supplies, and is to be purchased through the executive defense committee and distributed to each sector.

It is announced by the committee that the solicitation in the campaign is to be directed by Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, 4636 Hawthorne Lane Northwest, who has appointed women solicitors living in the area. Each solicitor will be provided with proper identification and residents will receive a numbered receipt form for contributions.

J. P. McKeon Named K. of C. State Deputy

James P. McKeon of Keane Council last night was elected State deputy for the District at the forty-fourth annual local convention of Knights of Columbus. He succeeds James F. Kehoe.

Other District officers, technically called state officials, named last night, included Michael Ricioppi, Washington Council, secretary; James P. Cox, Carroll Council, advocate; James T. Barbour, Potomac Council, treasurer; William J. Mulligan, Keane Council, warden, and the Rev. Edward Fuller, S. J., of St. Aloysius Church, chaplain.

McKeon and Kehoe were chosen as delegates to represent the local membership at the Knight's supreme convention opening August 18 in Memphis, Tenn.

Prior to last night's elections, the officers dined at the Willard Hotel where Francis J. Heazel, supreme treasurer or the order, congratulated the knights on their local activities and expressed the hope "and prayer that the obligations of your delegates (to the Memphis convention) may be fruitful of good results for America and for Holy Mother Church." He urged the members to buy war bonds and support the President.

Other speakers at the dinner included retiring Deputy Kehoe and District Deputies Charles J. Considine and Thomas J. Myers.

PUC Weighs Cabbies' Petition As Backing for Strike Grows

While the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., said their movement for a general strike to be called June 1, was "growing by the hour," the Public Utilities Commission last night reserved decision on a petition by the union for reconsideration of the new zone system.

Disclaiming the P. U. C.'s action Wednesday in assuming that a list of "demands" constituted a petition for reconsideration, the union filed a formal petition yesterday asking that the present rates be continued, that the new ones ordered for June 1 be withdrawn and a new date set for a rehearing, and that the union be formally notified of all P. U. C. decisions.

The P. U. C. took this petition under consideration. The demands made on Wednesday which the commission had interpreted as a petition had received almost instantaneous disapproval.

E. A. Glenn, spokesman for the union, announced last night that a mass meeting will be held at 8:30 tonight at 808 I Street Northwest and that two more will be held on Sunday to organize the strike if the P. U. C. stands firm on its intention to institute the new rates on Monday.

Glenn, who will voice the cab drivers' grievances tonight at 7:30 over WINX, said he had consulted with the Department of Labor conciliation commissioner yesterday and expected to have another conference today. He said he had also taken the problem to District leaders on Capitol Hill.

A major objection the drivers have to the Hankin zone map, Glenn said, is that the past six months' concentration of temporary buildings in the Southwest and Southeast areas has not been taken into consideration in setting rates for these vicinities.

Twenty-two women were graduated yesterday in a public speaking class conducted by Mrs. Hugh Butler for the American Women's Voluntary Services, with Mrs. Benjamin Weems taking highest honors with highest grades. Mrs. Ray R. Gilchrist was runner-up.

Mrs. R. L. Ragg was judged to have made the most improvement, with Mrs. McCeney Werlich taking second place.

Anita Phipps, president of the Washington A. W. V. S., addressed the class, whose members will engage actively in speaking for the organization. The class was organized by Mrs. Frank Dennis and Mrs. Roy C. Wakefield, who will be in charge of assignments for the new speakers.

With Shirley Povich

What do you make of the odd fact that the four leading hitters of the National League, as we go to press, are catchers? Babe Phelps of the Pirates, Wilbur Cooper of the Cardinals, Ernie Lombardi of the Braves and Sam Lamanno of the Reds are out in front of all the supposedly stylish hitters in the league with lofty figures ranging down from .347 to .333.

POVICH

Catchers, you know, aren't supposed to be crowding the top of the batting averages. In the last 40 years, no catcher has ever led the American League batting race and it has happened only twice in the National League. The catcher is supposed to be a dependable, sturdy sort of hitter, but if he is a good catcher he can be forgiven for not batting more than .300.

The catcher, in fact, doesn't get a fair shake in the batting averages. Burdened by his duties behind the plate with the heavy regalia and constant crouching that is a strain on the legs, the average catcher is slow afoot. He can't beat out the infield hits that counts just as much in the averages as a home run over the fence. Buddy Myer once won the league batting title with speed going to first base that was worth 20 points to his average.

There isn't much doubt that all of the catchers now leading the league will recede from their high positions. The hot summer months are hard on catchers. They are a weary lot in August and September. When Ernie Lombardi did win the National League batting title a few years ago, it was truly remarkable. He didn't beat out a single infield hit and the safe bunt didn't exist for him. He won the title on pure slug, which is a tough job.

If there were any necessity for defending the honesty of baseball, the evidence of the American League standings could be pointed to at this time. The Yankees are out in front, again threatening to make a runaway of the race. They are far ahead of their pace of last year when they won the pennant by 17½ games. At this time in 1941, the Yanks were a second-place club.

The worst fears of American League clubowners, Yankee owners excepted. are seemingly coming true. Pennant interest is fading in seven American League cities due to the overwhelming superiority of the Yankees. It could have been a profitable year for most clubs, with potential customers well heeled with defense work cash, but the Yankees by refusing to do otherwise than bear down are eliminating the competition from the race.

The Yankees, too, are suffering from their preponderance of skill. If the race were closer, they could take hefty checks out of other cities in the circuit as the visiting club's share, but the crowds are becoming increasingly lean. If the Yanks were just a little bit unprincipled and permitted a couple of clubs to get close, the pickings would be lush but they don't play bal. that way.

Night baseball is saving several clubs from bankruptcy, probably including Washington. The American League is lucky in that neither of its coast cities Boston and New York are affected by the dim-out order inasmuch those two parks don't have lights. The healthy effects of night ball on club treasuries was demonstrated the other night when 17,000 customers turned out for an arclight game between the Nats and Red Sox. An afternoon contest between the same clubs wouldn't have drawn 5000.

The Yankees, at that, may be a short-sighted outfit, passing up profits that might otherwise accure, and without compromising the ethics of baseball in any sense. It is a fact that the Yankees have better ball players sitting on their bench than other clubs have playing regular positions. The Yankees could disperse some of their talent, get a price for it, and generally help to make the race closer.

That it could be done is demonstrated by the sale, at long last, of Mike Chartak, Yankee outfielder whom the Nats have been trying to buy for three years. Chartak's sale didn't hurt the Yankees who are plentifully supplied with outfielders, but it did help the Nats. It made a better ball team of Washington and the Yankees, as a result, can now take more money out of Griffith Stadium than on previous visits. It was good business, and but for the reluctance of the Yanks to sell Chartak three years ago, it would have been better business.

Sitting on the Yankee bench for the past two years has been George Selkirk, an outfielder who could play regularly with any other club in the league, but the Yanks have been refusing to sell him, despite many offers. By such smugness they have been choking off competition that would go far toward balancing the league and prolonging pennant race interest.

Hogan, Demaret Also Win; Great Semifinal Round Seen at Seaview

Atlantic City, May 28.—The stage is set here for one of the greatest semifinal attraction in P. G. A. history at Seaview as the four biggest names in golf today survived second round matches and advanced to the round of eight with one match between each of them and a made-to-order draw on Saturday.

In the upper bracket, Open Champion Craig Wood and that colorful character from Hot Springs, Va., Slammin' Sammy Snead, won as they pleased while down below, those transplanted Texans and life-long rivals, Bryon Nelson and Benny Hogan advanced to the quarter-finals with only Nelson extended.

Of course, there are four other survivors in this silver anniversary of the professional golf championship being played over this windswept layout, located by the sea and midst the pines. But the sentiment is to confine them to defeat tomorrow and prepare for Saturday's natural.

Meets Jimmy Demaret

Wood, the matinee idol from Mamaroneck, N. Y., meets Laughing Jimmy Demaret, another Texan now with Detroit connections. Snead, who is crushing the opposition thus far, comes face to face with the association president, Big Ed Dudley. Nelson, finalist three straight years in this tournament, will battle Medalist Harry Cooper, with his reformed golf game, and Hogan meets an Army man in Corpl. Jim Turnesa, the 29-year-old Fort Dix soldier and surprise quarter-finalist.

Nelson almost spoiled the visions of that perfect set-up today. Dour-faced Byron, the Masters champion and former Open and P. G. A. titlist, was supposed to hand Joe Kirkwood of trick-shot fame a sound trouncing. but when they reached the thirty-third tee the match was even and the biggest gallery of the tournament to date flocked to their heels.

Here was the setting for a real upset. Kirkwood, the 45-year-old Philadelphian, had been behind all day, but he put together a flock of birdies in the afternoon, took advantage of Nelson's straying from the tight fairways and pulled all even from a 4-hole deficit. How

Cards Defeat Pirates, 3 to 2, In Eleventh

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 28.—Pinchhitter Frankie Crespi's sharp single into left scored George Kurowski from second base in the eleventh inning tonight to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-to-2 triumph over Pittsburgh. A crowd of 16,577 saw the Buccaneers drop their fifth straight game.

The Bucs jumped to a momentary lead in the third when Rookie Cully Rikard walked and scored on singles by Johnny Barrett and Bob Elliott.

Walker Cooper's fourth-inning homer behind a single by Enos Slaughter put the Cards ahead until the ninth, and it looked like another triumph for him and his brother battery mate Morton.

Johnny Beazley however, had to go to Mort's aid to put out a blazing Pirate fire in the ninth. Vince DiMaggio fanned to open that frame for the Bucs. Jimmy Wasdell walked and Babe Phelps, third straight pinchhitter, singled. Rikard then drove in the tying run with another single and when Barrett walked, Beazley went to the mound.

Beazley forced Fletcher to bounce into a fast and unusual double killing, Second Baseman Jimmy Brown to Catcher Cooper, back to Brown for a force play at second.

The Cards filled the bases in the tenth with two out on Aldon Wilkie, who succeeded Ken Heintzelman, Ray Sanders, pinchhitting, fanned for the third out.

Bob Feller Will Return To Norfolk

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., May 28.—Bob Feller will return to the Norfolk Naval Training Station for temporary duty on or about June 6, Capt. H. A. McClure, commandant of the station revealed today.

Feller's return will strengthen the sailors considerably for a June baseball schedule that includes big Navy Relief games with Portsmouth of the Piedmont League, Baltimore of the International League, an all-star Army team and Camp Lee.

The former great Cleveland pitching star will team with Freddy Hutchinson, former Detroit hurler, to form the nucleus of a crack mound staff, just as they did earlier this season before feller was transferred to Newport, R. I.

Just how long Feller will stay is not definitely known, but he is expected to stay at the Norfolk base about two weeks and then return to the Newport Base.

The Sailors will meet the Portsmouth club there next Tuesday night. The game with Baltimore is scheduled for the Monumental City June 10, while the contest with the all-star Army team is slated for June 16 at the Polo Grounds in New York.

Gordon's Hit in 9th Wins for Yanks, 3-2

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Joe Gordon waited until the ninth inning to stretch his batting streak to 13 straight games today and then he came through with the blow that gave the New York Yankees a 3-to-2 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics.

The single, hit with the bases loaded and scoring Tommy Henrich, broke up a pitching duel between Veteran Jack Knott and Rookie Hank Borowy and gave the world champions a sweep of the two-game series.

The former Fordham pitcher had not worked in more than three weeks. As the result he was a bit rusty and gave up nine hits, compared with six the Yanks got off Knott. Nevertheless, Borowy stuck it out to chalk up his second win of the season.

Both teams scored in the first inning with Buddy Hassett's single doing much to push the Yanks around the bases. The blow also extended his hitting string to eight successive games. An error by Borowy coupled with singles by Pete Suder and Dick Siebert gave the A's their first inning tally.

Three consecutive hits by Suder, Siebert and Wilson Miles in the fourth sent the Athletics in front but Borowy fixed that up in the fifth when his double over Miles' head scored Phil Rizzuto with the tying run.

Two walks and Charlies Keller's bunt loaded the bases for the Yanks in the ninth. Gordon promptly came through with the game-winning single.

Wynn Pitches, Bats Nats to 5-1 Victory

Pitcher Drives In 3 Runs With 2 Hits As Boston Bows; 8500 Fans Present

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Rookie Early Wynn outpitched what the Red Sox had to offer last night and on the basis of run-producing he out-hit the Boston club. The young right-hander of Cherokee blood thieved the show under the Griffith Stadium lights as 8500 customers watched the Nats lick the Red Sox, 5-1.

Wynn didn't demonstrate complete faith in either his own seven-hit pitching or the scoring ability of his Washington teammates. He slugged three of the Nats' runs across the plate personally, with a pair of singles.

He gave himself a 2-0 lead over Charley Wagner in the second inning when he swatted two runners home with a single to centerfield, and in the eighth, with his advantage only 3-1, he banged another Washington run home with his second hit of the night.

Along the way, Wynn struck out six of the Red Sox, and along toward the cool of the evening, in the later innings, he was breezing to a victory after his last three futile starting attempts. He had the excellent collaboration of Mickey Vernon, who stomped out of a hitting slump with three safe blows that figured in two Washington runs.

The Red Sox escaped a shutout by scoring a fifth-inning run after Catcher Conroy led off with a double to deep left. Conroy went to third on a sacrifice bunt and moved home on Dominick DiMaggio's long fly. Otherwise, the Red Sox weren't scoring. Conroy's blow was the only extra-base hit Wynn permitted.

The Nats swatted Wagner for 9 hits with Mickey Vernon getting Washington's first blow of the game—a right field two-bagger that touched off a 2-run outburst. Early filed out, but Repass walked. Pofahl forced Repass at second but atoned somewhat for that mistake by stealing second while Wagner held the ball like a dolt. With 2 runners in scoring position, Wynn whacked 'em home with a drive into center field that Doerr reached but couldn't hold.

With 2 out in the fifth, the Nats reclaimed the run the Red Sox scored earlier in the inning. Chartak walked and Estalella and Vernon moved him home with consecutive singles.

Manager Joe Cronin, playing third base in the absence of the injured Jim Tabor, helped the Nats to a pair of comfort-making runs in the eighth when he bobbled Repass'

New York Friends Bid Mead Farewell

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—The Tenth Avenue mob and the Broadway boys and girls said so long to Eddie Mead today.

"Beef-Stew" Eddie, the big fat fellow who came out of Hell's Kitchen, was buried in Calvary Cemetery on Long Island after a funeral mass in Sacred Heart Church, hard by Tenth Avenue, where he was born and grew up.

There were nearly 500 persons at the mass, and they came from all places and all stations. Fight folks and show people were there, and politicians and just plain guys and girls from the West Side. They all know large Eddie as a big-hearted, good natured fellow, with an enormuos appetite for beef stew and a reputation for never having refused a bid for a handout.

Eddie died Monday from a heart attack on a street corner. Today his pals filled the chapel of the West Side church. There was Joe Lynch, the former bantamweight champion and the first titleholder Eddie managed in his quarter-century in the fight game.

Browns Score 4 in Eighth To Beat Chisox

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 28.—The Chicago White Sox contributed three walks and the Browns slammed out two hits, one a rousing double by Rick Ferrell, in a big eighth inning in which St. Louis crossed the plate four times for a final 6-to-4 triumph tonight.

Harland Clift started the Browns' half of the eighth with a sneaky infield roller which went for a hit. Pitcher Orval Grove then walked two of the next three men to fill the bases and took a walk himself. Pete Appleton replaced him on the mound.

But St. Louis was just warming up. Chet Laabs walked, forcing in Clift. Vernon Stephens forced Laabs but George McQuinn scored and then Veteran Rick Ferrell doubled for two more runs.

It gave the Browns their 6-4 margin and the White Sox could do nothing in the ninth.

Stephens, who made sensational plays at shortstop all night, hit two doubles and batted in three runs, was top all-around performer for the night.

Robinson Wins Close Fight Over Servo

Fans Boo Verdict of Sensational Scrap In Garden; Split-Decision Is Voted

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Ray Robinson ran his all-victorious string to 121 triumphs in a row as a fighter tonight, but he never came closer to having it broken than he did in going all out to take a 10-round decision from Marty Servo before a roaring, thrilled crowd in Madison Square Garden.

As a matter of fact, on the Associated Press score card, Robinson won by the mere margin of one round. And this margin might have been the second, in which both fighters were guilty of hitting low, but for which Referee Billy Cavanagh penalized only Servo with loss of the round.

After the verdict was announced, the booing was so loud that Announcer Harry Balogh was unable to make himself heard sufficiently over the public address system to introduce the next fight.

And, though Referee Cavanagh took the second round away from the little Coast Guardsman, from Schenectady, N. Y., without first warning him, he took the trouble of warning the skinny Harlem Hammer for using his head in the final round—and then did not penalize him.

A crowd of 13,673 fans contributed to a gross gate of $31,780 to see the show.

Great Fight

For action and punch-a-minute fireworks, there have been few clout parties in this big Eighth Avenue sports palace like tonight's tussle. From start to finish, the kid from up-State carried the fight to the uptown stringbean, who went into the ring a 1-to-6 favorite, and it wasn't until the third round that Roundhouse Ray's bolo punches under the heart began to pull him through.

Robinson's margin was by a split decision. Cavanagh, after probably costing Servo the fight by taking the second round away from him, voted for Marty as the winner. Judges Bill Healey and Tom Curley balloted for Robinson.

Capt. Overesch Named Navy's Athletic Head

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—One of Navy's greatest athletes, Capt. Harvey E. (Swede) Overesch, returned to the United States Naval Academy today as athletic director.

Succeeding Capt. T. Starr King, detached last month for sea duty, Overesch became the first former Navy graduate manager of athletics to assume the joint responsibilities of head of the physical training department and athletic director.

Announcement of his arrival put an end to many weeks speculation about King's successor. When actually appointed athletic director several weeks ago by the Navy, the former three-sport star was on duty with the United States Fleet in foreign waters.

Overesch, a standout end in football, also competed on the varsity basketball team and rowed with the crew between 1912-1915.

Servo Donates 10% of Purse to Coast Guard

New York, May 28 (AP).—Marty Servo announced tonight, after losing a close ten-round decision to Ray Robinson, that he is donating 10 per cent of his purse to United States Coast Guard Relief. He is a member of the Coast Guard.

With a gross gate of $31,870 this contribution would amount to more than $500. His purse was estimated at some $5000 to $6000.

Macfarland Junior High trackmen, following in the footsteps of their predecesors for the past 14 years, again walked off with honors in the annual junior track and field meet yesterday at Central Stadium, amassing the outlandish total of 111 29-70 points.

In second place was Alice Deal with 38 2-35 points and Eliot finished third with 33 among the 10 schools which entered some 400 youthful athletes.

Despite its overwhelming margin, largest in its 14 straight triumphs, Macfarland took credit for neither of the two records broken and only one of the two tied.

Eddie Crandall of Powell, slim 130-pounder, accounted for both new marks and with a vengeance. In the high jump event of his class he leaped 5 feet 10⅝ inches to better a mark which has stood since 1931 by over 6 inches. Finally in the broad jump he soared 20 feet 4¾ inches, almost 2 feet better than the existing standard.

Dock Jew, a Chinese lad from Taft, was the first to approach a record in the meet. The little 115-pounder drove to an 8-second effort in the 70-yard dash to tie a mark which has been tied six times but never broken in the last 11 years.

The other record performance went to Lamm of Macfarland when he posted a jump of 18 feet 11½ inches in the 115-pound broad jump.

Macfarland achieved its victory with a total of eight first places in the meet's five classes, seven seconds and seven thirds. Again it was John Donovan, popular mentor, in the role of winning coach.

'Learn-to-Swim' Campaign Set By Red Cross

Plans for a summer "Learn to Swim" campaign to be held in all outdoor pools in Washington from May 30 to September 6 were announced today by the District of Columbia Chapter, American Red Cross.

Max Farrington, volunteer chairman of swimming, diving, life saving and water safety, stated yesterday that 25,000 persons can be instructed to swim free of charge in this Red Cross project. He declared that this year's "Learn to Swim" campaign would be one of the largest single contributions possible to make to the physical training and health of District residents.

Free classes will be conducted at all the public outdoor swimming pools every weekday morning from Monday through Friday. Classes will run from 9 a. m. until noon, with from five to ten separate classes at each pool.

Dry land drills are used in the first part of the teaching. This results in strengthening the muscles, and conditioning them to the movements used in swimming.

Junior Schoolboys Match and Smash a Couple of Records

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 28.—Heaven has enough to contend with these days. But on top of everything else there is a congregation in New Jersey, near Camden, appealing en masse to Providence for rain so that the new Camden race track, which will officially induct Jersey into the horse-gambling business, cannot be completed in time.

CONSIDINE

Seems that there is a ration board deadline on production of horse parks, among other things. If a park now under construction is not finished by June 6, no more vital materials will be released for such work. The promoters of the new track have put three eight-hour shifts to work, in a commendable effort to improve the breed of thoroughbred. On one hand we have a group of sincere and certainly determined citizens appealing to the highest authority to stay the hand and hammer of the wicked. On the other hand we have the night shift (strictly union labor) wiring the varicose veins of the parimutuel system.

At this writing the rains haven't come. We plan to sit back and watch this case from now until midnight, June 6. It may not live in the history of horse racing, but we don't remember anything like it. We haven't been touted on either side, in this question.

If the rains come, as besought by the antiracing faction, we can write a piece saying that there is definitely an antiracing praying clique, and that it probably had something to do with the deluge that ran the multimillion dollar Golden Gate track out of existence at San Francisco.

If the drought continues and the selfless promoters finish their task of erecting a modern plant, with downhill runways leading to all mutuel windows, then we will have to accept that as a sign from on high that horse racing must be numbered among the essential industries.

Joe DiMaggio talking: "I made a triple the other day on a high fly that fell right behind first base. Any other time I would have felt embarrassed. But not this year! I'm gratefully accepting all such breaks.

"Keller and I have taken a beating this year from our bench, on account of the way we've been hitting. We certainly deserve it, too. But the worst was the other day when Lefty Gomez said, 'Well, I may not be able to win as a pitcher, but I can always break into the Yankee outfield.'

"Why is Gordon hitting so much better? First, he's a great natural hitter. This year he's paying more attention to it. He doesn't go for bad balls. He isn't striking out like he used to. He's out there in front, meeting every ball on the nose. Sure he has a chance of leading the league."

"Oh, dear," swore Connie Mack on Wednesday at the Yankee Stadium, when young Wagner, his catcher, kept calling for fast and slow balls—which the Yankees were murdering—instead of Caligiuri's fine curve ball.

"Wagner!" old Connie finally shouted, coming to the mouth of the dugout and waving his score card. "Curve ball. Curve ball." Joe Gordon was up at the time, looked over at Connie and smiled.

"Okay, Mr. Mack," Wagner shouted back to the bench. "I'll signal for all."

"Listen, Mr. Mack," Al Simmons spoke up. "Gordon heard you. And so did Buddy Rosar, who's coming up next."

"I imagine they did," Connie said. "But it's still his best pitch, and it's the only way I can get Wagner to call for it."

So Caligiuri threw a curve ball at Gordon and struck him out. He threw another at Rosar, and Buddy popped up.

Wilson High, Central Play In Crucial Tilts

Though Wilson and Central appear to have a definite date for the interhigh baseball playoff June 5, the whole thing might be called off today after the clubs engage in games away from home. Central moves out to face Roosevelt and Wilson invades Eastern, both games starting at 4 p. m.

The Central - Roosevelt fracas should prove the most interesting, if for no other reason than that the schools have been the bitterest rivals since the student body of Central was halved to make up the student body of Roosevelt. The latter, in addition, is a single game behind its Thirteenth Street foe in the standings and will be battling to toss second place into a two-way tie.

Billy Garner, dimutive right-hander, is an almost certain pitching choice for Roosevelt. He will be opposed by either Aaron Weisenberg or Harry Wolfe.

Wilson, leading the series with five triumphs in six games, has already clinched at least a deadlock for a playoff berth. Despite Eastern's improved showing against Coolidge on Wednesday, the Tigers should have little difficulty today.

Life Guards Needed, East Potomac Opens

The opening of the East Potomac swimming pool has been set up a day from its original starting date and will start the season's activity Saturday at 1 p. m. Beginning Sunday the pool will be open from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily. There are openings for several life guards on the staff.

Lee's Superb Pitching Beats Reds in 12th

By International News Service

Chicago, May 28.—Big Bill Lee registered his seventh win of the season today, banging out a long fly in the twelfth inning that scored the winning tally in a 2-to-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The winning tally reached third on Harry Lowrey's single with one out and Bert Haas' two-base error on Clyde McCullough's grounder. Ray Starr, the Red pitcher, gave up 10 hits and went all the way.

Lee allowed only six widely scattered hits in the twelve innings and fanned seven. Hank Sauer's fourth-inning homer accounted for Cincinnati's run.

'Fire' Trucks In Form, Tigers Lick Tribe, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 28.—For the first time this season Rookie Virgil (Fire) Trucks fulfilled expectations today by pitching the Detroit Tigers to a four-hit 6-to-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the first of two games in a fight for the American League's second place. The Tigers now trail the Indians by a single game.

While it was his second major league victory, it was the first time Trucks, 23-year-old right-hander up from Buffalo of the International League, was around at the finish in four games. Roy Weatherly gathered two of the safeties, including his third homer in the fourth inning, and Les Fleming singled across the other run in the seventh.

Three Cleeland pitchers yielded nine hits, and Lefty Al Milnar, touched for all the runs in the first six innings, was charged with his third defeat against two victories. Oscar Grimes' two-run error in the first gave the Tigers a commanding lead, and Pinky Higgins connected for a three-run double in the fifth that clinched the decision.

District Attorney Lends Support In Luncheon Honoring Club Owner

Edward M. Curran, United States District Attorney, yesterday accepted the appointment of chairman of the reorganized Washington (D. C.) Citizens Committee which will honor Clark C. Griffith, veteran Washington Baseball Club president, with a testimonial luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel a week from Wednesday afternoon, June 10, at 12:30 o'clock.

James (Count) Cornwell of the Department of Justice, will be chairman of the ticket committee, while Fred G. Spaulding agreed to continue as chairman of the Arrangements committee. Other committee members will be named today.

The Griffith testimonial originally was scheduled for this past Wednesday, May 27, but was postponed because of pressure of business which would have prevented many high officials from being present.

Four tables accommodating ten persons each were claimed yesterday. Curran, Tom O'Donnell, Wash B. Williams and Joseph E. Jones all made reservations that sent the ticket sale near the 150 mark.

Spaulding and Cornwell announced that Griffith's luncheon will be restricted to the first 500 persons claiming tickets on sale at Navy Relief Headquarters, 1721 I Street Northwest, and priced at $2.50 each. Reservation may be made through EXecutive 0040 between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. and the deadline for reservations has been set for a week from Tuesday, June 9, at 6 p. m.

Top Transit Bests Favorites, Pays $20.60 at Charles Town

Roman Boy Runs Third In Feature

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Showing little or no regard for the so-called sprint champion of this section, J. E. Hughes Top Transit caused a major upset here this afternoon. The 3-year-old son of Dr. Freeland and Wild Transit, answered apprentice Jockey Al Bocson's urging to take a three-way photo finish by a neck margin in the Roundtop Purse, featuring the Thursday program. The camera voted the Cedar Hill Farm's Never Home into second money a head in advance of P. H. Faulconer's Roman Boy, the favorite in the field of eight operating over the abbreviated sprint route of 4½ furlongs.

Top Transit was overlooked in the betting and returned his scattered backers a $20.60 mutuel. He was clocked in 50 2-5 seconds over a lightning-fast track, a second and two-fifths over the mark for the route set by Irene's Bob. Top Transit was getting 12 pounds from Roman Boy today.

Roman Boy and Never Home began a pace-making battle soon after the start that went on right to the wire with Top Transit breaking it up. Bocson never had Top Transit worse than third. Entering the stretch he brought the 3-year-old to the outside and went to work on him. Danny Scocca on Never Home and George Acosta on Roman Boy, also went into hard drives, but Top Transit was not to be denied.

Those in the crowd of 5000 who bet on the daily double combination of J. Goldberg's Signboard in the third race and the Shenandoah Stables' Terry May in the second race collected $40.60 for each $2 investment.

Among the afternoon's good rides was one by Jockey Willie Kelly aboard Mrs. Dan Chamblin's Who Reigh in the sixth race. He brought the son of Whichone home ahead of Saran and Grand Court after being a trailer for half of the mile and a sixteenth route. This winner, in taking his third victory of the meeting, paid $7.60.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The latest addition to the jockey forces hereabouts is William Taylor Alexander, a 17-year-old boy from Detroit. He can make 98 pounds and is under contract to S. B. Webb. Lou Zimmerman has taken over the local division of the O. S. Jennings stable. The two leading riders of the meeting were absent yesterday. Martin Bletzacker left town on business and Willie Dufford was taken slightly ill after he worked some horses in the morning. Trainer Earl Fewell who had two winners—Saint Pyrewick and Grouchy—on Wednesday's program, left yesterday to report to the United States Army. "Those winners were nice farewell presents," laughed Tabler. William P. C. Perry, treasurer of the Charles Town Jockey Club, is a candidate for State Senator for West Virginia in the districts of Jefferson, Berkeley, Morgan, Hampshire and Mineral Counties. He is a native of this State and has been connected with the jockey club for a number of years. Rough Brigade, injured here last Tuesday, was humanely destroyed. He was the property of popular J. Y. Christmas. Edward Brining was kicked and injured while saddling the plater Ara-Ornis here last Wednesday and is under a doctor's care at his home in Hagerstown. Charles Printz, a Charles Town boy, has joined the pressbox staff and Ray Haight has taken over the work of Palmer Heagerty who left for Delaware Park. Jockey Danny Scocca, the Washington boy, had a busy day for a little man yesterday. He rode in eight of the nine races. That new sprinkler here is coming in mighty handy these days. It's a honey. They were mowing the grass in the infield yesterday which reminded me that I needed a haircut. Answer to J. K.: The 5-furlong chute hasn't been used here for five or more years. I don't believe anybody remembers what the record was for that distance. The horses broke too near the turn. That's why it was abandoned. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SMOKE BALL raced well at Pimlico and should have won a race there. Might be the right one .in .the .day's .opener. BIG SNEEZE was a winner here and belongs close. MERRY LIEGE'S last was good.

Second race—TOVARICH is best of the eligibles for this 7 furlongs. Gets in light and will be hard to beat. The reserve list holds most of the good horses. PORT MELODY and FALCONIERE will be close if sent postward.

Third race—IDA TIME has been knocking at the door and couldn't find a better spot than this. PIMLICO LADY has speed and will be helped by the outside post position. UNITED FORCE for the minor award.

Fourth race—FRANK BROOKE stopped last out on a bad track. He gets an inside post position today and may last long enough to take it all. GRADATIM has been running honestly and belongs close. MISS KSAR to take care of the others.

Fifth race—HIGH BUD and SILVER BEAM hold the chief speed in this field. I prefer them in the order named. DUPLIKET'S last was encouraging.

Sixth race—HONEY PLAY was a winner here over better company than this. Needs only the right handling. DARTING STAR also gained a set of brackets over this oval and belongs close. BELFONDS BOY for the show end.

Seventh race—KAMARI and LADY JAFFA have plenty of speed and the one who survives the front duel will be the winner. I like them in the order listed. If they both stop I'll take FUSHIONETTE and LOVE MARK.

Eighth race—JUDGES BID is the come-from-behind horse in this field. May run over the others in the stretch. MYSTIC MAN and PIT TERRIER for the place and show.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take SIR JEROME, LADY DEVINE and MOST ALERT.

Best bet—HIGH BUD.

Dodgers Quell 9th-Inning Rally to Again Lick Braves, 6-4

Late Runs Fail to Win From Higbe

Boston Takes Sixth Straight Beating From Brooklyn; Max West Homers

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 28.—The Brooklyn Dodgers continued their mastery over the Boston Braves today, chalking up their sixth success of the season at the expense of Casey Stengel's men with a 6-to-4 decision.

In running their victory string to four straight, however, the Dodgers had to put down a ninth-inning rally as the Braves sought to break the jinx that has kept them from winning a single game from the league leaders this year.

For seven innings Kirby Higbe, bidding for his third triumph, held the Braves scoreless and allowed only three hits—one in the fourth and two in the seventh. Higbe, showing signs of tiring, walked two men in the eighth. After a force out had moved Frank Demaree to third, Tommy Holmes came through with a run-producing single.

The Braves continued their attack in the final frame with Max West connecting with his second homer of the year to account for two of the three runs the Bean Town boys scored in that inning. Higbe finally squelched the rally, however, by fanning Pinch Hitter Ernie Lombardi.

An error by Frolian Fernandez paved the way for the Dodgers first run in the third inning although the first of Pee Wee Reese's three hits sent the tally across. A single by Dolph Camilli, Dixie Walker's double and Eddie Miller's fumble produced two more for the champs in the fourth.

Camilli and Walker again hit safely in the sixth, following which Joe Medwick poked a triple into right field. After Johnny Sain had relieved Earley, Rizzo boosted Medwick home with a long fly.

did Byron answer this challenge from his senior opponent and round-the-world traveler? He smacked a second great shot to the thirty-third green and dropped a birdie putt of 12 feet, and on the thirty-fourth played a magnificent approach and holed a 5-footer for a second birdie. They halved the thirty-fifth in par threes and Nelson was the winner, 2 and 1.

The other members of the Big Four romped home. Wood and Leland Gibson of Kansas City, staged an Alphonse-Gaston trap act in the morning but in the afternoon Wood won five straight holes, four with pars, and the match, 7 and 6. Sammy Snead gave former finalist Willie Goggin a sound thrashing, 9 and 8, with three-under par golf. Snead didn't have five birdies in a row today. He only had three in a row on 8, 9 and 10 in the morning, and then an eagle on the par five eleventh.

Hogan, the mechanical man who does not know the color of the rough, made Vic Bass feel good. Ky Laffoon had trimmed Bass, 12 and 11, in the first round and today Hogan poured it on Laffoon, 9 and 8, including a morning 66 and seven under par finish.

Laffoon was the red-hot man on the first nine yesterday but today Hogan gave him a dose of his own medicine with a 30-footer for a birdie on the first hole and a 15-footer for a birdie on the third. That made him 2 up and he went to lunch 8 up and breezed in.

The eighteenth hole finally got some action today. Two matches went to the home green in quick succession as Cooper beat last year's semifinalist, Lloyd Mangrum, there, 1 up. They had been battling even all day but Harry made his par for a win on the thirteenth stand up. He was still one up coming to the last hole and halved it in bogey fives as Mangrum drove in the trees and Cooper was over in two but scrambled back for a half.

Jim Turnesa Wins

Jim Turnesa, who said "Thank you" when Harold McSpaden congratulated him today, making four words he has spoken this week, won 1 up on the eighteenth, or thirty-sixth hole and the match from the 1937 tournament finalist. McSpaden hit a drive which would have been a disgrace to the fifth flight of the district women's champion on the last hole, a quick-bending hook which nestled in the woods less than 100-yards from the tee. He went from there to the right-hand woods, on the green in three and down in five and at that nearly earned a half as Turnesa was playing safe for two putts and almost took three.

Ed Dudley took time out from his presidential duties to hand Dayton, Ohio's, Tonny Penna the same treatment he gave Denny Shute yesterday. Dudley simply won a handful of early holes and held the lead all day, finally winning on the sixteenth, the same hole he won yesterday, 4 and 2. Dudley was 1 over par for the day, and was not putting too well.

Jimmy Demaret was second only to Ben Hogan as the day's low scorer. Attired in another flashy outfit, Demaret played golf to match in beating Tommy Harmon of nearby Montclair, 3 and 2. Demaret played the long par fives well, dropping two across-the-green putts for eagles as he made his lunchtime lead of three holes stand.

Individuals Steal 4-A Track Spotlight From NYU, Penn State

Blozis, MacMitchell and Ewell Featured In Sixty-sixth Annual Event Today

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—New York University and Penn State are favored to fight it out for the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. two-day track and field championship starting tomorrow, but chief interest will be in the performances of three senior athletes who have played important roles in the sport for the last three years.

The big three who are expected to dominate the sixty-sixth games at the Triborough Stadium are Leslie MacMitchell of New York University, Norwood (Barney) Elwell of Penn State, and Al Blozis, Georgetown's giant weightman.

They'll have some opposition in holding the spotlight Saturday when Greg Rice, world indoor 2-mile record holder and undefeated in two years, hooks up with Preacher Gil Dodds, Indiana's Earl Mitchell and two others in a special race. But upon the performances of MacMitchell and Ewell largely depends whether New York University will win the title for the second successive year or the Nittany Lions will add the outdoor crown to their indoor title.

MacMitchell has won 10 I. C. 4A titles in 11 starts. His only defeat was in the 880 as a sophomore. The one-time boy wonder will defend both the miles and half-mile titles and anchor the mile relay team in a span of two hours Saturday. He figures to have his hands full in both races with Don Burnham, Dartmouth's sophomore comer, teammate Bill Hulse, and Bill Scott of Michigan State offering the strongest opposition in tht mile. Hulse, Lynn Radcliffe of Syracuse, and Dartmouth's Bob Williams makes no romp for Leslie in the 880.

Ewell never has been beaten in the outdoor meet. That'll mean he'll be attempting to sweep the 100 and 200-yard dashes and broad jump for the third straight year. He holds the I. C. 4A broad jump record of 25 feet 2½ inches and the 220-yard mark of 20.7 and his coholder of the century of 9.6.

hard smash for an error. Pofahl sacrificed Repass to second and Wynn got the run home with a single to left. Case forced Wynn and then stole second. Spence walked and Mike Chartak fetched Case home with a double into left field.

Wynn got over the hump in the eighth inning when the Nats, leading 3-1, Pesky beat out an infield hit. With two out, dangerous Ted Williams, the league's home-run champion, worked Wynn to a 3-and-2 count and fouled off two balls before Wynn lured him into hitting a straight away fly to center for the third out.

Manager Joe Cronin, who was harranguing the umpires all evening, narrowly escaped ejection from the game in the fourth inning. The sensitive ears of Umpire in Chief Cal Hubbard picked up Cronin's comments from the Boston dugout, and Hubbard halted play to deliver a warning to the Red Sox manager . . . Private Cecil Travis, a guest of Clark Griffith, was introduced by the public address system in the third inning and given a tremendous ovation . . . Travis doffed his service cap beautifully . . . He is on furlough from Camp Wheeler, Ga., where he was inducted in October . . . He's an infantryman . . . Travis has been playing two ball games a week with service teams and declares he could step back into a big league line-up tomorrow . . . The Red Sox never regretted the Stan Spence deal more than they did in the third inning when, with a man on base, Spence galloped back to the center-field fence for a one-hand catch that took a triple away from Pete Fox . . .

Ocean City Limits Fishing To Daylight

By the Associated Press

Ocean City, Md., May 28.—Capt. N. C. M. Johnson, captain of the port of Ocean City, announced today deep sea and surf fishing along Maryland's coast line would be limited to the daylight hours.

He added deep sea fishing would be permitted 5 miles off shore. Charter boats are available to give anglers a chance at the bluefish, trout, kingfish, porgies and other varieties of game fish.

Commercial fishermen docked last weekend with approximately 30,000 poundsd of fish averaging from one-half to six pounds, Johnson reported.

Johnson said no identification card would be required for either the surf or deep sea fishing, although boat owners must have identification cards. The owners will be held responsible for parties.

The mayor and city council will give an annual award for the largest and second largest fish caught off Ocean City. First prize is a $100 Government bond and the second a $50 bond.

Fishing and Hunting . . .

with Jack Bell

Where is the best brown trout waters in the country? Branch Pond near Ellsworth, Me., should be, for in three weeks of fishing this season, this body of water has produced about 200 brownies — and what brownies. The largest weighed in so far was 11½ pounds. Several more tipped the scales at over 10 pounds, with 50 or more weighing between 5 and 10-pounds.

JACK BELL

Early this week two brothers James and John Flanagan of Bangor, Me., caught two big brownies while on the same trip, becoming members of the now famous "The One That Didn't Get Away Club." John's trout weighed 10¾ pounds and James' 8 pounds.

What at first appeared would be a very early spring fishing season in the State of Maine, suffered a definite set-back late in March and early April. It was not until the early part of this month that inland fishing became even fair, many of the lakes remaining locked in ice until the first of May.

Now it undoubtedly has turned out to be the best of all fishing seasons that the State has enjoyed. The weather has been just cool enough to bring the season along slowly. The best sport is still ahead, and according to Earle Ducette of Augusta, the fish must have been feeding on vitimin pills during the winter. Old-timers are flabbergasted at the consistent large size of the fish being brought in.

Records show that in the past three years some seventy-odd anglers have made "The One That Didn't Get Away Club." At the rate entries are being named this year, Earle tells us they feel sure at least that many members will become eligible this year alone.

Membership in the club is reserved for those who catch a trout weighing, 6 pounds or over; a land-locked salmon, 10 pounds or over; a small-mouthed bass, 5 pounds or over; a lake trout or togue as they are called in Maine, 15 pounds or over.

The hardhead hordes are now slowly making their way up the Chesapeake Bay. They are now firmly established up to and in the Patuxent River. This week the few anglers that fished in nearby Herring Bay, caught hardheads or croakers averaging 15 to 25 to a boat—fair sized ones at that. It should be possible to take them off most any waters this weekend.

Sea-trout or weakfish are now inside the capes and making their way up the bay. However, it will not be long before they are taken around the lower end of the Potomac. But it will be weeks before they show up in nearby waters.

Small and big stripers or rockfish are being taken in the Patuxent at Point Patience and in Jerome's Creek. Over on the Eastern Shore, the Narrows off Bloody Point and the Choptank in the vicinity of Tilghams rockfish are caught either by trolling or chumming. These waters can be easily reached by boat from Shadyside, Galesville or the twin beaches North Beach-Chesapeake Beach.

So far we have not received any good reports of stripers off our nearby shore.

We receive reports of all kinds of game fish, but, nothing of the bluefish. Blues are about to become like some mythical fish to all of us. To create an interest and an incentive in the search for this fine game fish, the Neptune Room, Earle Restaurant, meeting place of anglers, has provided a beautiful and useful silver trophy—a cocktail set suitably engraved to go to the fisherman catching the largest bluefish during the 1942 season.

Everyone has the same chance—hand line or rod and reel fisherman. Entry blanks and rules may be secured from captains of fishing boats, and if he should not have them, they can be obtained by calling at the Neptune.

Of course you, too, are eligible to become a member of the "You Hook It—We Cook It" Club, after getting your free membership card. This should be of special interest to the newcomer who has no means of intertaining his fishing buddies or friends to a dinner when he makes a big catch. Get further details at the Neptune.

Brewers Rout Mellanos, 12-1

Bill Liggett of the Heurich Brewers tossed a seven-hit game yesterday to lead his mates to a 12-1 victory over Mellanos Cafe in a Post-Industrial League game on the Ellipse.

The contest marked the return of Huck Stahl, veteran infielder, to league play for the first time this year. He replaced Frank Brewer, regular third sacker, whose injury earlier in the week may keep him out for the season.

Inventories 67% Larger In Stores Here

Not Seen Excessive In View of 40% Employment Leap

Stocks of goods on hand in Washington department stores on April 30 were 67 per cent larger than at the same time last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. Stocks were up 47 per cent in stores throughout the Fifth Reserve District.

The increase in store inventories here was considered natural and not excessive in view of the more than 40 per cent increase in Government employment during the past year. Reports that the War Production Board intended to force overstocked stores to dispose of part of their inventories caused little concern here, according to one observer. He pointed out that stocks of goods on hand here are not out-of-line with the record sales volume.

The Reserve Bank also reported that outstanding orders for merchandise to meet the needs of Washington department stores were 106 per cent higher at the end of April than a year ago. Orders for goods averaged 136 per cent higher in the whole fifth district, were up 113 per cent in Richmond and 219 per cent in Baltimore.

Store collections in Washington in April were 29 per cent of accounts due at the beginning of the mouth, the review said. Payments in the fifth district averaged 32 per cent of accounts due.

For the first four months Washington department store sales averaged 35 per cent higher than in the same period last year. The fifth district average gain was 29 per cent. Some indication of a sales letdown here in April was noted with the gain over last year being only 21 per cent. The fifth district sales averaged 13 per cent higher for the month.

New York Cotton

New York, May 28 (AP).—Cotton futures lost 25 to 30 cents a bale today in the lightest volume of trading for a full session in weeks.

Trade buying on a small scale was about balanced by light hedging presumed by observers to be against loan repossessions. Scattered liquidation of July contracts and transfer of commitments to later deliveries made up a fair portion of the business.

Gain Estimated In Socony's Net For 5 Months

New York, May 28 (AP).—John A. Brown, president of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. told stockholders at the annual meeting today he estimated earnings in the first five months of 1941 at about 15 million dollars before taxes, compared with $13,200,000 before taxes in the same months last year.

Comparison of net earnings after taxes cannot be estimated, Brown said, until the new tax bill is passed.

Brown said the company's domestic earnings before taxes in April were approximately half of what they were in that month last year and only about half what they were in March due to excessive increases in the cost of moving products to the Eastern States.

"The movement of products East at high cost must go on and must be increased, if possible," Brown said, "but surely no one will disagree with our opinion that this service cannot be carried on at such heavy loss by industry."

Rail Loadings Off Slightly in Week

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 837,748 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 1304 cars, or 0.2 of 1 per cent, compared with the preceding week; a decrease of 28,279 cars, or 3.3 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 150,268 cars, or 21.9 per cent, compared with 1940.

A contraseasonal drop in total loadings was caused primarily by lagging coal shipments. Ore increased substantially, reflecting expanding industrial production.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, declined to 87.8 compared with 89.0 the previous week, and 90.8 a year ago.

Abbott Laboratories Votes Extra Dividend

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Directors of Abbott Laboratories, pharmaceutical manufacturer, today declared an extra dividend of 10 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 40 cents a share on the common stock. Both dividends are payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 11. Directors also declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the 4 per cent preferred stock, payable July 15 to stockholders of record July 1.

Old Chemical Firm Plans First Offering

New York, May 28 (AP).—George A. Anderson, president of Charles Pfizer & Co., Inc., 93-year-old chemical concern, announced today the company had completed plans for the first public financing in its history, including the sale of more than five million dollars of new common stock.

Anderson said the company's ownership had been confined thus far to employes.

F. Eberstadt & Co. headed an underwriting group which planned to distribute the new stock.

Southern Railway To Give U. S. Bonds As Bank Collateral

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Southern Railway and a group of banks and insurance companies, it was disclosed today, have reached an agreement to substitute Government bonds as collateral for a part of an equipment trust certificate issue sold last June which was subsequently upset by the War Production Board's seizure of 950 freight cars ordered by the railway.

The original issue consisted tof $11,250,000 of 2 per cent certificates sold to pay for 4000 freight cars and other equipment. The transaction proceeded normally until the War Production Board declared all rolling stock under construction subject to seizure and conversion to any channel it might designate.

The Southern was involved in the order to the extent of 910 cars valued at $2,919,000. These it had agreed to pledge as part of the collateral but was unable to do so because the cars were withheld by the WPB order.

Conferences with the bankers resulted in an agreement to use the funds earmarked to pay for the cars to buy $2,546,000 of 2 per cent Government bonds to be used as collateral in place of the freight cars.

85% of War Stamps Are Traded for Bonds

About 85 per cent of the war stamps which the public has turned back to postoffices have been exchanged for war bonds. The Treasury says that in the months of August, 1941, to April, 1942, inclusive, stamp redemptions totaled $83,945,000. Of these, 071,220,00 were traded for bonds, $102,000 exchanged for postal savings certificates and $12,624,000 redeemed for cash.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Losses amounting to about a cent a bushel at the extreme in the grain market today reduced much of yesterday's late gains. Buying was on a much smaller scale. Many traders who made purchases late yesterday, which ran prices up quickly, found they had misinterpreted Washington reports concerning farm legislation. Hedging sales, particularly noticeable in the corn pit in connection with further purchases of grain to arrive, contributed pressure, and wheat dealers were reminded that the new crop harvest is at hand by report of an initial delivery of new grain at an Oklahoma elevator.

Baking Firms Indicted for 'Monopoly'

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 28.—Twenty corporations and 34 individuals associated with the baking business in New York and New England were indicated by a Federal grand jury today, which charged that the defendants, conspiring to restrain trade, had advanced the price of bread and other bakery products.

Two trade groups, the New England Bakers Association and the Connecticut Bakers Association, also were named defendants in the indictment, which alleged that they were used as instrumentalities to carry on the purposees of the alleged conspiracy.

Amang the larger companies named were the General Baking Co., the Ward Baking Co., the Continental Baking Co. and the Hathaway Bakeries.

Some of the individuals indicted are officers of the two trade associations.

The grand jury charged that the defendants advanced the price of bakery products sold to 13 million inhabitants of New England and New York, had eliminated competition in those States, had suppressed the giving of coupons and premiums and other methods of stimulating competition, and had refused to sell returned bakery products to the public.

Livestock Medicine Group Is Indicted

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Fifteen companies and 21 individuals were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of violating the antitrust laws in the sale of medicines and supplies used in treating livestock and other domestic animals.

The indictment alleged that the manufacturers of the medicines sold them only to licensed, graduate veterinarians and refrained from selling them to farmers, livestock and poultry raisers and owners of other animals.

It charged that Associated Serum Producers, Inc., a trade association of hog cholera virus and serum makers to which all the corporate defendants belonged, requires its members to restrict their sales.

Truckers Warned Of 'Whisper' Drive

Buffalo, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Ted V. Rodgers, president of American Trucking Association, Inc., warned the motor transportation industry last night to be on guard against what he termed a "ruthless attempt to put motor carriers out of business."

Addressing western New York trucking executives, he said that competing transportation agencies were using the rubber shortage as a basis for a whispering campaign "designed to convince shippers that truck operations have been curtailed to the point where motor cariers no longer are able to render satisfactory service."

Rodgers emphasized that truck operators have been given preference on tires, gasoline and replacement parts necessary to keep in operation and said that trucks now transport 18 per cent of all freight.

Washingtonian Made Head of Lime Group

Hot Spring, Va., May 28 (AP).—K. L. Hammond of Keystone, Ala., was made chairman yesterday of the board of directors of the Naional Lime Association.

Other officers named at the twenty-fourth annual meeting here were: S. Walter Stauffer, Washington, president and general manager; W. Vernon Brumbaugh, Washington, secretary and assistant treasurer; James H. McNamara, Earle Rock, Va., treasurer, and Rona F. Medford, Washington, assistant secretary.

Nonceilinged Commodities Rise Sharply

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board yesterday ordered a major portion of the Nation's fine cotton yarn production set aside for the Army and Navy, forcing a sharp curtailment in the manufacture of more expensive men's shirts and underwear and women's dresses.

Under the terms of the order, combed yarn mills must earmark at least 40 per cent of their output of medium combed yarn and not less than 65 per cent of their coarse combed yarn for the armed services, and operate at "maximum practicable capacity."

The War Production Board yesterday prohibited production after June 30 of various plumbing fixtures commonly used in homes and commercial establishments.

The list includes bathroom and laundry sinks, foot baths, drinking fountains, water closet bowls, frost closets and tanks for water closets or urinals.

At the same time the board limited the amount of iron and steel which may be used in septic tanks, shower stalls and receptors, plaster interceptors and grease interceptors.

Officials estimated the restrictions would save about 46,000 tons of iron and 7200 tons of steel annually. Accurate estimates of present stocks of the items banned after June 20 were not available, but WPB said it was believed that about 250,000 of each of the essential items were on hand—enough to satisfy necessary requirements for some time.

The War Production Board madified its ban on use of slide fasteners yesterday to permit manufacturers to unload stocks made before April 1, and emphasized that it had no objection to fasteners made of sterling silver or plastics.

Under the original order, use of metal slide fasteners was prohibited after June 1. Use of metal in their manufacture already has been halted.

The amendment will allow many companies to consume stocks of fasteners in production of a wide variety of "nonessential" articles, such as billfolds, bathrobes, bathing suits, cosmetic sets, purses, sport jackets, luggage, shoes, shirts and lingerie.

The Government took control over the Nation's supplies of butyl alcohol yesterday, and announced that all grades would be allocated to purchasers beginning July 1.

Such alcohol is important in the manufacture of explosives, plastics, paint, protective coatings and brake fluid.

Purchasers must apply to the War Production Board for allocations, but WPB said deliveries could be made within allocation procedure to persons using less than 54 gallons a month—provided the total of such deliveries does not exceed 2 per cent of a producer's monthly output.

Profit Taking Stems Further Rise in Stocks; Close Finds Bulk of List Moderately Lower

New York, May 28.—Enough profits were cashed on Wednesday's brisk rally to stem the rising tide in today's stock market. Steels and motors, buoyant performers of the day before, were in difficulties the greater part of the day, although the latter steadied at the last. While an assortment of favorites managed to emerge on the advancing side, closing declines were well distributed.

There was some lightening of commitments in preparation for Memorial Day when principal markets will recess. Prospects of shortening the world conflict by a gigantic air smash at Hitler still were considered bullish marketwise but the outcome of battles in Russia, Libya and China served to temper the bidding urge to a considerable extent. Outstanding inspiration in tax and business news was lacking. There was another batch of reduced dividends but these, generally, were taken calmly.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 34.6. Dealings tapered off as trends became indecisive. Transfers of 353,900 shares compared with 433,830 yesterday.

J. I. Case was up 2¼ on two sales and Allied Chemical 1½ on one. U. S. Rubber preferred made a new year's top with an advance of 1¾. Philip Morris tacked on a point.

General Motors came out with a net gain of ⅛ while Chrysler was off ¾. U. S. Steel was down ½ and Bethlehem 1.

Modest plus marks were retained by Southern Railway, Great Northern, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber common, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott, Patino Mines, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum and Standard Oil (N. J.).

In arrears were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Du Pont, American Can, Western Union, American Telephone, Boeing, United Aircraft, General Electric, Eastman Kodak, International Harvester, United Corp. preferred and Public Service of N. J.

American Superpower first preferred, in the curb, jumped 7⅛ points on the offer of the company to exchange its holdings of United Corp. preferred for this senior issue on the basis of 3 for 1. Empire Gas 7 per cent preferred was up 3, aided by report plans for clearing up dividend accumulations were about ready. Southern New England Telephone also pushed up 3 points. Prices elsewhere in this market were relatively narrow. Turnover here aggregated 49,905 shares versus 48,690 the day before.

Bonds were uneven. At Chicago wheat was off ¾ to 1 cent a bushel, corn down ⅜ to ⅝ and hogs 10 to 15 cents lower. Cotton lost 20 to 30 cents a bale.

Listen! with Glynn

Ted Collins, the genial gentleman you hear every week day over WJSV and the Columbia network on the "Kate Smith Speaks" show and as the master of ceremonies on the "Kate Smith Hour" every Friday night, has become a dollar-a-year man.

He went to work this week for the Department of Labor and he's now known as Radio Consultant to the National Committee for the Conservation of Man Power in War Industries. In this capacity he will bring to the Nation's listeners via his seven radio programs each week messages stressing safety measures for war workers.

Said Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in appointing Collins to his new job this week: "The rapidly rising rate of accidents in industry during the past two years presents a serious impediment to the flow of production . . . The accident raids on our production plants are less spectacular than air raids, but they are extremely destructive in their effect. To combat them successfully it is necessary that every plant worker be told the importance of safe work practice and that every employer must be convinced of the urgent need to conserve our supply of trained war workers."

It seems that in 1941, more than 19,000 workers were killed at their jobs, 115,000 were mained and two and a quarter million others were temporarily disabled.

It will be Collins' work, along with 400 volunteer safety engineers of the committee, to stress the safety measures which will prevent all this.

Contract Bridge

Exciting bidding marked today's tournament hand played at six no trump, redoubled, during the recent Eastern States mixed team-of-four championship. Mrs. Bertram Lebhar and Sam Rossant held the contract hand against Mrs. Donald B. Tansill and Peter Leventritt. Sensing that there were strong cards out against her, Mrs. Tansill, after two passes, opened the bidding with a sacrifice at three hearts. Mrs. Lebhar overcalled with three no trump, and Leventritt doubled for penalties, not realizing his partner's hand was as weak as it was. Mrs. Tansill took out the double to four hearts, and Rossant's take-out of his partner's penalty double to four no trump was an effort to win a vulnerable game instead of accepting what he thought would be a less profitable penalty at hearts. But the bidding gathered momentum with this four no-trump call, and before they knew it, North and South were at six no trump.

Again Leventritt doubled and this time Rossant redoubled, thought it was not because he was certain the slam would be made. His redouble was in the nature of a "double or nothing" bid; he and his partner would take a bottom at six no trump, doubled, if they failed to make it so why not make it a clear top in the event it was successful.

A heart was opened; Mrs. Lebhar won with the ace. By simply laying down the club ace she could have claimed seven odd without further play as the club queen falls, winning eight clubs, five diamonds and two hearts for 15 tricks. But Mrs. Lebhar was a bit nervous, just as the rest of us would be playing six no trump redoubled, and she saw that by giving up the spade ace, nothing in the world would take away her contract—nothing so disastrous as three clubs including the queen, over the king-jack. She cleared dummy's two high diamonds and then led spades, letting West win with the ace, and the balance of the tricks were conceded.

"I'm sorry, partner, I could have made seven," she said at the end of the hand, "Sorry, for making six no-trump, redoubled?" asked Rossant. "I'm a very happy man."

Oddly enough, seven clubs, if bid by North, could be made, as East has no spade to lead, and declarer's spades can be thrown off on two hearts and a diamond.

Howard U. Faculty Members Talk on Radio 'Town Meeting'

Faculty members of Howard University last night made up the forum of "America's Town Meeting of the Air," broadcast for the first time from the Nation's Capital. The topic was "Is There a Basis for Spiritual Unity in the World Today?"

Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, and Doxey A. Wilkerson, assistant professor in the department of education, took the affirmative side, while Alaine Locke, professor of philosophy, and Leon A. Ransom, acting dean of the School of Law, assumed the negative.

More than 200 persons, filled the auditorium of the university chapel and enthusiastically applauded each speaker. George V. Denny, jr., founder and moderator of the program, presided.

President Johnson and Professor Wilkerson both based their arguments on the broader trends of cultural progress, while their opponents pointed outh that twentieth century science and industry have outraced the slower processes of cultural evolution, providing incompatible elements in the world's social structures.

Both sides of the forum pleaded for increased understanding and cooperation between the world's races in order to form a secure platform for the extension of universal democracy.

Wilson Glee Club Gives Concert

The annual spring concert of the Women's Glee Club of the Wilson Teachers College was held last night at the college auditorium under the direction of Pauline Mattingley and Anna Koontz, president of the club.

A chorus of 26 voices rendered selections from the works of several composers, including Spross, Humperdinck, Clokey and Mendelssohn. "America the Beautiful," by Ward, was the concluding choral number.

Among the soloists were Daphne Brandt, who played Chopin's waltz in C sharp minor, and Ellen Laubscher, who executed Leschetizky's "Octave Intermezzo" on the piano.

5 Millions Cut Off CCC Fund In Committee

A House Appropriations Subcommittee, after splitting on the question of outright elimination of the Civilian Conservation Corps, has voted to slash five million dollars from the 21 millions budgeted by President Roosevelt for payment of the agency's employes and other administrative costs.

The decision, reliably reported yesterday, would compel the CCC, one of the chief targets of Congressional advocates of economy, to effect either drastic savings in overhead costs or reduce its payroll.

The subcommittee's action, however, would make little or no reduction in the total appropriation it is expected to recommend to the full Appropriations Committee for President Roosevelt's "youth agencies"—CCC and the National Youth Administration.

Subcommittee members decided merely to transfer the five millions from CCC to the NYA for the purpose of continuing, on a limited basis, NYA's program of giving financial assistance to students. It is intended that the assistance should be restricted to college students, eliminating high schools from the program, and only to students now in school who have been receiving Federal aid.

When he sent his youth budget to Congress early this month, President Roosevelt made no provision of any kind for NYA student-aid.

The President originally asked for a total of $102,150,000 for the two agencies. Later he submitted $31,717,000 in additional estimates for CCC.

Religious Leaders and Actors Join to Boost Service Morale

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Leaders of the church and synagogue and of the stage and screen soon will be linking arms in a project designed to aid the morale of America's fighting men, and to further unity and understanding among peoples of all races and backgrounds.

The project calls for teams of Catholic, Jewish and Protestant religious workers and entertainers presenting programs in Army camps and Naval centers, and is one phase of the new department of Camps and Other Military Bases of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

The other departments are church cooperation, school cooperation, community cooperation, press, magazines and radio, and religious news service.

Each department will be headed by a full-time staff executive, and be supervised by a commission composed of members of the organization's board of trustees and specialists in each field.

Rev. A. W. Gottschall to Be Head

The Rev. Andrew W. Gottschall of this city, director of the Southern Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will supervise the camp project, whose national program will be centered in Washington, headquarters of the Southern region. The programs will begin about June 15.

Dr. Gottschall will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. William L. Darby, former executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches. Since retirement as federation official last March after 18 years' service, Dr. Darby has been serving as president of the Washington City Bible Society and local representative of the American Bible Society.

"The Department of Camps and Other Military Bases," commented Dr. Gottschall, "will be designed to offer to the Army, Navy and Air Force speakers, films, dramatic programs and other services which will aid chaplains and morale officers to present the values and objectives for which the United States of America is fighting."

The team members will live at the camps and naval centers for periods of three to five days each, it was explained. The teams will include a Catholic priest, Jewish rabbi, Protestant minister and an entertainer, or laymen of three faiths and an entertainer.

Eddie Cantor Bette Davis, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Helen Hayes and other stage and screen celebrities have already pledged their support to the project, it was learned from Dr. Everett J. Clinchy, director of the National Conference, with headquarters in New York City.

Conference to Pay Expenses

The expenses of the camp project will be met by the national conference through the raising of a special fund, Dr. Gottschall said.

Another evidence of the increasing cooperation between the theatrical and church world is the fact that the film, "The World We Want to Live In," made by the national conference of Christians and Jews, soon will be shown in leading Washington theaters.
